In the death of Ernst G. Asmus not only have we been deprived of the advice and assistance of one of our most useful members, but that rose growers of the whole country have lost one whose ambition, energy and ability made him clearly among the first in his profession in this country; one ever alert to improve and advance the interest of the rose; and largely through whose efforts the success of that flower has been advanced to the high standard it now holds.

RESOLVED, That this preamble and resolutions be placed in full on the minutes of this company, a copy of the same be published in the trade papers, and an engrossed copy be sent to the family.

HOLIDAY IMPRESSIONS.

[The following is a paper by Wm. J. Stewart, secretary of the Society of American Florists, read at the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club January 6.]

Gentlemen: In complying with your request for a few notes relative to the holiday trade of New York and Boston, I am pleased to be able to start with the premise that, notwithstanding the widespread financial depression and consequent leaning to economy in matters of luxury, the expenditures for the products of floriculture in this section during the recent holiday season are believed by competent judges to have fully equaled any past record.

Among the most significant features of the trade I would mention the evidences of steady advancement in the popularity of growing plants as holiday gifts and the higher and more uniform quality displayed in the stock offered. To what extent the cut flower industry is, by its mistakes, directly responsible for a movement which means dispossession from its most cherished holdings is not readily demonstrated, but there has been no lack of warning from year to year and it must now be evident to all that the absolute loss of confidence on the part of buyers in the integrity of the cut stock sold to them must have contributed not a little to the present conditions. However, we cannot look upon this drift of popular favor in the direction of living and growing objects, as other than natural and it is gratifying to note in the cultural improvement seen in the holiday plants a hopeful augury, for it tells us that the long-wished-for incentive to expert commercial plant-growing in this country is now to be given and thereby glorious possibilities are opened up for the future of our art in its higher phases.

The head-strong tenacity of cut flower growers in adhering to discredited long-standing practices in the storing-up and valuing of their product and the utter collapse of the flower market, in consequence, was another feature of the holiday experience in New York city. "Fortune makes him fool whom she makes her darling," and it needs no supernatural vision to see that the pickle-pot has been no small factor in the once imperious holiday cut flower's undoing. Fortunately for Boston, she fared rather better than did New York because, owing to a number of reasons, she still enjoys a good suburban and country trade in cut flowers and the outgoing shipments for the holidays and at other times tend to materially relieve and steady the market. Whether these local advantages are a permanent asset remains for the future to show.

The changes constantly going on progress so stealthily that it is impossible for us to distinguish where one condition ends or another begins, each period quietly disappearing into its successor; but in shaping one's course for the future, if we are to achieve continued success, it is imperative that we clearly recognize that the conduct of any branch of the florists' business today is a widely different proposition from what it was a few years since.

Unfortunately, thus far the habit of imitation would seem to be a more conspicuous characteristic of the American floriculturist than the attribute of originality. Instances demonstrating the truth of this presumption will, no doubt, come readily to the mind of everyone. The bringing to light, by an enterprising fellow florist, of any new or profitable line is the signal for a headlong rush from all sides to do the same thing. Production in certain fields has thus outstripped by far the demand therefor and it is plain that until strenuousness is curtailed or else diverted to other lines or some means of increasing the capacity of the market is put into operation, the troubles complained of in New York, and to some extent elsewhere also, are bound to intrude themselves with increasing frequency. So long, however, as the old operators hold out and continue to add to their productive capacity and new-comers still find room, under established methods of distribution, how can we assume otherwise than that, despite all the protesting we hear, values have not yet fallen below the point of profit. We know this—that when that limit of depression has been touched, then the penalty of imprudent over-doing must be paid and history will repeat itself in the survival of the fittest.

A WHITE MAUD DEAN.

Evenden Bros., of Williamsport, Pa., have a white sport of Maud Dean chrysanthemum which promises to be quite an acquisition. Maud Dean is a standard commercial pink and this seems to have all its attributes of clean, healthy, easy growth. The accompanying illustration shows the character of the bloom. A good sized stock has been worked up and it is proposed to put the sport on the market this spring.

LYONS, KAN.—Mrs. H. B. Smith says her trade this season has been about as last year, but prices somewhat higher.

HARLAN, IA.—Christmas trade was a little late getting started but the tone of the business was good. New Year's trade was a little better than a year ago. W. M. Bomberger thinks the florists' trade over the whole west is on somewhat higher grounds than before. The weather has been wonderfully changeable of late, one day mild, the next very cold, which no doubt accounts for more than the ordinary amount of sickness and funeral work.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Editor REVIEW:—A fine decorative effect can be made with Yucca filamentosa tops or foliage. It could be made a popular decorative article in a commercial way. It admits of long handling with little injury and can be cut in the desert districts in the southwest extensively, and can be freighted easily. It is quite generally grown in nurseries and old plants can be cut down and yet enough foliage left on the crown to not kill out the plant if cut in fall. We have cut it and set it in water in the cellars and it has kept for six weeks. Then we have taken it and kept it in a cellar storage without water and the leaves yellow on the edge, retaining a green center and still are fine in effect. We cut the plant so as to remove most of the top and then place a rubber band over the leaves near outer end, so the leaves will not drop or split off. In using them it is well to drive three or four spikes through a piece of board a foot square, and set the plant between the spikes, the rubber band down and bring out the leaves as you would wish, throwing any green thing around the base. A bank of them is quite effective and a complete change is at times refreshing to decorators. Their great keeping qualities, cheapness and ease with which it is possible to secure them, should make the trade investigate and test this as an additional decorative green.

BENEFITS OF COLLEGE COURSE.

Under the title, "The Benefits a Young Florist or Gardener May Derive from the Agricultural Course at State College," Alfred Burton addressed the Florists' Club, of Philadelphia, on January 5, 1904. While his remarks related to the value of the course at the Pennsylvania institution, they are printed for the reason that nearly every state has a school providing a similar course of instruction.

State College is situated in the village of the same name about fifteen miles from Bellefonte, the county seat of Centre county, Pennsylvania. The college grounds contain some 600 acres, including farmland, woodland, athletic grounds, lawn, etc. It was originally started as a farmers' high school about fifty years ago, but later the name was changed to State College.

Agriculture is but one of numerous courses; its mining and various engineering courses are among the best in the country. It is the agricultural courses (of which there are four) that we shall consider. These are the correspondence course, the short course, lasting from January 5 to April 1; the special course of one year, and the regular four-year college course which leads to a diploma; the degree is bachelor of science.

The correspondence course is arranged for those who are unable to leave their work to attend the college. It is the purpose of this course to give a comprehensive summary of the best and latest knowledge concerning the subjects they treat. Printed lessons have been prepared by the college and are sent free of cost to the students enrolled in these courses. The lessons are generally supplemented by books on the different subjects. Each lesson paper is accompanied by a paper of questions which must be answered and discussed before the next lesson will be forwarded. It is advisable for a student to take up two subjects at the same time, so that he may be studying one subject while his paper on the other is being corrected, thus losing no time.

The subjects most applicable to the gardener and florist which are treated of in the correspondence course are: Plant life, nine lessons; propagation of plants, nine lessons; commercial fertilizers, six lessons; insects and insecticides, six lessons; farm manures, seven lessons; principles of fruit growing, six lessons; vegetable gardening, nine lessons; and tile drainage, five lessons.

Students may enroll at any time, personally or by letter. The student's certificate of membership will enable him to secure any of the books necessary in his studies at a reduced price from the publishers. There is no charge for enrollment or instruction. Each student is required to pay his share of the expense of correspondence.

In the short course in agriculture and the special course the instruction is almost entirely technical, very little attention being given to any branch of study except those bearing directly on agriculture. The idea is to get as much practical knowledge as possible in the limited time, the student selecting the particular branches of agriculture he desires to pursue. There is no examination necessary for entrance to these two courses.

Students desiring to take the collegiate course of four years are required to pass an examination for entrance. These examinations are held in various parts of the state. The time and place can be ascertained by writing to the college. There is a preparatory course for those failing to pass the examination. No charge is made for tuition in this or any other course in agriculture. The actual college expenses are for text books and stationery, for chemicals used in the laboratory, for tools, materials, etc., used in the practical demonstrations of the studies. Board with private families, two in a room will not exceed $4.50 per week. Total expenses need not be more than $6 or $7 per week. In the collegiate course each student is required to buy a military uniform, military drill being compulsory in this course. The government keeps an officer of the United States army stationed at the college who is in command of the college battalion.

Instruction in the agricultural branches is divided into classroom work and practical work in the laboratories, fields, greenhouse, etc. Instruction in the classroom is principally by lectures with text books for references. The mornings are usually devoted to the classroom and the afternoons to the practical work.

In the special studies relating to the agricultural course the student will select those he particularly desires to follow, although most of the so-called agricultural course is directly applicable to the horticultural education the student seeks. The few branches he could omit are stock-feeding, veterinary science and animal industry.

Under the general head of agriculture, the student will receive instruction in farm manures, their manufacture, preservation and application to various crops. Also commercial fertilizers, their manufacture, composition and how to use them intelligently and understandingly. He will study farm management, implements and machinery, building material and construction of buildings, surface and tile drainage, grasses and forage plants, weeds and their eradication, different methods of plowing and preparing the ground for the various crops, and the laws relating to drainage, roads, fences, timber, etc.

Agricultural chemistry treats of how plants grow. And this, I think, is the keynote of all agricultural or horticultural education. How plants grow, how they live, and how they feed, to have a thorough knowledge of the workings of the digestive organs of the plant; to understand the chemical changes of the food as it is absorbed by the roots, transferred to the leaves and then forwarded to the different parts of the plant as it is needed to make roots, stems and flowers. If we understand this, we can work more intelligently and consequently more effectively in any branch of horticulture or agriculture we may choose to follow. Agricultural chemistry includes chemistry of the soil the manufacture and chemistry of commercial fertilizers, chemistry of fruits, farm products, etc.

The Editor is pleased when a Reader presents his ideas on any subject treated in the REVIEW. As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

In horticulture the student will be taught botany, floriculture, propagation of plants and fruits, treatment of insects, spraying for fungous diseases and insects, etc.

I have not tried to give a complete list of subjects covered in any of the agricultural courses at State College, but merely a rough outline of the work. The field covered is very broad and comprehensive. I neglected to mention landscape work, which comes under horticulture.

Apart from the actual knowledge of plants, fertilizers, etc., obtained through a course at the college, the benefit of the student's increased interest in his work cannot be overestimated. For just as his knowledge of plants becomes greater, so will his love for them increase and a workman who is in love with his work is surely worth more than one who works only for wages. From my own experience, I say to the young men, go to State College if you possibly can.

THAT LITTLE WHITE FLY.

I would like to know how to get rid of the little white fly in the houses of mixed pot plants. We have used tobacco smoke and strong spraying but cannot get rid of them. They deposit their eggs on the underside of the leaves of begonias and other plants and nothing seems to disturb them. Last summer was the first I saw of this pest, on tomatoes, and in the fall they moved into the greenhouse.

J. E. P.

In addition to the above, I have just received another complaint from a Mr. Robert J., enclosing a leaf of what may be a greenhouse hibiscus. Whatever it may be, it's a dreadful sight. The surface of the leaf is almost hidden with this little white pest. We have never been troubled with this fly and, therefore, I cannot speak with accuracy regarding its extermination or, what is better, its prevention. As it seems to be widespread there must be some who have found the way to its destruction. Now let us hear from them.

It seems to me that the hydrocyanic acid gas should and would kill it. There seems to be a dread of this gas with many people and on the part of some whose opinion and experience I am bound to respect. We all know a violet leaf is as susceptible to injury as most of our greenhouse plants and by using the gas by the following formula I have only seen here and there the slightest burn, while it has killed thoroughly the little brown aphid that is so destructive to violets and it will kill this "little white fly." But, remember, it won't kill the eggs, so the gas should be applied about three times at intervals of about ten days. The formula quoted has been used by several persons to whom I recommended it and they wrote that it answered finely.

1 quart sulphuric acid.

1 quart water.

5 ounces cyanide of potassium.

Mix the acid and water in a two-gallon butter jar. When your jars are all in place walk along and drop in the five-ounce parcels of cyanide. Don't linger over the jar, because the fumes are not healthy for anything that has lungs.

The above quantities are for 2000 cubic feet of air space in the house. Keep the house closed all night. Now, if you are afraid of burning any plants, let the above do for 3,000 cubic feet of air space. Last fall after very slightly touching up the tips of some violet leaves I cut down the quantity to one pint water, one pint of acid and two and a half ounces of cyanide to 2,000 cubic feet of atmosphere. While this strength would not injure the young fronds of an adiantum, it was scarcely strong enough to kill the aphid down in the crown of the plant.

There is a most useful insecticide sold by seedsmen that only a very few of our present day florists know of or at least use. A European florist of thirty or forty years ago would not be without it and it is made in a country where they continue to manufacture an article genuine regardless of a world wide popularity. Dundee marmalade, Bass pale ale, Coleman's mustard, Worcestershire sauce, Cross & Blackwell's pickles and Guinness' Dublin stout are the same genuine standard articles that they were fifty years ago, and so is the excellent insecticide and fungicide Gishurst's compound, sold by all leading seed houses. For spider, thrips, scale and mealy bug it is excellent and I dare say a syringing of it would make these little flies very sick.

ADVANCE IN CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

In a recent issue of an English contemporary, C. Harman Payne, the well-known authority on the chrysanthemum, writes in part as follows:

Eleven years ago, when the writer of this notice first introduced the name of Calvat to the British public as a promising French raiser of new seedling chrysanthemums, he was unknown in this country, as well as in his own. What has happened since is common knowledge, and has filled a chapter in the history of our famous autumn flower that will never be effaced. Calvat's seedlings for all practical purposes pushed out of cultivation most of the exhibition flowers that preceded them, and completely revolutionized the face of English exhibitions.

The earlier efforts of Delaux, Lacroix, de Regdellet and Audiguier, his own countrymen, were speedily eclipsed, and as for the American seedlings they were far too late in blooming to be able to compete with those sent out by the now eminent Frenchman, and so were speedily consigned to the limbo of the past. It is a record of which any raiser might be proud, and we were not surprised as events turned out to find that Mr. Calvat, consequent upon the increased demand for his seedlings, gave up a large and lucrative glove-making business in order to concentrate his whole time and attention on the chrysanthemum growing.

In turning over the pages of the current number of our contemporary Le Jardin, of Paris, we notice the portrait of M. le Marquis de Pins, a gentleman hitherto unknown to English chrysanthemum growers, as, indeed, he was to French growers a twelvemonth ago. But his is a name, in our opinion, destined to occupy a prominent position among the seedling growers of the future, if only the same facilities are given to this gentleman's products as have been given to those of other growers in the past.

We are led to this conclusion by what we saw at the recent Paris chrysanthemum show, where the Marquis de Pins staged one of the most remarkable exhibits of new seedlings in cut blooms that we have ever seen. In a large raised bed, close to the exhibits of several of his fellow countrymen who are specialists in the art of chrysanthemum culture for seedlings this amateur of only a few years' standing set up one of the most imposing and most highly developed collections of novelties it is possible to imagine. Massive, substantial looking exhibition blooms of colossal dimensions, almost wholly of the Japanese type, were set up in lots of five blooms of each variety. The effect was unique and growers from all parts of the country, besides the foreign visitors, were much interested in the exhibit.

We were told that this gentleman grows only for his own pleasure, but we since learn from the journal in question that some of these novelties have now passed into other hands and will be distributed next spring. Given a fair chance and no favor, we see no reason why his seedlings should not revolutionize the face of our chrysanthemum shows as has been the case before.

We anxiously await the time when some of these remarkable seedlings shall get into the hands of our most capable exhibition growers. Let them once be seen under such treatment and they will certainly take care of themselves. This is the kind of thing that has helped to make the chrysanthemum what it is today. Throughout its whole history there are certain well-defined landmarks, certain new departures, certain grand surprises, all of which have tended to excite, to stimulate and renew the interest not only of the growers, but of the general public who visit and patronize our shows. The present is one that even the most clairvoyant of enthusiasts could never have foreseen, and we await developments with feelings of peculiar interest.

The contest is destined to be keen, and practically has to be fought out between English, Australian and French growers, not of a by-gone generation, but by men who have only recently stepped into the arena. We dare not under the circumstances venture to prophesy what the ultimate result will be, but are content to stand by and watch and wait.

STATICE.

There is usually a great want felt during the winter months in commercial places, for a good, lively purple or blue flower for made up work and bouquets. Some of the very best for this purpose can be found in this numerous family, the flowers of which cannot be surpassed in color and keeping qualities; in fact, they can be dried and used as everlasting without losing a particle of color and retain their fresh appearance for a year if properly cared for.

The greenhouse varieties, which are mostly sub-shrubs, can be had in flower more or less during the whole season, are of easy culture and are very ornamental. They succeed well under ordinary greenhouse treatment in a temperature ranging at night from 50 to 60 degrees with a day temperature ranging from 70 to 75 degrees.

They luxuriate in a good, turfy loam with about one-sixth of well decomposed manure and a little sand and charcoal added. During their growing season they require copious supplies of water and consequently should have ample drainage. They also require a liberal use of the syringe. After the flower spikes appear they do not require so much water and syringing must be entirely discontinued.

Propagation is effected by cuttings from wood, with a heel if possible which root readily during March and April. These should be inserted in sand with a bottom heat of 60 degrees and kept rather close, shaded and moist, for the first three weeks. As soon as the roots begin to appear they should be potted into 2-inch pots, well watered and shaded.

Where a partially exhausted hotbed is available the young stock should be in it, plunging the pots in sand or ashes to keep the soil moist. Keep the atmosphere moist and shade lightly until the young roots appear on the outside of the ball, when they can be gradually inured to the light and air. During summer they can be plunged outside in an open frame, but the pots must be protected from the sun. This is best accomplished by plunging them in either moss or exhausted hops.

They should be housed before there is any danger of frost, and should be protected from the cold fall rains, as this causes a discoloration of the foliage, and is very detrimental to the health of the plant.

The best varieties for greenhouse culture will be found in the following list: S. arborescens, blue; Bourgai, purple and white; brassicifolia, purple, the best; Halfordi, a garden hybrid, blue; profusa, a variety with purple calyx and white corolla, a Halfordian hybrid.

The care and attention required by these varieties does not exceed that required by ordinary bedding stock and even if the plants do not prove a selling item the returns from the cut blooms will be amply remunerative. They are well worth a trial in any retail establishment.

RIBES.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.The Gardeners' Chronicle.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—The new Japanese chrysanthemum, Mrs. J. Dunn, is one of the best novelties of the present season. It is pure white, and in the disposition of the florets and general build of the flower is somewhat similar to F. S. Vallis. The flower is of large size, and very full. The variety will be distributed by H. J. Jones, Ryecroft Nurseries, Hither Green, Lewisham, and will add yet another to the number of first-class chrysanthemums distributed from these nurseries.

CHICAGO.The Week's Story.

A week ago Chicago wore her holiday garb; today it is a city of mourning. The great disaster at the Iroquois has brought sadness to every heart and for days has occupied the thoughts and conversation of the people almost to the exclusion of other topics. It was a stunning blow, the loss of the lives of 600 pleasure seekers in an instant of wild panic; the sight of wagon loads of charred bodies carted to the morgues; the long lines of tearful searchers for their dead; the processions of funerals. The shock was so great, so swift, that the full strength of the blow, the awfulness, the horror of the disaster have scarce been realized. It is beyond the power of benumbed brains to grasp. The victims were women and children. Scarcely a block in the better neighborhoods but what has had its funeral, many times with two hearses, frequently with three and several times with four, for whole families were wiped out in many instances. Six hundred dead! It passes comprehension. A little girl was given a party and took seven little friends. Not one returned. A family of twelve had a reunion and not one reached home. When the schools opened after the holiday vacation forty teachers were counted dead. One does not meet anyone but those who have lost friends.

A week ago the retailers were well supplied with orders for decorations; twenty-four hours later they had none; practically all were canceled. On some few orders work was already under way. Not many were permitted to be finished. When Harry Rowe went into Rector's with nearly a hundred table centerpieces and stock to decorate the restaurant for New Year's eve, he was told to deliver the flowers to the hospitals. Everywhere New Year's eve festivities were stilled and 1904 was born without a note of the glad acclaim with which the new year is ordinarily welcomed.

Then came the rush of funeral orders. It caught the market unawares. White stock was scarce. The first few sales Saturday morning cleaned things up and then ensued such a scramble as has seldom been seen. With very little left to sell, there was nothing which could be called a market price; it all depended on how badly the buyer needed the goods and how hard the wholesaler cared to stick him. There are tales of 20-cent roses, 10-cent white carnations and 8-cent valley, but such prices were paid in not many cases, had little effect on growers' averages and were ill advised at best, for when the retailers, who had not foreseen the situation, realized the condition, they at once raised their own prices, to the point where people stopped buying. By the time the growers got stock to town on the wholesalers' calls, the market was dead and the growers greatly disappointed, for there hasn't been anything doing since. The great majority of fire victims were buried with few flowers.

On Monday the market was very easy. Local trade had practically stopped. All the retailers reported cancellations on orders for weddings, receptions, dinners and other social affairs. It looks as though the market will have to depend on out-of-town orders for some time. The Beauty market has eased up in common with everything else. Tea roses hold their own better than other items for the reason that cuts just on for Christmas are now going off. Carnations have become very plentiful, with good crops in sight. Monday prices were weak and Tuesday the buyer was very critical of quality. Violets are still in the dumps; even when funeral stock was scarcest they could not be moved. Some magnificent bunches are still coming from the east. Bulbous stock is plentiful.

Various Notes.

The weather is still making the growers' profits vanish up the chimney. Bassett & Washburn's coal bill for December was a little more than $5,800, and they have no more coal in the shed than they had when they began.

John Sterrett surprised his friends in the market by taking unto himself a wife on New Year's eve.

Andrew McAdams was down town Saturday for the first time after an illness of several weeks.

The Florists' Club met at Handel hall last night to discuss the holiday trade.

The Flower Growers' Company had its annual meeting last Saturday, the only business being the election of Alex. Henderson and Walter Tonner as directors to succeed Frank Beu and Mrs. Schaffer.

Joseph Ziska, the old-time wire work manufacturer, is moving down town, to the Atlas block.

O. P. Bassett, Mrs. Bassett and her mother, Mrs. Andrews, leave January 13 to spend three months in California.

W. E. Lynch, at E. H. Hunt's, agrees with the proposition that the eastern violets will soon drive the local stock clear out of this market.

C. Pruner, of E. F. Winterson's, is again laid up with his bad foot. He is fearful of the consequences.

Harry Rowe made six pieces yesterday for the funeral of Mr. Reed, of Rand, McNally & Co., for which the total was $200.

Anton Then is bringing in a very fine crop of carnations.

Chas. McKellar is fitting his new place with fine new fixtures to carry his light supplies.

Visitors: J. W. Lyon, Belvidere, Ill.; W. Rayner, gardener for J. H. Eckels, Oconomowoc, Wis.; Harry Venn, gardener for U. G. Orendorff, Canton, Ill.

PHILADELPHIA.Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club had a fine meeting on Tuesday evening. Alfred Burton was on the program to read a paper on the benefits of the horticultural course at the State Agricultural College, and others discussed the subject. It was carnation night. C. W. Ward, of Queens, L. I., was present and spoke on new carnations. He brought along a grand collection of some twenty-five varieties. The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., sent Crusader, scarlet, and Harlowarden, crimson. L. E. Marquisee, Syracuse, N. Y., sent Albatross, white, and Flamingo, scarlet. Isaac H. Passmore, Westchester, Pa., brought Vesper, white. William Lidden showed Helen Reed, a pleasing pink. John N. May, Summit, N. J., sent some good carnations and roses. Visitors were C. W. Ward, Harry May, Isaac Passmore, Wm. Swayne and others.

Business is poor.

PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Since the Christmas holidays trade may be classed as good. New Year's day was rather light and hardly any preparations were made for extra stock, as not much is expected on that day, although some of the West End florists report some extra orders from the way-up society folks. Funeral work has been good, as several prominent people died during the past week, which made an extra run on white flowers. Still the wholesalers seem to clean up a good bit of colored stock every day and we might say that we are not suffering the usual reaction which generally follows the holidays.

In cut stock at the wholesale houses roses are quite plentiful; not a glut by any means, but enough to go around. The general quality is very good and especially Bride and Bridesmaid. Extra fancy Beauties are down to $6 and $8 per dozen. In the medium grades a great many deformed blooms are seen, the best of this stock being from $3 to $4 per dozen. Shorts are more plentiful at $6 per 100. Good tea roses are up as high as $10 per 100. Bride and Maid are most plentiful of all. Enough Meteors are in for the demand. Carnot, Gate and Perle are all selling well at from $10 down to as low as $4.

The price of carnations is still keeping up, $6 and $8 for fancy stock and all common grades bring $4. Those with rubbers on bring only $3, as they are only used for work. The market is well supplied with some fine carnations of all varieties. Violets are most plentiful and are down to $1 per 100 for the best. The demand is excellent and clean sales are reported on these. Romans and Paper Whites are very abundant and sell fairly well at from $2 to $4 per 100. Harrisii and callas are somewhat scarce and so are freesias. Tulips and single jonquils are not in the market yet. There is a good demand for valley. Smilax and all greens are in lively demand and some good sales are reported at the usual prices.

Various Notes.

A few fashionable weddings are on for this week and among the pretty decorations of the past week was one by Henry Ostertag, who did an elegant job at Faust's, which was greatly admired by great crowds on New Year's eve.

The Florists' Club meeting next Thursday afternoon will be of great importance to all the members and they are requested to attend. A fine display of new carnations will be on exhibition. Messrs. Gillis and Fillmore are both ready with their essays.

A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, Ill., was a visitor the past week, making friendly calls on the trade.

A. S. Halstedt, of Belleville, was in town the past week on his way to Springfield and reported that he will visit Chicago before coming home.

Carew Sanders has been sick for the past two weeks but from reports is improving and expects to attend the next club meeting.

Frank M. Ellis acted the part of the hero last Saturday, saving a lady from being run down by a street car. Only for the timely arrival of Mr. Ellis the lady would have been crushed to death.

Max Herzog, who has been reported very sick, is improving somewhat, also Mrs. Herzog. The last report from John M. Hudson is that he is somewhat better. The members of the club extend their sympathy and hope for their timely recovery.

Emil Schray had his hand poisoned by handling Primula obconica. The recommendation for the cure printed in the last issue, page 266, will no doubt put his hands in good shape again.

M. J. Kern, one of the oldest landscape gardeners in the city, left a few weeks ago for Mississippi to lay out one of the largest private places in that state.

The members of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which met here last week, attended a banquet last Friday at the Southern Hotel, given by the trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Covers were laid for 240. The banquet hall was beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers from the garden.

Fred. C. Weber, in company with John Steidle, visited Belleville on Tuesday of this week, calling on the trade.

Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., was a visitor Tuesday, calling on the trade. Mr. Johann says he will attend the next meeting of the club.

Bowling.

Two teams of four on a side bowled on Monday night and team No. 1 was the winner this time by the following score:

No. 1.	1st.	2d.	3d.	T'l.
J. J. Beneke	204	167	170	541
Theo. Miller	142	185	157	484
Will Adels	150	144	143	437
F. J. Melnhardt	136	135	154	425
Totals	632	631	624	1887
No. 2.	1st.	2d.	3d.	T'l.
C. A. Kuehn	154	176	140	470
A. Y. Ellison	183	139	170	502
F. M. Ellis	134	133	161	428
O. R. Beneke	146	126	171	443
Totals	617	574	642	1843

These two teams will, on next Monday night, roll on the Jefferson alleys, Jefferson and Olive streets, and every Monday until the warm weather sets in as the Blue Ribbon alleys are too cold and bowling with overcoats and ear muffs on is not relished much by the members.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

New Year's trade was hardly up to the average of recent years, although there was a good demand for all kinds of flowers and for some plants. There was a very perceptible falling off in the country trade. Cut blooms were plentiful in everything except red, the demand for this color being in excess of the supply. Prices were from twenty-five to fifty per cent lower than at Christmas. In blooming plants azaleas and begonias were good sellers. It is to be regretted that we cannot have average sales like New Year's throughout the year, rather than the spasmodic efforts of Christmas and Easter, when many customers feel that they are being defrauded and buy nothing until the following year, when they repeat the performance. But we cannot alter conditions, although we believe trade in general would be better throughout the year if it were not for the general increase in prices at the holidays.

Various Notes.

Gust. Colberg, for many years with L. L. May & Co., has purchased an interest in and assumed the management of the Swanson store but recently opened at 31 East Sixth street. His friends in the trade wish him success in the venture.

R. C. Seeger has recently put in a new refrigerator which adds very much to the attractiveness of the store, which is presided over by his daughter. He is cutting some very fine roses, carnations and violets.

N. C. Hansen has two nice houses, in which he is cutting some very fine carnations. Some old time favorites are found here, producing good crops of bloom. Jubilee and Daybreak are considered as profitable as any and are certainly producing some fine blooms on long, stiff stems. Other varieties grown here are White Cloud, Flora Hill, Mrs. Bradt, Mrs. Joost, Crane, Guardian Angel, Marquis, Triumph and Prosperity. Another season Enchantress and Lawson will be planted. A carnation support of his own invention is one of the cheapest and best I have seen. The larger house, erected in 1902, is 24x100 feet in dimensions; the smaller, erected last summer, 21x72 feet. Double strength, 18x20 butted glass is employed. Mr. H. says he would use no other. Care was taken in laying the glass and there is no drip noticeable inside. The houses are erected on a gentle southern slope and are admirably located for growing good stock, being away from the dirt and soot of the city. Mr. Hansen's reputation as a grower is second to none in the city. By hard work and careful management he has made a good start in the business and should build up a good trade.

One-half mile south of the above houses is located the extensive range of that veteran grower, Christian Hansen. I say veteran grower although he started in business only fourteen years ago and is still a young man. But the phenomenal success which has attended his efforts makes him a veteran, comparatively speaking. His principal crops are roses and carnations. With the latter his success this season has been very gratifying and he has been cutting a fine crop for several months. Enchantress, Guardian Angel, Queen Louise, Crane and Mrs. Lawson are the principal sorts grown here. The blooms were close cut at the time of my visit but there was a perfect forest of buds on all varieties, while his Christmas cut was enormous. In roses he grows Liberty, Bride, Maid and Golden Gate, planting grafted stock only. A fresh lot of 5,000 Manetti stocks for new grafting has just been potted up. Some two-year-old Golden Gates are throwing up enormous canes, promising big crops later on. In the management of this place he is ably assisted by Leopold Low and his son, Christian, Jr. X. Y. Z.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Jacob Tobler says he had a first class Christmas trade.

SALEM, ILL.—Miss Jennie Spencer has no greenhouses except a small conservatory but manages to handle a good many cut flowers during the year.

I HAVE dropped other papers in preference for the REVIEW.—C. C. WONNE-MANN, Mexico, Mo.

Vegetable Forcing.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.15 per dozen. Lettuce, 30 to 50 cents case. Radishes, $1 to $1.25 per 100 bunches.

TOMATOES.

The more forward lots, on which a full crop is now set, may need feeding to help mature the crop. But extreme care must be exercised in its application at the present time, as it does not take much to promote soft growth. Rather than try to rush things it is better to hold what you have and leave well enough alone, and if they will possibly carry through, defer feeding for another month or so until the days get longer and brighter and less artificial heat is needed. But if feeding is necessary to maintain the vigor of the plants, as is sometimes the case, especially when they are confined in boxes, I would prefer to give a top-dressing of about an inch of well enriched soil rather than apply liquid manure. A mixture of soil and sheep manure in proportion of about five of soil to one of manure would be quite strong enough.

I am convinced that a good deal of trouble with disease in tomatoes is caused through careless feeding. When the foliage of the plants is surfeited with ammonia at a time when there is not enough sunlight to counteract its effects, and only a limited supply of fresh air can be given, it stands to reason that the plants are very liable to fall a prey to disease. Careful watering also goes a long way in preventing disease. I always prefer to run my tomatoes rather on the dry side during the months of December and January. Not only to prevent souring of the soil when the roots of the plants are not so active but also to keep the growth as firm as possible. Watering is always done in the morning, so as to give the moisture a chance of drying up before mid-day and, if the day is likely to be dull, I withheld water altogether unless the plants are likely to suffer from excessive dryness. I also find that the keeping of the growth firm materially assists in the setting of the fruit, the fruit being more uniform and less subject to roughness than is the case with gross-growing plants.

Hand pollination will require strict attention these dull days to insure a good set. The brightest part of the day should be chosen for the operation, when the flowers and the atmosphere of the house are dry. Pinching should also be seen to pretty often, so that no superfluous growths are allowed to run away with the substance of the plants. If the plants are growing strong, growths will often form on the ends of the flower spikes, and if they are allowed to run it is very hard to get the fruit to set, so the best plan is to remove them as soon as they appear.

COLUMBUS, O.

Holiday trade was satisfactory, especially in the line of greens, such as trees, holly, wreaths and roping. Cut flowers appear to have fallen behind a little in comparison to former years; stock was sufficient to meet all demands. Plant trade was good, with Begonia Gloire de Lorraine easily in the lead. Pans of Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi sold well. Choice cyclamens sold only fairly well and the demand for very good primroses was poor. The begonia seems to have taken the main trade. Palms were hard to sell and ferns also, with the exception of the Boston, which is popular. The weather has been severe ever since Thanksgiving and for the day before Christmas it was very slushy, retarding trade.

THE DREER CATALOGUE.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The coldest weather of the season arrived on Sunday and zero temperature was reached in the city. It is the first old-fashioned winter New York has seen for many a year. The snow-fall Sunday was over seven inches and over a quarter of a million dollars was spent in its removal. On Monday the severe cold continued and business was about paralyzed, as were the people. In the morning the cold was intense, zero being touched in several places, and shipments of cut flowers reaching their destination here frozen stiff and useless. Trains were late, especially in the afternoon, and some of the violet shipments were hours behind schedule time, making matters very disagreeable and disappointing for those having out-of-town customers.

The market was utterly demoralized, for the weather cut down the local demand to about nothing, the only real scarcity being violets. The best specials again command $1.25, 100 in a bunch, and are likely to be worth this for some time to come, but they have to be perfect to reach this figure and the great bulk of the shipments of first-class stock sells at for 75 cents to $1.

The Christmas slump is still a topic for discussion. The lesson was a severe one. If its effects are permanent, then the experience was of more value than all the losses aggregate and there is no good reason why such a condition should ever exist again. Easter is only eleven weeks away and it seems as though everybody who has suffered with ordinary forethought may avoid such demoralization in the future.

The plantmen have reaped the benefit of the cut flower episode and if an effort is made at Easter to advance values again beyond reasonable prices, there will be a repetition of the ordeal. The days of abnormal rates have passed and they can never return.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis Mo., June, 1904.

It is noted that Alaska peas are lower in price than they were last year.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, will start mailing catalogues January 10.

VISITED CHICAGO: James B. Kidd, representing the Cox Seed Co., San Francisco, Cal.

To the question, "will the planter pay the high price for sweet corn," the answer may be given that the high price has already been paid.

THE Duke of York pea is a coming favorite with market gardeners. Its exceptional merit for market planters is only beginning to be realized.

THE Bountiful bean bids fair to outdo some of the other standard sorts. It is hardier, more prolific and, for the market gardeners' use, excels many of the others.

BARTEDES & Co., Lawrence, Kan., are doing business in their new warehouse at Oklahoma City, Okla. The structure has a capacity of 300 car loads. C. F. Eltzholtz is manager there.

JOSEPH SCHINDLER, of Jos. Schindler & Co., New Orleans, La., is in Chicago on a business trip. On his way up he visited the trade at St. Louis and from here goes to Detroit. The season is opening up at New Orleans, and some shortages of stocks have to be looked for.

THE Davis wax bean is about the scarest of wax sorts. The older varieties will have to take the place of it. Wardwell's, which is also very scarce, is the only other variety that will satisfy those who prefer Davis. When these two are sold out, it will be an even stand off with any other wax variety the dealer may have.

THE highest printed net retail prices so far noticed for a standard variety of sweet corn are $15 per bushel; $4 per peck, 55 cents per quart, for Country Gentleman. Evergreen in the same catalogue is, bushel, $10; peck, $2.75; quart, 40 cents. These prices are made by a well posted house and are likely to be close to proper values.

ST. PAUL.

Recent developments do not change the corn and cucumber situation and prices remain firm with an upward tendency. Sales of Stowell's Evergreen and Country Gentleman are reported at $10 per bushel.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington is already making inquiries and asking for offers of seeds for next season. They evidently believe that the early bird will catch the worm.

W. H. Small, of Evansville, Ind., was a recent caller on the trade. X. Y. Z.

INDIANAPOLIS.The Market.

The holiday business in this city was all that was expected and in some cases more than was looked for. Early in the week it became very apparent that good carnations would be very short and all the growers had more promises out than they could fulfill. Four bright days helped matters somewhat and most of the orders were filled satisfactorily. Roses were in better supply. There were the usual number of poinsettias and flowering plants, such as azaleas, begonias and cyclamens, and all sold well. Prices ruled somewhat higher than usual and good stock brought whatever was asked for it. Prices since Christmas have held up well, and up to New Year's they had not fallen at all. At the present writing prices are easing up a trifle and soon the normal rates will rule. Cold 19 degrees below zero on Sunday morning did not have much tendency to cause prices to drop, however. Coal piles are suffering and many growers who laid in their regular supply of fuel will have to buy before spring unless it comes very early this year. November and December have been unusually steady cold this winter. There has been no scarcity of coal this winter so far, and so there are less anxious heads than there were at this time last winter.

Various Items.

The State Society of Indiana Florists will hold its annual meeting January 12, and I understand it is to be held in the state house. There is to be an exhibition of whatever you may have that is good, so bring it along or send it. Although all the new varieties of carnations and roses are expected, yet any well grown stock of standard varieties are appreciated.

John Hartje is busy propagating his new white carnation Moonlight. He says the sales have been good.

Baur & Smith have begun delivering their Indianapolis, which is selling fast. Several large batches of cuttings in the sand show that it is an easy rooter. The

Phenomenal Success

OF W. Wells & Co.'s CHRYSANTHEMUM NOVELTIES....

At the New York Show held in November last.

W. WELLS & CO., EARLSWOOD, SURREY, ENGLAND,
Will be pleased to send their list of
NEW CHRYSANTHEMUMS, together with a sheet of illustrations of same, post free, to intending purchasers.

WE HAVE THE ENTIRE CONTROL OF ALL THE VARIETIES Raised by Mr. T. W. POCKETT in AUSTRALIA,

And the following are some of the varieties we have distributed:—

Lord Alverstone, Mrs. A. McKinley, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Thos. Humphreys, Durban's Pride, Chas. Longley, C. J. Salter, Guy Hamilton, Ernest Bettesworth, Lord Ludlow, Lord Salisbury, Mme. Herwege, Mable Morgan, Mr. T. Carrington, Rev. W. Wilks, etc.

Growers will see at a glance from what source the best Chrysanthemums are introduced, and pages of puff from us would be superfluous. Those which we shall be distributing next spring will be quite equal to (if they do not surpass) anything we have hitherto sent out.

We wish to call particular attention TO ONE OF OUR

New Early Flowering Varieties, "CARRIE"

Which is the best early yellow for flowering in the open ground the 1st of September, at which time, in 1903, we sent 100 dozen blooms to Covent Garden market, London; these were sold at 1s. per dozen and resold in a few minutes at 2s. per dozen, to be retailed at 6d. each.

The form and color are very like a dandelion and the flowers are fully 4 inches in diameter.

The plant produces an abundance of flowers with long, stiff stems and continues flowering for a long time, in fact, some sprays were sent over to the show in New York in November.

We could ship a few hundred stools at £12 10s. per 100 (these are full of cuttings), or young plants at the end of April at £10 per 1000.

We can supply 50,000 plants of this variety. We have already booked over 20,000 for England. So hurry up!

BUFFALO.

Very Cold, But Thankful.

Those who thought our extremely early winter was but a cold snap and would let up before real winter have been sadly mistaken. As King Frost grows older he grows more searching and severe and the last few days it's a terror. But we have seen much worse, so don't let us complain and, after the unspeakable afflictions that have visited a great city and wrecks and ruins in other localities, we should be more than thankful that we have health and coal to warm us and many blessings that we don't half appreciate till misfortune arrives.

State of Trade.

It would not be just the thing to mention who says their holiday business was better or worse than last year. Some were satisfied, a few say it was decidedly ahead of last year and still a few say candidly that they were disappointed. So, striking the average, it may be put down as about like a year ago.

One of our Main street florists, S. A. Anderson, went into the advertising line in quite a departure from the usual florists' venture. A whole broadside sheet was used in our leading daily newspaper. This means a great outlay and business has to respond and I understand it did. But only one or two at a time could afford to adopt this department store scale of advertising, because the retail business in our line does not exist and all the advertising you could pay for would only slightly increase the normal volume of sales. We think it is entirely a different matter with a department store, which handles something that every man, woman and child in the community is looking for. However, these remarks are not intended to discourage those who want to show such enterprise and I admire the pluck of the man who is the first to do it.

There were certainly rather more flowering plants offered than were wanted. A good lesson would be to grow less and grow them better. Palms showed an inclination to come back to their former popularity and many were sold, and so were nice ferns. Berried plants did not go at all. Azaleas, cyclamens and begonias were most in demand and handsome pans of poinsettias, but single plants of these sold slowly.

Various Notes.

On New Year's night the Buffalo Club gave its annual ball. The decorations were very handsome, went into four figures and were done by W. J. Palmer & Son.

New Year's was a bright day and the sun shown out and sleigh bells tinkled.

Rose "Quality"

Many of our customers tell us that since they commenced using Our Roses they have no more trouble with getting satisfactory quality.

Violets sold in large quantities. New Year's, once the great florists' day, has for years been little more than any other day in midwinter. Yet this year it seemed more like old times. Perhaps the old New England New Year's is coming back to us.

As you get old you are no longer a fit person to take charge of a complicated decoration. Leave it to young blood. But what a difference in the people who give you the order and what you have to put up with. There are some jobs I would like to make the bill out for in this style; it would never be collected, yet it would be a great satisfaction to let these creatures know of your sweet sentiments toward them:

SHENANDOAH, IA.—Early in the morning of December 26 fire destroyed the boiler and packing sheds at the greenhouses of O. B. Stevens, the loss being estimated at $1,500, fully covered by insurance. Considerable stock in the greenhouses was damaged but the wind was away from the buildings and they escaped with small injury. The fire started from defective heating apparatus.

KANSAS CITY.

It has been a long time since you heard from us, but the writer, having to make his own green wreathing and holly wreaths, could not write as he wished to. But I can now say that every florist in town reports business from twenty to eighty per cent better than a year ago at Christmas. Cuts at home were light and so we all had to go away for stock, and some of it was not as good as it should have been for the price.

Blooming plants in pots, pans and baskets sold well with some of the florists and some others report that they did not do anything with them. It was Christmas trees, wreathing and holly with us all the week. Everybody sold out of wreathing in that line. But the last day cut flowers had the call all day and Christmas morning it kept everybody busy getting out orders. Some report better prices for cut flowers than last year, but on an average prices were about the same.

All the florists' windows looked good, with Christmas bells and immortelle wreaths, everybody making his best showing. Business was good for New Year's day.
L. M. S.

SHERMAN, TEX.—H. O. Hannah says trade is a great improvement over last year.

A LITTLE SIDE TRIP.

Ye scribe visited a pretty establishment in Mattoon, Ill., last week, that of Mr. Schrader. His houses are in fine condition. In carnations he grows White Cloud, Lawson and Enchantress, and he makes a success of it, too. His house of Enchantress is just coming into bloom and such magnificent flowers they are that he easily disposes of them at $1.25 per dozen. Indeed, he disposes of all his cut and very often has to call for outside help. Besides his carnation houses he has roses, also some general stock and a pretty palm and fern house.

Mr. S. seemed delighted to find a customer who could talk with him of friends in the S. A. F. and I feel sure our new president's ears must have burned at the nice things said about him, and his beautiful rose, La Detroit, is expected to make her debut in Mattoon next season.

On our homeward journey we stopped off in Chicago, where we hoped to see some of the familiar faces, but time being limited, and it being Sunday, and a standing invitation to dinner calling us out in Rogers Park we were sorry not to be able to see any of our florist friends.

P. B. F.

MARION, IND.—Gunnar Teilmann says trade was probably better than ever before at Christmas. Everything sold out clean at good prices. He had a nice lot of azaleas which went well. There was a big sale on green stuff, particularly holly.

CHATANOOGA, TENN.

Karsten Bros. have recently completed a range of seven greenhouses at Bowling Springs, Ga., a short distance beyond St. Elmo and about seven miles from the city. They have a tract of six acres of land and have built and equipped the establishment in the most modern style. All the cut flowers will hereafter be grown at the new place, the city greenhouses being used for plants and display. Frank Phillips, from Nashville, will have charge of the rose growing. Both John and Charles Karsten are experienced growers and they have built up a business which required additional facilities. The city place will shortly be remodeled.

LEHIGHTON, PA.—Paul Niehoff reports 1903 a most satisfactory year with him.

DANBURY, CONN.—W. G. Kroeber has sold his greenhouse stock to H. Tomlinson, who has taken a three years' lease from J. H. Ives, owner of the houses, who will also close the store on Main street and retire from the business.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by

WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

The Market.

New Year's created no special demand for stock in this market. The only noticeable call was for violets. Last week we experienced considerable disagreeable and very cold weather which had a bad effect on business, the supply of stock exceeding the demand. Roses and carnations are steadily increasing and prices are weakening. Maids and Brides continue to improve in quality and some of the best blooms are being sold at $15 per 100. Medium and smaller roses are very plentiful and fine flowers with poor stems were offered as low as $3 per 100. American Beauties sell slowly at $5 to $6 per dozen for the very best.

Carnations are holding their own. Enchantress and Prosperity are the high priced blooms and frequently touch $10 per 100. Lawson, Hector and White Cloud are very plentiful and are offered as low as $5 per 100. Scott, Joost, and Flora Hill are offered at $3. Split and inferior stock has no value and is difficult to move at any price.

White lilac, sweet peas, mignonette, valley, Paper White narcissi, and Romans are more than plentiful. In all bulbous stock a superabundance exists, and quantities of it are left unsold.

Various Items.

The Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., at Bakerstown, and J. L. Wyland, F. H. Westhoff, A. Lorch & Co., and Charles Hoffman, located at DeHaven, are all producing some very elegant carnations. These growers all increased their glass last summer and are growing the newer varieties.

Among the few growers in this section who are fortunate enough to have their own natural gas fuel are the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., at Bakerstown, and J. L. Wyland. The rest of us are now paying 8 cents to 12 cents per bushel (76 pounds) for coal. Does this not make it quite necessary that good prices should be maintained throughout the season?

Blind Brothers, at West View, are cutting a limited quantity of cattleyas. They have a nice collection of orchids and so far have been quite successful with them. The demand for orchids here is large, and your correspondent ventures to say that the grower who will invest in and grow the commercial sorts of orchids in quantity will find it a paying investment.

The Washington Floral Co. is shipping in some extra fine Golden Gate roses.

Theo. Beckert is now cutting a fine lot of pink and white sweet peas.

The Cut Flower Company sustained a loss of $150 of shipping boxes in the recent fire of a big storage house in this city.

Almost all the growers and retail florists of this vicinity say they have experienced a prosperous year. The wholesalers and commission men report good business, but poor collections.

A very interesting meeting of the Florists' Club was planned for Tuesday night, January 5. The subject was "Roses." The following parts were assigned to its members: "Best Retailing Roses and Why," by Gustav Ludwig; "Best Shipping Roses and How to Pack Them," by T. P. Langhans; "New Roses; What About Them," by Fred Burki; "Pot-grown Roses, and How to Grow Them," by J. W. Jones; "Roses for Private Cultivation," by David Fraser; "Kicks about Roses," by David Geddis.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardeners' Chronicle.

HEATHS.—In going the round of the autumn auction sales of pot plants, one gets a good idea of what is being done in the trade. It has been suggested that heaths are not likely to be so much in demand as formerly; but from what I could gather at the sales there is not much falling off at present. In all the big heath-growing nurseries the stock appeared in the best of condition; in some instances the plants may not be set with flower quite so well as when we get brighter weather, yet many were fully equal to anything I have seen in former years. And though they were sold at moderate prices, it was evident that there is still a large trade for this class of plants. Erica hyemalis is grown in the largest quantities, E. gracilis comes next; E. persoluta alba, E. candidissima, E. Wilmoreana, and E. Caffra are all grown extensively; and E. Cavendishi is a favorite, and when well in flower commands good prices. E. ventricosa magnifica is another of the choicer sorts which the market growers now find valuable. Considering the time it takes to make well-finished plants, it is surprising that growers continue their culture of it—at the prices they now make, there can be but little margin left—but it is chiefly owing to the fact that they come in at a time when there is little else to fill the market stands.

CLUB-ROOT.—The principal point to remember is that cruciferous plants can only be attacked by the organism causing club-root during the seedling stage. When a plant is six weeks old it may for all practical purposes be considered to be immune against the attacks of club-root, even if planted in soil containing the germs of the disease. Now those correspondents who from time to time have stated that, after treating the land with gas-lime, cabbages planted in such ground were severely attacked, did not realize that they planted cabbages already infected with the disease; and perhaps they will not believe it now.

DENDROBIUM FALCONERI.—This pretty orchid is not so much grown as its beauty would seem to merit, for it is really one of the prettiest of the genus. It is usually very small and weakly till the flowers appear; then one is really surprised at the size and beauty of the latter. A plant recently seen carried about a hundred flowers.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres. N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres. F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y. Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

BANGS, TEX.—W. J. Schulze, the nurseryman, has a son, born December 18.

WM. E. CHERRY, SR., of Rochester, N. Y., for many years engaged in the nursery business, died December 29, aged 71 years.

PROF. C. S. SARGENT, of Arnold Arboretum, Boston, and his son, A. R. Sargent, have returned from a six months' botanical collecting tour of Russia with more than 8,000 specimens.

Two nursery agents, E. A. Ogden and B. F. Bonniwell, of Des Moines, have been indicted by the grand jury in Clayton County, Iowa, for "conspiracy to defraud in the sale of nursery goods."

PROF. F. A. WAUGH, of the Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., addressed the Kansas State Horticultural Society at Topeka, New Year's eve on "Trading Fruit for Money." Prof. Waugh was formerly a Topeka newspaper man.

THE fruit growers of the states just west of the Mississippi have become convinced that the railroads are grossly discriminating against them in the matter of freight rates east. Several nurserymen are members of committees appointed to seek to correct the injustice.

GREENVILLE, N. C.—Oliver A. Schlosser, 30 years old, proprietor of the Millsdale nursery and expert landscape gardener, who came to this state from Massachusetts, has mysteriously disappeared from his home. He left on December 15, promising to return in three days to meet his business associates and has not been heard from since. Some of them fear he has met with foul play, as his business was apparently in excellent shape.

PACIFIC COAST.

PLANT NOTES.

Frost.

Nurserymen all over this section of the coast are asked by intending planters many times a year whether this or that plant, shrub or climbing vine is hardy all the year and whether it will stand such frosts as are liable to visit us during the winter months. Many of our customers have spent a greater portion of their lives in the eastern states, where soft-wooded plants will not survive the winter and have to be carefully housed to keep them alive until spring time.

Generally speaking all soft-wooded plants are hardy in central and southern California and many of them in the northern part of this state as well as in Oregon. By this I do not mean that all plants that are natives of the tropics can be acclimated here, but we have made use of a large assortment of the most desirable kinds and they have helped most wonderfully to advertise our grand climate. In the neighborhood of San Francisco can be found in the middle of winter growing luxuriantly the Musa ensete, Ficus elastica, Phoenix canariensis and P. tenuis, Grevillea robusta, hibiscus in various colors, azaleas, pelargoniums and cinerarias. Further south kentias and latanias of giant size, representing many years' growth, are standing witnesses to our salubrious climate.

On Christmas day in the Pacific ocean at San Francisco we had a series of swimming matches while our eastern cousins in the same latitude were many degrees below freezing point. We had several severe frosts in January a year ago but we have had no cold weather to speak of since then. Geraniums lost a few leaves and heliotropes, about the most delicate of our garden plants, were somewhat frost bitten, but with the return of warmer weather in March or April they will come out most beautifully from below the surface of the ground and make a splendid shrub in a very short time. All roses are hardy in California and the most delicate tea varieties attain a wonderful size when planted in the open ground and on account of their freeness of bloom they are more desirable with us than the pure hybrid or hybrid tea sorts. In climbing vines all the passifloras, bignonias, honeysuckles, tecomas, etc., can be safely left outside over winter.

I am writing this on the last day of December and from my window I can count a dozen varieties of plants in the carpet bedding line, namely lobelia, half a dozen varieties of geraniums, three colors of achyranthus, echeverias and alternantheras, and unless we get some very severe weather next month they will carry over nicely with just a little of the young foliage nipped. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

This is New Year's day and although the stores have not had a Christmas rush they have kept comfortably busy. We had a very dull week after Christmas but the price of flowers has not cheapened to any extent. Most of our growers cut so closely last week that many of them have had little to offer. The weather is warm again and in a few days we will have an abundance of stock of all kinds. Carnations are good and the prospects are for a fair supply indefinitely. Fancy stock is quoted wholesale today at from 50 to 75 cents per dozen. This price includes Lawson, Prosperity, Cressbrook, Estelle and other large-flowered varieties. Crocker, Joost and Triumph average about 35 cents and smaller kinds 25 cents per dozen. Roses are still in short supply except short-stemmed Brides and Maids. Good Beauties sell at from $3 to $4 per dozen and short-stemmed flowers at less than half that price. Kaiserin and Pres. Carnot sell at 75 cents to $1 and Liberty at 75 cents per dozen. Plenty of Roman hyacinths, both in pots and as cut blooms, and valley is in good supply. Romans sell at three dozen for $1 and valley at 50 to 75 cents per dozen. Single yellow daffodils are offered in small quantities and sell at 50 cents per dozen. Poinsettias at $2 per dozen and Lilium Harrisii at $3 are in good demand. Violets have dropped somewhat in price during the past week and they can be bought for $1 per dozen bunches. None of them go begging, as the supply has been unusually short this season. Chrysanthemums, owing to the favorable weather, remain with us a remarkable length of time this season. Good outside yellows and whites can be bought today at $3 to $4 per hundred. They are of good color and substance and the indications are that they will be in season for several weeks yet.

Notes.

The Whittlesey Floral Garden, of Los Angeles, shipped a great quantity of poinsettias to San Francisco for the holiday trade. The flowers were received in good shape and the dealers handling them made a handsome profit on the stock.

Clarke Bros., of Portland, Oregon, who grow the bulk of their cut flowers at Fruitvale, Cal., have been having considerable trouble this season with their shipments. The express cars are heated at this time of the year to a degree that is not in keeping with the cool condi-

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardening World.

PRIVETS.—The golden oval-leaved privet, Ligustrum ovalifolium foliis-aureis, is one of the most popular and useful for all purposes, being bright in color and with a neat appearance, answering well when closely pruned to form a dense growth or allowed to make a specimen. L. argenteum excelsum, though seldom seen, is one of the most effective, and quite distinct from any of the others. Though not a strong grower, it forms a shapely bush, and the variegated foliage when young is pleasingly suffused with pink. L. ovalifolium argenteum elegans is a somewhat new variety with pale green foliage, edged with light gold, and worthy of a place on account of its distinct variegation and habit.

PRIMULA FORBESI.—This is one of the only two monocarpic or annual species known, which, however, may be perpetuated indefinitely by divisions of the root-stock, but it is questionable if the resultant plants will possess anything approaching the vigor of plants raised annually from seed. When raised from seed, it is advisable to pick out the flower-scapes until the plants have attained their maximum size. It forms neat little plants, producing very freely, in verticillasters, pretty pink flowers.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The holidays of 1903 have now passed into history and it is a pleasure to say that they leave nothing but pleasant memories behind them. All in all they brought forth the most satisfactory business we have ever had, with fewer kicks, etc. While New Year's trade was not quite up to what was anticipated, still it was a good increase over last year, and with the exception of long Beauties, everything was sold out by noon of New Year's day. Prices were just about the same as those in force at Christmas.

At the present time the demand is better than is usually seen after a holiday. All grades of stock are eagerly sought after and prices which are but little below Christmas, rule. The supply of roses is good, but carnations still show no signs of an increase in quantity, though those coming in are of very good quality. Violets are not doing quite so well as they have been, but still there is no surplus. Some fine Princess of Wales are to be had now and then and there is no trouble in disposing of them.

Both Harrisii and callas are very good property now, there being scarcely enough of them to take care of the demand. Romans, narcissi and valley have been doing very well. At the present time they are scarce. George & Allan, who grow large quantities of this kind of stock, have shipped thousands of each kind to Chicago the past week.

Various Notes.

Cut baby primrose is growing to be quite a flower in this city and there is quite a demand for it. It sells readily at 50 cents per 100 and the supply is not equal to the demand.

We are having a great deal of cold weather, every night the thermometer is very close to the zero mark, and the coal bill is quite a serious item.

Visitors during the past week were: H. C. Scharff, of Van Wert, O., and Henry Dreivie, of Dallas, Tex., who is home during the holidays. C. J. OHMER.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Christmas is past and florists all report a good business. Violets were a little scarce, but other flowers were enough to go around. Plant trade was very good, azaleas, cyclamens, primroses and cherry trees being the most called for.

E. S. Haskell reports the largest business on ferns and palms he ever did; says he cleaned out of everything.

E. H. Chamberlain says he had the best business he ever did.

Wm. Pierce did ten per cent better than last year.

R. E. Nofftz is gathering the fruits of his trip abroad the past summer. Dick bought heavily of bulbous stock, azaleas, etc., and is shipping them everywhere, having a good deal more than what the local market can handle.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be with R. S. Noxie, at Mattapoisett, Thursday evening, January 14. Members are to leave on the 7:20 car and by request of Mrs. Noxie don't eat your supper before going.

Thos. Meade, of Jos. Breck & Sons, Boston; John Kelley, of Geo. A. Sutherland, and Mr. Bryant, of A. H. Hews & Co., were recent visitors. C.

DES MOINES, IA.

The holidays are over and from what information I can gather there was little money made by anyone in the trade at this place.

On January 2 the Morris Blair Floral Co. filed articles of incorporation, with a capital stock of $5,000. W. L. Morris, president; R. L. Blair, vice-president; W. E. Kemble, secretary and treasurer. We have not heard how this will affect the two growers, Julius Ledig, with R. L. Blair, and J. F. Marshall, grower for W. L. Morris. J. T. D. F.

The Best Bright Pink
Carnation in Sight...
It Never Bursts.

This will be sure to become a standard commercial variety on account of its fine color, good form, size, stem and floriferousness. Nothing we have ever had on our place could touch it in blooming. Every shoot a flower stem and never off crop. Stands a foot above Lawson throughout the season and is easy to manage. The color is much brighter than Joost but not so dark as Lawson in the dark days of winter. It keeps its bright color.

Come and see it growing.

You will want to grow some of it yourself.

TORONTO.

The Christmas Trade.

Christmas over, we have now time to reflect upon the amount of business we did and the amount our neighbors did; especially do we note the reflective mood on what our neighbors did. On the whole, the flower trade of Toronto surpassed other years by a considerable margin. This is very encouraging, considering the reports of the stagnant condition of trade in some other lines, of what are known as luxuries.

The supply was pretty well up to the demand, while in some lines we noticed a considerable shortage, on single violets, red carnations and good red roses. Colored carnations were scarce all around, the supply of white being much heavier than colored. We don't think any wholesaler filled all his orders, but the retail men of the city and in fact all Canada would be terribly disappointed if they received their orders filled in full at this time of the year. It has got to be a custom to order about twice as much as you want, expecting the wholesale men to ship you a certain percentage of your orders.

H. G. Dillemath, of Dunlop's, reports his sale considerably in advance of other years, and accounts for part of this for the large advance sale of bells, fancy baskets, etc., but reports his chief shortage in good roses.

Chas. Tidy, of S. Tidy & Son, who perhaps has the most conservative trade, reports very favorably on Christmas and the sales between Christmas and New Year's far surpassed the same week last year.

J. S. Simmons reports a busy day before Christmas, having taken in $500 more than the same day last year.

W. J. Lawrence reports brisk trade in plants. He had a quantity of fine poinsettias in pans, which sold well. Also red tulips and single daffodils.

Jay & Son report their old time brisk Christmas trade, their shortage being good colored carnations.

Wm. Hill, on Younge street, who conducts an extensive business in plants and flowers, reports sales quite up to expectations, and had to refuse many customers Thursday afternoon.

Quite worthy of mention were a quantity of poinsettias sent in from the Georgetown Floral Co., which were, without exception, the finest seen on the Toronto market for some time. D. J.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

The weather previous to Christmas was cold, extremely cloudy and snowy, just as unfavorable for cut flowers to blossom as could be imagined. Flowers were scarce, especially red carnations and red roses. The supply itself was larger, fully thirty per cent or more, than it was last year on account of the increased glass area; otherwise business was about the same as last year, everything selling out close in the cut flower line.

In plants, the supply was less than last year, and was totally inadequate to the demand. There were cyclamens, primroses, poinsettias and Christmas peppers, poinsettias in pans selling the best. Boston ferns came next in popularity, with occasional palm and decorative plant sales.

American Beauties, high as was the price, were in short demand. The demand for red was persistent, soon exhausted, then customers were content to use pink and in many instances white, instead.

Shipping was especially heavy and steady up to Christmas morning, and taxed the resources of the growers.

Violets were the only flower in abundant supply, and they did not sell as freely as in former seasons. Holly was as usual very popular and the fad of hanging a holly wreath tied with red ribbon in each front window still holds sway. Every grocery store almost in town had holly to sell. Brown's seed store handled several carloads of the article, doling it out to the stores and florists as well. Very little mistletoe was sold, although it was retailed down town at 20 cents per pound. This year it was in better shape than ever seen here before, being well berried.

The shipping continued brisk through New Year's day, although not like Christmas. A brisk demand for funeral flowers kept even the short-stemmed roses and broken off heads of carnations from going to waste.

G. F. C.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.—A break in the boiler at the private greenhouses of H. G. Selfridge did considerable damage to the houses and resulted in a heavy loss on the stock.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

A JOURNAL FOR FLORISTS, SEEDSMEN AND NURSERYMEN.
FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO., 520-535 Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

Vol. XIII. CHICAGO AND NEW YORK, JANUARY 14, 1904. No. 320.

Novelties in Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bradt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

BEGINNINGS

THE WREATH.

The Principle of Design.

While the general principles of design laid down in the previous article apply to the wreath as well as to other pieces, there are some variations of detail with each. These principles simplified may be restated here. First, there must be a uniform background. Second, flowers not used in filling in should be cut with respect to the natural bend of the stem. Third, clusters or sprays should be arranged systematically according to the natural relation one to another of the flowers to be used. Fourth, flowers used for construction are, of course, not subject to the foregoing principles.

To some designs these principles may be applied with less strictness than with others; for instance, a wreath is more easily distinguished than an anchor. It is a suggestive design, while the anchor assumes to be a representative design. Give the wreath the general trend of a circle, and looseness of arrangement and detail will not hurt its symmetry and character. There are no sharp outlines or strict design lines in it.

A Loose Arrangement.

Unlike the pillow, it should not be made solid, nor must it be heavy or massive. To get into the original intention of the wreath, study the classic original, as seen in the old paintings and statues, and its adaptations in modern ornament. You will find that it consists of two branches of laurel fastened together with short ties at the broad side. The two narrow ends barely meet at their extremes.

A version of the classic wreath in modern dress appears in the first illustration. This is a loose wreath made without a frame. It is composed of two long, tapering clusters of roses, the two corresponding ends being fastened together. Cross the stem ends first. Trim off the surplus stems and foliage, tie with wire, and insert the ribbon ends without tying. Draw the tip ends of the clusters together gently and run a slender wire across under the buds, tying them together and completing the circle. The flowers that bend naturally to the right should be placed on the left side of the wreath, and vice versa. See that the clusters are long, slender and flexible.

This is a primitive wreath. We have not improved on the classic Greeks yet. If you can persuade a customer to use a wreath like this, instead of a tacky little eight or ten-inch frame wreath you have accomplished two things—saved time and unnecessary work and given real art an uplift in your community.

Wreaths on Wire Frames.

You cannot accomplish much in the way of arrangement under a twelve or fourteen-inch wreath. Discourage the use of all small designs on frames. They are neither profitable nor artistic.

For a wreath made on a wire frame, first line and fill the frame, as was done for the pillow. Cover the frame on the upper side with wood ferns, smilax, asparagus or other such material, after it is stuffed with sphagnum, only cover it well. If only medium size is used, the No. 36 wire wrapping which holds the green covering in place will also hold the sphagnum in. You now have a plain green background on top, bottom and sides of the piece, and it will not be necessary to use any flowers for construction. Green, by the way, is na-original wreath are widened and elaborated; that is, the finished design has that effect. In reality the flowers are stemmed separately and inserted as in the pillow spray of roses, to imitate the classical wreath clusters. The larger the wreath, the more freedom can be used in the placing of the flowers.

Details of the Design.

There is another variation from the original design to be noted in this wreath. The left hand cluster is larger than the right. It extends from the top around to the lower side and a little on the right side. The two clusters are bound together by a band of heliotrope over the heavy ends of the clusters. The edges of the wreath are lightened by a few sprays of swainsona and plenty of Asparagus Sprengeri, which is used on both the inside and outside edges, and once across the top of the wreath, leaving an end hanging over the edge at the right side. The strong shoots of Sprengeri are easily inserted anywhere in the frame, without stemming. The few tips of ture's own background. We would do well to use more of it for design backgrounds.

In the second illustration of the finished wreath, all the flowers were cut and stemmed according to the principles of measuring the characteristic stem, except the heliotrope, which is used as a band in place of a ribbon tie. The arrangement is a free adaptation of the simple classical wreath in the first cut. The simple sprays of the wood ferns visible about the edges are part of the background, which strayed out of place of their own accord, and give a welcome touch to the finished piece.

Widen the Frame.

When frames of larger diameter are used, increase the width of the frame beyond what the wire worker has done. Stiff sprays of green like asparagus trained along the edges widen the frame and support the flowers that hang over the edge. You may find occasionally in using flowers the stems of which are several inches long, that when the piece is set upright some of the flowers may fall too far out of place. When this occurs, lay the flowers back in place and tie near the tip of the stems over the frame with fine wire.

The heliotrope is cut about three inches long, stemmed as the roses would be, and inserted through the stem ends of the roses and carnations, down into the moss, where the two clusters seem to cross, just like a band.

Attention to Color.

The color scheme here is a predominance of pink from dark to light and finally into white. A decided pink is found in the Bridesmaid roses, shading into the pink of the Morning Glory carnation, and then into Golden Gate roses, and from that into the creamy white of the Ivory rose. The heliotrope band gives the needed contrast. The late outcries against the use of mixed colors and the fad for the use of one color are only the natural consequences of carelessness in coloring. But this is a subject so important as to demand treatment by itself.

Mounting the Piece.

If a wreath is to be mounted, there are two resources, a standard on a reach almost up to the wreath. Some should be allowed to droop around and cut off the edge of the base. Have plenty of green stemmed and inserted among the flowers. Spread out the base as much as possible. The larger the base appears to be, the more natural and easy the poise of the piece will be. This is true of all designs mounted on bases.

This is only one of the many variations of which the wreath idea is capable. Every designer should be able to invent his own with time and experience.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

McKINLEY DAY.

It is well to remember that January 29 is now known as McKinley day and that last year on that date the call for pink carnations exceeded the supply. Such is not likely to be the case this year, for the reason that crops will be at their height in almost all sections of the country, but the retailers can turn the day to good account by a little advertising to remind people that it is the anniversary of the birth of the martyred president, whose favorite flower was the pink carnation. Tell your local newspapers to remind their readers of the anniversary and the significance of the flower in the coat lapel that day. Put a sign in your window a few days before. But when the call for flowers glycerin, dissolved in one liter of sixty-two per cent alcohol, containing, to improve the odor, some oil of amber. As soon as the mixture clarifies, it is rubbed over the inner surface of the glass. This treatment, it is claimed, not only prevents the formation of frost, but also stops sweating.

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

The Sunday before Christmas S. A. Anderson, the well known retail florist of Buffalo, surprised his competitors by blooming forth with full page advertisements in the leading newspapers. For some incomprehensible reason it is not the custom for retail florists in most cities to make use of the advertising columns of the daily papers, much less to use full page spaces. But it is indisputable that the newspapers can be used to advantage and to greater advantage than any other method of reaching the people. If glove stores, candy stores and cigar stores, to say nothing of those handling a greater variety of wares, can use the daily paper profitably, particularly at holiday times, why not the retail florist? That is what Mr. Anderson thought, and after he has tried it, this is what he says about it:

"I send you under separate cover copies of three papers containing my Christmas advertisement. The Sunday Times full page cost me $100; the Morning Express, December 21, $125; the Evening News, $90. The price of a full page of space in the latter is $325, so I only took a small space. In all $315 was spent for advertising.

"To begin with, I want to say that in former years I have bought tickets for all kinds of entertainments, balls, etc., also advertised in theater programs, using some small spaces in daily papers and a number of other periodicals, making an outlay of some $400 or $500 a year. A year ago I decided that I would refuse to take tickets or advertise in any programs or periodicals whatever, and told every solicitor for them that I did not advertise at all and no argument could induce me to buy, so was prepared to spend the sum I have mentioned and still have it cost me less than I have paid for advertising in former years.

"The final question comes, Does it pay? I would say yes, it does pay, but fully believe that there is more money wasted in advertising than is made, but the fault lies with the advertiser. One advertisement that everyone will read and talk about is worth more to the business than years of advertising that nobody reads and nobody cares about. After my big Christmas advertisements appeared, people who knew me said to me: 'I guess you must be doing a large business to afford such advertising.' Others asked how I could afford it. Still others discussed the advisability of it. In all discussion the prominent fact stood out that it was a good advertisement and made people talk, and that is what I wanted.

"I do not know if it paid. My sales for December were greater by twenty-five per cent than the year before. It may be they would have been as great if I had not advertised. I might state, however, that we received orders from London, England, from the Philippine Islands as well as from a number of near-by towns, and we shipped poinsettias to New Mexico and carnations to Nova Scotia, begonias to Philadelphia, base, or an easel. For a large wreath a bamboo easel is to be preferred. For a small one, your wire worker can provide a heavy wire easel, gilded, which needs no further ornament.

If a standard and base mounting is wanted, guild the standard and line and fill the base with sphagnum, when filling the wreath frame. Spread wood ferns or any convenient green over the top of the base so as to cover it entirely. Stem stiff, strong flowers of various lengths and insert so that most of them will stand upright. Let a few comes, don't put the price too high. With a little fostering care January 29 can be made a great day for the carnation. But nothing would be more injudicious at the present time than to put prices above the ordinary.

FROST ON SHOW WINDOWS.

As an excellent remedy against the freezing of show windows, the Pharmaceutische Zeitung, a German publication, recommends the application of a mixture consisting of fifty-five grains of violets to Chicago, roses to New York and azaleas to Boston.

"Altogether I would say that it pays to advertise, but do it so people will be impressed." S. A. ANDERSON."

ROSES.

Care of Young Stock.

As soon as the cuttings have acquired roots of half an inch in length they should be potted without delay. Any dallying with this work means a weakening of the young stock, there being no nutritive properties in the sand to sustain a growth which, if allowed to start, must of necessity be of a very poor quality. The roots also soon lose that fresh and plump appearance and become brittle and lifeless. Every day they are allowed to remain in the sand after the roots are formed has a very deteriorating effect which is certain to affect the plant more or less in after life.

The soil for the first potting should contain little or no manure nor any chemical fertilizer, the young plant requiring no other sustenance than that supplied by good natural loamy soil, which must be finely pulverized, so that the young roots may the more easily assimilate the life-giving elements.

Two-inch standard pots are large enough, as these, if the soil is firmly packed, can absorb just about the proper amount of moisture to sustain the young plant, leaving no surplus to cause sourness.

The roots should be placed so that they will be about two-thirds from the bottom of the pot and leaving ample room to accommodate water at the top. The first watering should be done carefully, so that all the soil in the pot may be equally moistened. This can be accomplished by sprinkling them gently several times, taking care not to get them into a muddy condition.

These young plants should now receive the best of care and attention as it is at this stage that the least neglect will cause a check from which they rarely recover. They should be placed in a temperature of 56 degrees and given the lightest and most airy position in the house.

Those who have no regular stock house and are forced to throw out some part of a crop to make room, are frequently tempted to discard those benches which are at the time the least productive and these usually occupy the darkest and least airy part of the house. It is folly to expect young stock to thrive and do well where the older plants have failed.

OPPOSITE SOLDIERS' MONUMENT. S. A. ANDERSON, Associated.

The Page Advertisement Published in Buffalo Newspapers by S. A. Anderson.

Give them the best to get a fair start in life.

An inch of screened ashes on the bench makes an ideal bed on which to place the pots as the drainage is perfect and earth worms avoid this material so long as it is fresh.

They will require shading during bright sunshine for the first week but this should be removed just as soon as the sun ceases to shine on the bench, as the more light they get so much sooner will root action commence. On bright days they should be syringed morning and afternoon—this prevents the ravages of red spider and encourages the eyes to break freely.

Due care in ventilating and discrimination in the use of water at this period are absolutely necessary in order to produce hardy, healthy and stocky plants, the only kind that will ever repay the care bestowed on them.

RIBES.

TROUBLE WITH ROSES.

My roses for some reason do not do at all as they ought. They were planted in June, the soil very heavy. They started out very well but when cool nights in August came they got a check in some way, which gave them a bad dose of mildew. Since I got them out of this they have never worked as they should.

Thinking the soil was too poor I gave them a light mulching the first of September, but it was of little benefit. In October they started with a good crop and I gave them wood ashes, also lime about every fifteen days. I slake the lime to a powder in a box, scatter it lightly on the bench and water it in, right away. Is that right? The water is pretty hard. I gave them another mulching last month. Now the plants are large and I have cut a fair crop, but in general the stems are short and weak, also a lot of blind wood. The plants seem very hard and the wood is turning brown. The new breaks are a pale green and in some places the buds don't open properly. The foliage is a dark green, healthy color. The soil seems to be all right. The houses are run at from 55 to 60 degrees at night, 70 to 74 by day and freely ventilated. I send a sample plant. What is the trouble? E. F. H.

The wood and buds reached me in such a withered condition that it was practically impossible to detect any disease, even if it had been present, so that I must rely entirely on the data as given in the letter. The conditions described can result from various causes. While the general treatment seems to be along the right lines, there is without doubt some special cause which produces such results. The fact that the foliage is of the proper color is evidence that the system of watering is not at fault.

The excess of blind wood can be accounted for in two ways; viz., by using deteriorated stock, which is a most fruitful cause. That this is the cause is partly confirmed by the young growths being of such a weak color. This would also account for the buds failing to properly develop. Improper cutting of the flower stems will also cause blind wood; where too many eyes are left they usually are too weak to produce buds.

The correspondent fails to mention the component parts of the mulch. The condition of the Bride buds as described would lead to the inference that there must have been an excess of ammonia in the food supply. This is easily produced by using bone and lime in combination or by using horse manure in the mulch. As regards lime it may be possible that there is already an excess of it in the soil and as the water is hard there may be an excess there also, so it might be well to be careful in the use of that material.

There is always danger in the use of wood ashes, they being of such a concentrated nature that the plant is not ready at all times to benefit by their use; use them sparingly, especially on weak stock. Be sure that the soil on the bench moistened to the bottom and not merely on the surface under the mulch. Try a gentle stimulant in the form of liquid made from fresh cow manure. Make it rather weak for a first application and keep a close watch on the result; if this is favorable, slightly increase the strength. Apply every ten days until the spring growth commences, when it can be used safely once a week. RIBES.

TOO WARM AND TOO WET.

I send you a sample of Bridesmaid roses, foliage and buds, just as they are produced in a night temperature of 62 degrees. I have treated them fairly. What is the trouble? J. R. E.

The plants from which the wood and buds were cut are evidently in such a condition that they are beyond hope of effecting a recovery in time to be of any profit this season. The leaves bear evidence of having been produced in too high a temperature, accompanied by irregularity in watering. By this I mean they have been allowed to become too dry at one time and then frequently over-watered; 56 degrees at night, and ranging from 65 to 75 or 80 degrees, according to the intensity of sunshine, is the proper temperature for Brides and Maids. Propagating from such stock would be courting failure. RIBES.

fern dishes than plumosus. We are asked frequently to fill a fern dish entirely with it. The customers know how well it lasts in the uncongenial environments of a warm room. And as for Sprengeri, we have not yet heard of its being overdone anywhere. These plants are advertised at a very low figure, but you can raise them as cheaply as anyone. I seldom blame the seedsman when failure ensues with the sowing of very small seeds, such as calceolaria, begonia, etc., but if you keep the flats in a temperature of 60 degrees and these asparagus seeds don't come up you can rest assured that you have got hold of some ancient seed, that perhaps was taken into and out of the Ark or passed through the same ordeal as poor Jonah.

Storing Poinsettias.

Poinsettias seem to have been very generally grown this winter; for many years they were not. They are about over now and those cut down or unsold should rest beneath a warm, dry bench till the middle of April or first of May. Lay them down and, if grown in pots, leave them in the pots. If grown on the bench put them in flats with some dry soil around the roots, but let root and stem get as dry as a warm house and the entire absence of water will make them.

The Easter Plants.

Easter is early this year, in the first days of April. This suits some things and some people; for the man who wants space for his summer flowering plants it is a blessing. You will have to look over your Easter azaleas now, and again six weeks later. All the fall imported plants have an inclination to send out a growth, even if kept cool, and if that growth is allowed to get a start the flower bud will perish and you will have a very healthy looking azalea without any flowers. These growths must be pinched or rubbed or pulled off. It's a little early yet to say anything about the azaleas being just right in bloom for Easter, but a reminder will do no harm, to the effect that while some varieties such as Van der Cruyssen will be in time for Easter if kept at 40 degrees for the next six weeks, later varieties can be kept 5 or 10 degrees higher. Usually azaleas are rather early for Easter, so this year it will not be much trouble to be right.

Seldom do we have Spiræa (Astilbe) japonica in flower too soon. Get it into the pots and if you are crowded it is just as well beneath a bench for three or four weeks, or until the leaf growth is started. I have heard friends and neighbors say they could force them in six weeks. We have not been able to do it, and believe they are better brought along without such violent forcing. They are by no means a very profitable plant, but we have to have them.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Starting the Bedding Stock.

There is no time during winter when conditions for propagating will be more favorable than now and for the next eight weeks, for you will be keeping a good fire heat and the atmosphere of the houses will be cool. Many plants that are ignored just now will be of importance to you in the spring, and it is time that some of them were propagated. Several very useful plants you lifted from the ground in September and now cuttings can be taken and the old plants thrown away. Among these are the acalyphas of several kinds; Abutilon Savitzi, pyrethrum, ageratum, lobelia, salvia and others that can be managed that way.

While it is not well to get your benches loaded up too early in the season with these bedding plants, it is time to get rid of the old plants and the young plants propagated now, if potted up and kept growing, will give you lots of cuttings for later propagation. Many of our soft-wooded bedding plants, unless they are kept shifted, which would be very unprofitable, will soon spoil and be shabby just when you want to sell them. So try to have enough plants that will give you lots of cuttings later on.

Sowing Seasonable Seeds.

There are not many seeds to sow just now, yet there are some. If you want to renew your smilax bed, then sow the seed now. Sow in flats and cover the seed with an eighth of an inch of light soil, and a few thousand seedlings will take up very little bench room for the next two or three months. I firmly believe in planting smilax every year and planting good, strong 3-inch plants about the first of July.

Starting Cannas.

Canna seed can be sown now. Perhaps you have all the roots you want and if so you need not bother with seedlings, but sometimes we sell out so clean that we are short of stock in the fall. I don't know of any better way to make the "Indian shot" grow than to soak the seed in hot water for twenty-four hours and then, with a strong, sharp knife, slice off a small piece of the hard shell and sow in drills in the propagating bed. Cannas come largely true from seed. I mean by this that if you buy of a reliable seedsman canna seed saved from Antoine Crozy or Tarrytown, your young seedlings will turn out to be those varieties.

While on the subject of cannas, let me remind you to keep an eye on the roots that are resting beneath, perhaps, a carnation bench. If you laid them on boards they will be all right, but if on the damp ground they are sure to start growing, which is a great mistake and a loss, and moving them will check the roots getting a start.

Asparagus Seed.

Those very useful plants Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri can be sown now or as soon as you can get fresh seed. There is nothing more useful for CARNATION NOTES—EAST.New Varieties.

The new introductions will soon put in an appearance and, aside from being prepared to receive them, it must be remembered that not only are they strangers, but having endured a journey under more or less trying circumstances, a little extra thought should be given to their possible needs.

If frost has touched them in the least, do not be in too much of a hurry to unpack them, but let them thaw out gradually without the use of artificial heat. Your judgment will tell you that a bath in cold water is of great assistance in the case of frozen plants.

When unpacking examine each bundle and if dry or likely to become so before being put in soil, dampen such as may suffer. This does not necessitate unrolling every package, thereby disturbing the contents, for in passing them through the hands one can judge by the feeling and weight the degree of moisture within.

You will notice a difference in cuttings coming from a distance and those rooted on your own place as regards their ability to take hold of the soil. This is not surprising when we consider the various influences which may account for it and while discussing the question let it be understood that it is not my purpose to criticize the methods of our worthy originators.

Cuttings produced on plants grown for that purpose alone, are inclined to be somewhat soft and three or four weeks' sojourn in the sand does not improve this condition. The handling incident to packing and shipping cannot but injure the extremely delicate roots to some extent. Exposure to extreme changes in temperature and delays in transit must be admitted to be detrimental to young stock.

Above all, I believe from the fact of their being strangers to the different soil, water and air on which they must subsist, some little time must elapse before they get settled down to the real business of growing. Consequently we must have patience with our new charges. Study their general make up, always ministering to their wants with an eye to the production of a sturdy growth. Under no circumstances put them into rich soil and grow in a high temperature with the idea of obtaining a cutting from the top, but use fresh soil and handle with a view of building a strong foundation.

Any attempt at doubling one's stock should be dismissed from the mind as beneath a true grower. A mere novice knows that overpropagation is weakening in its effect, so what excuse can the professional gardener offer as a reason for propagating from young plants that in all probability have undergone a strain due to the limit having been reached if not exceeded? McGOWAN WITHOUT BUDS.

I send you a sample plant of our McGowan carnations, a large proportion of which are like this one. You will note that the growth is strong and apparently healthy, but that the plant produces no buds. We have given them cool treatment, 40 to 45 degrees at night, but other varieties do not show this absence of buds. What can the trouble be?

G. W. F.

I cannot tell you exactly what is the cause of your McGowan carnation plants refusing to produce buds, but I have often seen just the same trouble with other growers and especially among McGowan. Last fall, while visiting a grower in a neighboring city, he showed me a bench of McGowan and among them were several such plants, and he told me his experience with it. Several years previous they had noticed a few strong growing plants among the others about propagating time and, thinking nothing of the fact that there were no buds on them, they took every good cutting they could get from those plants. The next year the same thing happened, but by the third year they noticed that they had more budless plants than they had of plants that would bloom. That year they selected their cuttings from plants that bloomed well and now they are almost free from it again, but they expect to discard McGowan this year, anyway. That is what I would advise G. W. F. to do. There are several white varieties on the market now that will make you double the money that McGowan will make. I don't know what you would want with McGowan if Queen Louise does well for you. We don't consider the two in the same class at all. No more than we would Tidal Wave and Lawson. But 40 to 45 degrees is rather too cool to grow carnations profitably; 48 to 52 degrees is much better. You will get many more blooms and they will be just as good in quality. A. F. J. BAUR.

A NEW SYSTEM OF IRRIGATION.

C. W. Skinner, a large grower of vegetables at Troy, Ohio, has devised and patented a system of irrigation whereby he can make it rain when he wishes, where he wishes and as often as he wishes. He can make it rain Paris green, Bordeaux mixture or fertilizers and on frosty nights he makes it rain warm water to save his plants. The Livingston Seed Company installed this system of irrigation last August and say that it has given them very good satisfaction, saving them a great deal of stock which would otherwise have been lost on account of the severe drought. It is also used by a number of nurserymen and merits the attention of anyone who is in a position to need to water his stock in the fields.

The idea is shown in the accompanying illustration. The field is piped with lines of ordinary water pipe, the size varying according to the length of the lines intended to be used and a simple connection with the city water mains or with the elevated tank affords the necessary pressure for watering. Mr. Skinner has himself used this device for several years in watering an eleven-acre market garden, using runs of pipe 600 feet long. He side so as to throw to greater or less distance. Not only can water be used, but insecticides or fertilizers may be pumped through the pipes with equal facility.

PITTSBURG CLUB MEETING.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its monthly meeting on Tuesday evening, January 5, and notwithstanding the arctic weather (15 degrees below zero that morning) there was a good attendance. One new member was elected and one proposed. The committee appointed to attend to the grievance of the retail florists against the undertakers didn't report, because the chairman who was chief kicker had to stay home to mind the baby. He has a little kicker himself now; it arrived a few days ago.

It was the night for nominations of officers and every one of the present officers was renominated unanimously for another year and as the club is in a healthy condition and has an excellent secretary it increased his salary.

It was rose night and we had a fine program. John Cook, of Baltimore, sent his three new roses, No. 3, white; No. 138, pink, and No. 150, red. When they arrived they were pretty badly frozen, but the Cut Flower Co. put them in the cellar and had them partly thawed out before the meeting. Then we took out the thawed out blooms and left the others in the box, covered with paper, and placed it outside in the vestibule. The janitor, not knowing anything, came along and finding a lot of broken boxes and papers, quietly piled the whole into a heap in the alley and set fire to them.

unpacked and put into dishes or sprinkled over with water, but instead remove the cover from the box; place paper over it and put the whole into a cold, dark cellar to thaw out gradually.

Mr. Breitmeyer and some Canadian people sent roses, but on account of the delay on the railroad caused by the snowstorms, they did not arrive in time for the club meeting.

Our home-grown Bride and Bridesmaid roses were magnificent, the finest coming from Fred Burki's place at Bakerstown. Tom Ulam said more Bridesmaids were used and sold in Pittsburg than, probably, all other kinds combined, and next to it Brides. Mr. Burki went into detail regarding many new roses he had grown, but Bridesmaid, Bride and American Beauty are his stand-bys. Gus Ludwig corroborated the same as regards market sorts, but they are getting some fine roses of other sorts, as Sunrise and Canadian Queen, from Canada, that sell on sight. Randolph & McClements are using La Detroit with esteemed effect in aristocratic decorations. The Blind Brothers are growing fine Meteors.

John Jones described how pot-grown hybrid perpetuals are grown at Phinns Conservatories and D. Fraser told how he grows roses in winter in a private greenhouse.

Mr. Langhans gave us a very pertinent lesson on how to pack cut flowers for sending a long distance. He uses light wooden boxes and lines them with many folds of common newspaper, then a lining of wax paper in the inside next the flowers. Use lots of paper, in the winter to keep the cold out and in summer to keep the heat out. Grade the roses. Lay them in single rows of ten, heads close together, and always pack the blossoms dry and never sprinkle them over with water. Over these flowers place a strip of wax paper and pack again, layer after layer from both ends. Here and there over the flat stems of the packed roses put in a one-half inch square cross cleat wrapped around with tissue paper and with a small nail-pin in each end to fasten into the sides of the box. This keeps everything snug and tight. Between the several layers of roses put sheets of paper. Never jam the blossoms up against the ends of the box, but rather leave an inch or so of space and into this put crumpled tissue paper. With three little pieces of board deftly nailed in the middle of the box at the top, make a trough for ice. Lap all over with the paper from the sides, nail down, address and forward. The address label should be one agreed upon with the express company; further, they put another label on each box they send out and on it is marked the time when the parcel is delivered to the express company.

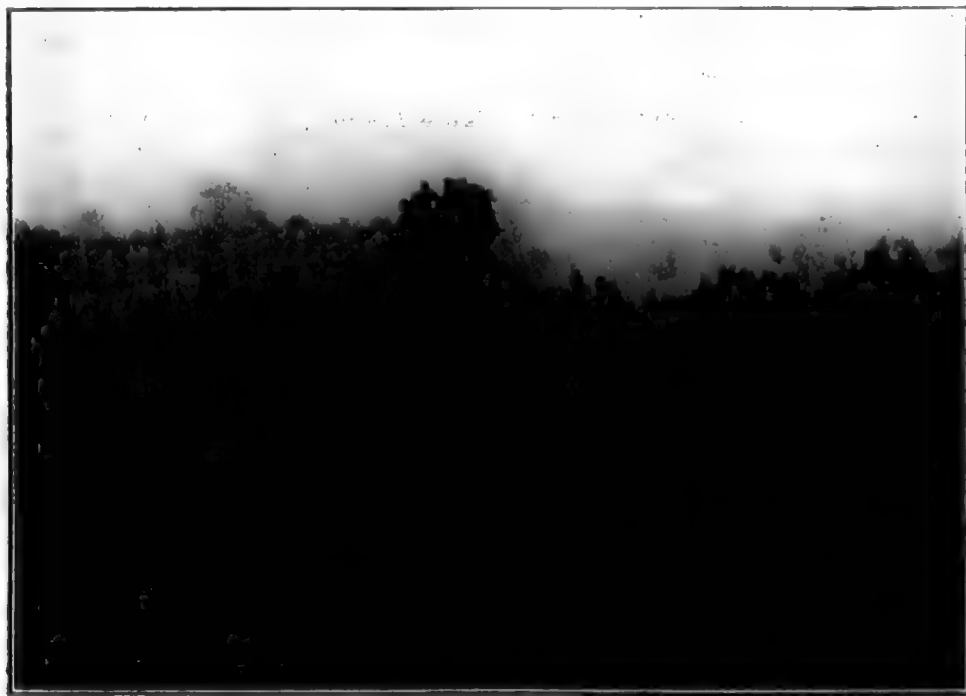

AN OPPORTUNITY.

ED. REVIEW:—We need, and must have, a first-class florist here. We have a State University city of 8,000 people, and thousands of dollars' worth of cut flowers and plants are brought here every year. Can you and will you put us in line to find a good man?

has found it best to use 1½-inch pipe for one-third the length of the line beginning at the feed pipe end, with the next one-third in 1¼-inch pipe; the next 100 feet in 1-inch pipe; then sixty feet in ¾-inch and forty feet in ½-inch pipe. This gives him a uniform spray for the entire length of the line. Smaller pipes are, of course, used for shorter lines. There are a great many ways in which the apparatus may be installed. The pipes may be placed close to the ground or elevated any distance, as the circumstances seem to make advisable, and they may be arranged to turn from side to

When we sent out for the remainder of the Cook roses and found them the ashes of a bonfire, great was the janitor's pain and our consternation. But these roses are very beautiful indeed. The white ones were big, full, magnificent and on stiff, leafy stems. The pink has beautiful buds and is reported as being very prolific. The red was looked upon with much favor as a substitute for Meteor, where Meteor cannot be grown successfully.

SCALE ON FERNS.

We mail you a frond of Pteris tremula on which there is some scale. We have tried Rose Leaf Extract. Kindly tell us what they are and how to get rid of them. H. H. C.

An examination of the fern frond referred to proves that the insects in question are the common turtle scale, also called large brown scale, one of the pests to which ferns in general are subject, and a pest that spreads very rapidly among these plants, especially those that are grown in a warm greenhouse. This insect may be kept down by repeated doses of a solution of the tobacco extract, the best method of applying the treatment being to dip the plants in the solution and then to lay them upon their sides to drain off. But it is impossible to eradicate the insects by one or two doses, from the fact that the solution of tobacco can only be used of moderate strength without injuring the ferns, for example, one part of the Rose Leaf Extract to 100 of water.

GLADIOLI BY THE ACRE.

Before the recent session of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society, Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., read a paper on the gladiolus, from which the following is an extract:

It may interest you to know how large fields of gladioli are grown. The ground is well plowed in the autumn, re-plowed, harrowed, drilled and fertilized in the spring, ready for the planting gang, which on a plantation of seventy acres requires about 100 men, boys and girls. The rows are drilled thirty-three inches apart, into which the bulbs are strewn, after which the back-aching task of setting takes place. Every bulb is set by hand, two, three and four inches apart across the drill, according to the size of bulb, then covered to a depth of from three to four inches of fine soil.

In addition to the bulblets, the growers' stock in trade consists of the small cormels, which are formed among the roots and about the new-grown bulb. These cormels are sowed in rows twelve inches apart, and must be kept free from weeds by hand. The first year from these are produced small bulblets, which must be again planted another year to secure a marketable bulb. In most strains few of the cormels bloom, but in the new hybrids many show a fairly good spike while forming the bulblet.

Before the planting of this acreage is completed the early spike begins to show and horse cultivators are started and are kept in motion day after day until buds begin to appear, after which the soil is not disturbed except to remove scattering weeds by hand. Some seasons the cost of cultivating is much increased by the necessity of hand weeding, which is occasioned by the interruption of horse cultivation by excessive rains. The ground is never worked when there is surface moisture. The last season was very aggravating in this respect.

The most interesting but perplexing part of the work during the blooming season is the classification and roguing. The most of this is done by girls who are constantly in the fields, except when prevented by rains.

To strengthen the growth of the bulb is one of the most important operations and one which excites the most comment from visitors. This is done by the removal of the bloom after a few of the lower flowers have withered. During these cuttings we are besieged with visitors, who carry away these flowers by wagon loads and deplore the seeming waste of the quantities left on the ground.

Harvesting is the most simple but tedious part of the grower's work. Plowing on either side of the rows loosens the soil, from which the bulbs are lifted by the spike, which is immediately clipped close to the bulb, after which the bulbs are spread upon sheets to cure before storing in the houses, where, during the winter, the roots are removed and the stock is sorted, sized and counted for market. In shipping, packages are lined with several thicknesses of paper for frost protection and the bulbs are packed in planer shavings, so as to prevent bruising in transit.

I have many times been asked, how many bulbs could be grown upon one acre. Practically the only reply which could be made to this question is, from 100,000 up to 1,500,000, depending entirely upon the size of stock planted and the distance apart.

PIPING FOR STEAM.

I propose to enlarge my greenhouses and replace my hot water boiler with a steam boiler. It has been suggested to me that I could leave my 4-inch pipes or a part of them and use them in place of putting in an entirely new system of pipes. Would this be desirable or practicable? Part of the pipes are cast iron and part boiler flues cemented together. The houses connected run north and south, north ends protected, south gables glass, with eighteen inches glass on the east side. With the proposed addition there will be: House No. 1, 12x70, east bench for roses or bedding stock, west bench for cuttings. House No. 2, 17x70, roses. No. 3, 12x80, roses or cuttings. No. 4, 25x90, carnations. No. 5 runs east and west from the shed, across the ends of the others, 12x65 feet, and is used for palms, begonias, etc. How should these houses be piped for steam? C. J. B.

It is not practicable to use either the 4-inch cast iron pipes or the cement joined boiler flues for steam. The expansion is too great. The calked joints will not stand it and, in the second place, the radiating surface, if the same piping were to be used, would be too great.

For steam under five pounds pressure house No. 1 will require a 2-inch riser running from front to rear under the gable and at the south end divided and made to distribute into five 1¼-inch pipes on the west side under the bench and four on the east side. House No. 2 will require practically the same piping. It is somewhat less exposed and can be heated by five pipes under each side bench, if a two-bench house or if a three-bench house by three pipes under each side bench with four pipes under the middle bench. This house should also be provided with a 2-inch riser running from end to end, same as in No. 1. House No. 3 will be sufficiently heated by a 2-inch riser divided at the south end to return under the two side benches in four 1¼-inch pipes under each bench. House No. 4 will require a 2½-inch riser distributing into fourteen 1¼-inch returns under the benches. A satisfactory arrangement for these will be four pipes under the west bench, five under the east bench and five under the center bench. House No. 5 will require a 2-inch riser and five 1½-inch pipes under each of the side benches. This house is somewhat more exposed than any of the others and will require more pipes in consequence. The piping specified should maintain a temperature of 70 degrees with five pounds pressure on the boiler during severe weather, provided the sides of the houses are not more than four feet high and are well constructed.

Coal Consumption.

ED. REVIEW:—We notice in your paper the item on the amount Bassett & Washburn paid for coal last month. It is a source of satisfaction to hear how much coal others require to run their places. We have often wondered if we were not using more coal in proportion than our brother florists. We would like to ask through your valuable columns to hear from others as to their coal bill for December, giving the amount of glass and how heated.

We have 42,000 square feet of glass, all lapped, well bedded in putty, size of almost all our glass 16x18. Our outside walls are in good condition and buildings generally in good shape. We have two tubular boilers, one sixteen feet by sixty inches, with forty-four 4-inch flues; the other fourteen feet by forty inches with 3½-inch flues. We use the Morehead steam trap to return condensation. Our boilers are on top of the ground. We would like other opinions as to which is best, to use the steam trap or to have a tank for the condensation and use a pump. We burn slack coal at $1.75 per ton. Our bill for December was a little over $400 and for November $267. We would be glad to hear from others to see if we are burning up more money than our brothers in the trade. Also will someone tell us if our system can be improved?

Sports of Mrs. Lawson.

ED. REVIEW:—Seeing in a recent REVIEW where D. C. Noble, of Columbia City, Ind., asks for the address of a gentleman who has a light pink Lawson, stating that he (Mr. Noble) also has one of the same color, I suppose these are both sports from the Lawson. Some time ago I saw in the paper where somebody else has a white sport of the Lawson. Now, if this is correct, the Lawson must be a regular sporter, so to speak, as I also have a sport from it, only different in color. The sport I have is white, flushed with delicate pink, shading away to a slight scarlet. It is a much larger flower than the Lawson alongside of it and seems to be a good bloomer, as I already have the second flower on it. One is just closing up and the other just opening. Both are on the Lawson, on two different branches. Three other branches have the Lawson, also in full bloom.

Heating Problems.

ED. REVIEW:—The able paper of William Scott on heating is one that should be read by all in the trade. Heat is the life of our business and heating is a subject to be often thought about and discussed. I have seen many systems used, mostly fixed and arranged by inexperienced men, but I must say with

Mr. Scott that the best house that I have ever worked in and that gave the best satisfaction with the heating was one installed by Hitchings over twenty-five years ago.

I think we will yet go back to the old four-inch pipe with just one return to each flow. By many experts we are told to have three or four returns to each flow. I have one house so arranged, but I find that the lowest pipe is always colder than the others, which shows that the circulation is not right.

If a perfectly level flow is ideal, why not run it so? There will be practically little or no water left in the pipes when wishing to empty the system. If the water presses back on the warm water in the up-hill system it also presses back on a rise of two inches, although to a less extent. Why would it not be better to have the flow perfectly level, or with just two inches fall and return with two inches fall? The pet cock could be placed on the highest place above the boiler.

Before reading Mr. Scott's paper I was thinking how I could install a good heating system and if it would be a good plan to have only one return to each flow. Now, as Mr. Scott says it is the best way, I will carry it out.

Now another question arises: Will four two-inch flows and four two-inch returns give as much heat as four two-inch flows and eight two-inch returns, using the same boiler and firing the same, as the water in the lesser number of pipes will be hotter and can be maintained at a higher temperature? Will one foot of radiating surface at 150 degrees give off as much or more heat than two feet at 75 degrees? What I am anxious to find out is if it is better to have fewer pipes at a higher temperature or more pipes at a lower temperature in very severe weather, say 20 degrees below. In a house twenty feet wide would it not be better to have some of the flows and returns in the center?

I hope this will bring out a number of opinions and experiences. F. MCG.

A Word for Adonis.

ED. REVIEW:—We want to put in a word for Adonis. Considering the lateness of the delivery of that variety last spring, and a few other mishaps it evidently had with the disseminators the previous season in the field, we think it has done very well, indeed. At any rate, this is the impression we have of it now, judging of the behavior of the plants we have been able to save.

Since housing the first batch of about 300 plants in August, and about 500 September 20, we have scarcely lost a half dozen plants and, while the growth has not been rank, it has been uniform and healthy, and seems "fast" enough to become a very profitable variety from early struck cuttings, not later than the last of February. It easily surpasses any scarlet on the market now, and we look for a very decided improvement next season.

H. WEBER & SONS.

PRESSURE ON TWIN BOILERS.

Will some one tell me how to arrange two boilers for low pressure steam so that they will work together harmoniously. We have two boilers twinned without checks in the main returns. Whenever one boiler is fired a little harder than the other the water is driven out of one and into the other. How can a uniform line be kept? They are on the same level.

F. W.

F. W. can remedy his difficulty to some extent by placing swinging check valves in the yoke at the rear of each of his boilers, which connect with the main return. If the returns are high enough so the yoke on the return can be placed on top of the shell of the boilers the difficulty can be remedied by raising the yoke to this height and placing swing checks in it, as before stated, or by tapping the boilers on top and feeding the return water through pipes which discharge inside the boilers on top of the flues below the water line instead of being connected with the blow off on the underside or at the rear of the boilers. In any case it is advisable to use a check for each boiler.

BEST SWEET PEAS.

The committee of the National Sweet Pea Society of England decided that an audit of the varieties of sweet peas staged at its exhibition to be held in London on July 15 and 16 should be taken, with a view to discover what varieties were the most popular. It is rather surprising that in the first prize collections no less than seventy-one varieties were shown among a total of 216 bunches, whereas there were only ninety varieties in the total of 991 bunches staged in the whole competition. This points to the conclusion so many seedsmen have arrived at, that the varieties catalogued might be very materially reduced, and that among those in commerce there are a great many that have long since been superseded.

The following is the selection made as the best of each color: Salopian, crimson; Prince of Wales, rose and carmen; Lovely, pink; Miss Willmott, orange shades; Duchess of Sutherland, blush; Lottie Eckford or Maid of Honor, picotee edged; America, red stripes; Princess of Wales, purple and blue stripes; Hon. Mrs. E. Kenyon, yellow and buff; Jeannie Gordon or Triumph, bicolors; Navy Blue, blue; Dorothy Tennant, mauve; Duke of Westminster, violet and purple; Black Knight, maroon and bronze; Lady Grizel Hamilton, lavender; Dorothy Eckford, white; Gracie Greenwood, fancy; George Gordon, magenta; Coccinea, cerise.

A NEW RED ROSE.

We rosarians have been patiently waiting, says a writer in the Gardeners' Chronicle, for the red ever-blooming rose which we could put side by side with Hon. Edith Gifford, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, Madame Ravary, Killarney, and so forth, and to us it has come in M. Pernet-Ducher's new Etoile de France. First of all it is bright, brilliant red, as red as Fisher Holmes; and, secondly, it is even more fragrant than La France, which, partly for this abounding and delicious quality, we suspect is one of its parents. It has, too, on its petals a bloom which at once suggests Victor Hugo. Are these two roses, then, its actual parents? We had better not pry further into M. Pernet-Ducher's secret, but be content with thanking him for one more of the many benefactions his skill has bestowed upon our gardens. Looked at critically, it has little, if any, yellow in its composition; while, on the other hand, there is just that suggestion of blue which marks La France. This is its only weak point, for it comes to us warranted by its raiser to be at once hardy, vigorous, and continuously in bloom.

BENEFITS OF A COLLEGE COURSE.

One of the subjects up for discussion at the Florists' Club of Philadelphia at the January meeting was "The Benefits a Young Florist or Gardener May Derive from a Course at His State Agricultural College." The following are the remarks of Francis Canning, formerly gardener to S. T. Bodine, Villa Nova, Pa., now at the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass.

Apart from the educational advantages of a collegiate course in a state agricultural college, many special features usually obtain in them which will especially appeal to the gardener and florist. Usually gardeners and florists are desirous that their sons should have a better start in life than they themselves obtained, and frequently a desire for a better education, and are willing to sacrifice time and expense for this commendable object. Frequently, however, such a course diverts the student from the pursuit in which he is in after life expected to shine.

In perusing the curriculum of an agricultural college, it will be gratifying to find how many studies are presented which treat upon the broader principles of agricultural and horticultural pursuits, wherein an outline of many important principles in gardening are made special features. Apart from this some agricultural colleges have provided a course of studies which cannot help but appeal very strongly to the gardener and florist, notably the Massachusetts Agricultural College, wherein the students are enabled to make major studies of horticulture, landscape gardening, floriculture and greenhouse management. The whole is under the direct supervision of Professor F. A. Waugh, an acknowledged authority and author on those subjects.

The subject horticulture deals largely with vegetable and fruit growing. Practical examples consisting of large acreages of vegetables, small fruits and orchards are available for field notes and observations, which are daily recorded by the students. Visits are also made to different neighborhoods to note conditions and students are frequently appointed judges at county fairs, when large displays of fruit are frequently seen. Men with a national reputation along some of these lines lecture upon their special subject, affording the student the opportunity to note the qualifications required for that branch.

In landscape gardening a preparatory course has been going on from the freshman year by the study of mathematics, so that when a student elects landscape gardening in his junior year he has already some valuable information to help him in the many problems which present themselves. A well equipped room is furnished with a number of instruments of the best design and everything is thoroughly up to date. Field work, in teams of three, is taught, surveying, etc., and each receives a thorough acquaintance with all instruments used by the landscape gardener. This is supplemented by drawing maps, plans, etc. Nor is this all. Each student must become acquainted with the living material with which his pictures are composed. This means knowing the plants used, starting with annuals, perennials, climbers, shrubs, trees, evergreens and bedding plants. Large numbers are grown and used on the grounds, exemplifying the purposes of each. Visits are made to local estates and neighboring towns and an enthusiastic interest is soon manifested by those who have the subject at heart.

In horticulture and greenhouse management no efforts are spared to make the course interesting and instructive. Instruction includes seed sowing, mixing soils, potting, propagating and growing many kinds of florists' flowers; greenhouse construction, heating, science of ventilating, etc. Visits to commercial establishments and general acquaintance with all plants used by the florist, variety names of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, etc., and their special treatment. Large greenhouses wherein this material is grown are always accessible to the students.

It can readily be seen what a broadening of mind a student receives in such a course. At home he may have learned one particular subject better, but how much better equipped is he now to branch out and be a credit to his parents' foresight.

RADIATION.

When new houses are in contemplation the piping is generally a prominent consideration. There is often a mistaken idea that what is usual is sufficient with respect to heating requirements, but there is nothing like plenty of heating surface. The greater number of pipes, the less difficulty of securing the desired degree of temperature, without the undesirable fumes and unsatisfactory effects of excessively heated pipes. A little money spent on an extra row of pipes will soon be refunded in fuel saved with less risk of injury to the plants.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

This has been another very quiet week and it is only a grain of consolation to hear that trade is dull in many other cities. The local stagnation has been charged to the after effects of the great theater disaster, but no cause can be assigned for slack shipping demand save that trade is dull throughout the country. Most of the wholesalers report the usual number of orders coming in, but most of them are small, and they do not take up stock very fast, with the result that prices are steadily retrograding, except on the best grade of tea roses, and these hold firm because of light receipts rather than from large demand. With most of the rose growers crops seem to be still going down hill.

There are plenty of Beauties and quoted prices are down to a point which might almost be called bargain rates for January and such fine long stock. Chatenay is selling well and Liberty is both good and popular, the best grades commanding fair figures. A few very special Brides and Maids seen in one or two houses are still bringing 12 to 15 cents over the counter, but the grade usually sold goes at 6 to 8 cents.

Carnations are not in such heavy supply as had been anticipated and were trade progressing at its normal pace there would be no over-stock, but nevertheless values are shrinking day by day. Much of the stock is of fancy quality but there are complaints that it will not keep, this being the usual story just after the holidays, and this year the wholesalers know whether it is true or not, for they have ample opportunity to make tests.

There are large quantities of bulbous stock about. If anyone feels that he was held up on the price of valley or Paper Whites the day of the great rush for funeral stock he can now get even by buying all he wants for 2 cents, although it may not be the freshest of stock. Violets are still in the dumps, bargain rates being quoted, even on the fancy Hudson river goods.

Various Notes.

It has been announced that the Florists' Club will hold a series of meetings in various parts of the city in the next few weeks and the first of these is scheduled for Saturday night, January 16, at Matt Evert's, Rose Hill. This is close to the Reinbergs' and many other growers. Everybody is expected to go. Take the Lincoln avenue cable and transfer to Robey street; the end of the line is in front of the meeting place. The party from down town is expected to meet at the Perfecto, Wabash and Randolph street, and proceed from there at seven o'clock.

Wietor Bros. propose to extend their business in all directions this year, and will have a larger lot of cuttings for the trade than ever before, notwithstanding that the requirements for their own place will be largely increased by a new range of glass in the spring. They have a couple of very good red seedlings, one a cross of Triumph and Jubilee, the other of Lawson and Prosperity. If these pan out it is not unlikely that they may try their hands at introducing novelties.

Wienhoeber had a decoration on Tuesday in which he used 125 cattleyas, supplied by E. C. Amling, who is doing quite a business in orchids, an item not largely handled in this market.

Fleischman used 1,000 Uncle John roses in a recent decoration.

Flint Kennicott is again laid up with the rheumatism.

F. Stillo, at Niles Center, lost a child last week, 6 years of age, and has the sympathy of everyone in the market.

P. J. Hauswirth was at Jacksonville, Ill., on Tuesday in charge of the flowers at a funeral in the family of one of his customers.

The bowlers had a good session last Thursday evening. There was a fine turn out, the Stolley brothers, Asmus, Mrs. Hauswirth and Miss Kreitling, making particularly fine scores. In the future practice will be had on Tuesday evening. John Lambros states that the other club will bowl each Thursday beginning tonight.

Fleischman is reported to have lost a lot of Christmas stock frozen in a broken down automobile.

E. F. Winterson says that whenever business in cut flowers slacks up a little he can always find something doing in the supply department.

F. G. Hunt is no longer with W. N. Rudd at Mt. Greenwood.

The A. L. Randall Co. is handling a nice lot of white lilac and some of Buettner's fancy mignonette.

Frank Garland is getting in Paper Whites by the thousands, in fact a little faster than he wishes he was. He is still cutting a few mums.

C. W. McKellar is now getting in "a little of everything" and finds a fair trade on miscellaneous flowers on a floor heretofore given up to roses and carnations.

The annual meeting for election of officers of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was called for the Great Northern hotel Tuesday afternoon, but a quorum was not obtained.

Sam Graff is here from Columbus, where Graff Bros. are doing a nice wholesale and retail trade, and "Billy" Graff is now in charge. One of the brothers does the buying in this market, the other the selling at Columbus.

Bassett & Washburn report a very good run of shipping trade the first part of this week.

Fred Klingel, bookkeeper for Peter Reinberg, is again quite ill. A surgical operation was performed on him Monday.

Lloyd Vaughan has started on another trip for E. H. Hunt.

E. H. Stewart, of Milwaukee, was a recent visitor.

CINCINNATI.

Club Meeting.

Saturday was the regular meeting of the Florists' Society and though scarcely more than a quorum was present, considerable business was transacted. Owing to the absence of the secretary, Geo. Murphy, Henry Schwarz was appointed to fill the post. E. E. Braun, of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co., was admitted to membership. The schedule for our rose show, to be held in our club rooms the second Saturday of February, was adopted and ordered printed and sent out to prospective exhibitors.

A. F. J. Baur, of Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, was present at the meeting and exhibited a vase of their new carnation, Indianapolis. This is certainly a beauty, with fine stem, color, size and calyx, in fact everything that goes to make a fine flower. It appears to be a prolific and early bloomer, and judging by the report of those who have seen it growing it is a good commercial variety. A committee of judges was appointed consisting of Wm. Murphy, Ben George and August Hoffmeister, to pass upon it and they awarded it the society's certificate of merit and recommended it as a commercial variety. Mr. Baur says that it is a cross between Armazindy and Joost.

The Market.

The least said of business at present, the better. Besides funeral work there is very little doing. Once in a while there is a spurt but it soon subsides into the same slow rut. Roses are about equal to the demand but prices have dropped considerably, especially on pink. Carnations have increased greatly in supply and the price has dropped fully fifty per cent on ordinary grades, with more than enough to go around. Violets have been almost a dead letter and some days they would scarcely move at any price. Bulbous stock has moved well and valley is scarce. Sprenger and asparagus are scarce but there is plenty of smilax.

The coming week holds forth better prospects as society is beginning to better itself after the post-holiday rest.

Various Notes.

A great many of the trade are on the sick list, none seriously ill, but still unable to attend to business. Among the invalids are Chas. Jones, R. A. Betz and T. W. Hardesty.

Geo. Murphy reports one of his children as very sick with pneumonia.

R. Witterstaetter's mother-in-law died last Friday. She had been very sick for some time. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon, the burial being in Spring Grove cemetery.

Miss Minnie Culton, who for many years has been stenographer for J. M. McCullough's Sons, has just received the appointment as chief stenographer to Wade H. Ellis, attorney general of Ohio.

Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, is on the sick list. It all came through a leaky boiler. Mr. Bock was obliged to attach a traction engine to his heating pipes in order to keep up the required temperature in his houses. Everything moved along nicely till one night the engineer went to sleep and before he awoke about $300 worth of plants were frozen. Mr. Bock in doing what he could to save his entire plant, caught a severe cold. He is much better at present.

Two new retail stores will be opened for business this week. One on McMillan street, Walnut Hills, by Lew Villner, the other in the Arcade, between Race and Vine streets, by Freemans & Co.

C. J. OHMER.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Everyone has felt a falling off in business the past fortnight as compared with the same period a year ago. People are not buying our stock now. Prices are low and irregular, consignors are displeased, stall holders gloomy and the dealers have their own troubles. The weak-kneed chaps are blue; comparisons appal them. The spunky chaps are quiet but hopeful; they expect to make it up later. A prominent dealer, when asked whether there was any strong item on the list, replied with a smile, "wild smilax." Single diffodils are in; W. K. Harris has them in pots. The feature of the market is the arrival of gardenias. Robert Scott & Son have cut the Gordian knot and S. S. Pennock is now able to offer the swells their cherished English boutonniere in midwinter. Leo Niessen had some shipping orders for Trenton on Tuesday for the opening of the state legislature. This week is better than last, anyway.

The letters "R. L. H." are printed on certain railroad envelopes and are said to indicate that dispatch is required. It is said that these letters are the initials for "run like hustler," and are borrowed by the railroad men from the florists, whom they know to be quick. The profanely inclined attach a different meaning to the last letter, but florists are not profane and will agree with me in interpreting them. Evidently they were forgotten on Phil's last letter to the REVIEW, or else the railroaders were too busy thawing out frozen switches to heed them, for everything was held up on the way except a few little things and the Florists' Club meeting wire was hardly recognizable.

Know then, kind reader, that the market last week was bad, very bad. Prices fell and flowers spoiled. Then, to add to our trials, there was a big storm that consumed much energy, coal and oil. That the club meeting did Secretary Lonsdale proud. Alfred Burton's paper on the advantages of horticultural education was a good one; the fruits of it show at Wyndmoor. Francis Canning sent another clever paper on the same subject. Besides, C. W. Ward and Robert Craig spoke on carnations. John N. May's exhibit consisted of The Bride, a white carnation of great size, and some blooms of a free flowering red rose called General McArthur. William Didden will, I trust, pardon the way his name was spelled, while Robert Craig & Son, with a fine lot of Adonis and others; John Kuhn, with a fine seedling, and Adolph Farenwald, with his superb Liberties, will, I know, exercise the same Christian virtue regarding their being side-tracked altogether.

The Ball Season.

The ball season is well under way. One or two big affairs preceded the holidays, but the season proper has just opened, with a huge private ball, a veritable rout, followed by the first assembly and another dancing class and the dinners, etc., incident thereto. Unfortunately they don't cut much ice for florists, in general, just a splash that momentarily disturbs the serenity of the pond, that's all.

The season is a short one, Lent begins February 17. From present indications we shall have plenty of business until then.

The Germantown Horticultural Society met January 11. The speakers scheduled were Frank M. Bartram and Warren J. Chandler. Orchids, cut flowers, ferns and fruits were shown.

Dunn & Co. claim to have been very successful since opening and say the outlook for business in 1904 is very encouraging. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

The New York Florists' Club's first meeting of 1904 was held at the rooms in the Grand Opera House building on Monday evening, and nearly fifty of the prominent members of the club were present. In the absence of Mr. Troy, the late president, John Young introduced the new presiding officer, Frank H. Traendly, who acquitted himself with all the dignity and ease of a veteran, demonstrating the club's good judgment in its choice. Mr. Traendly's address, which was practical and to the point, did him much credit and follows in full:

In assuming the duties of president I desire to thank you for the honor you have conferred upon me by selecting me as your presiding officer for the present year. The club is to be congratulated on its condition, having shown progress during the past year, as is shown by the following figures: Receipts, $1,072.50; disbursements, $938.33; balance on hand, $912.98; due from members, $752.50.

Among the suggestions I have to offer for the good and welfare of the club for the coming year is the establishing of special nights for the exhibition of different varieties of flowers, devoting one date for carnations, another for roses and so on through the list. I am fully aware that this is not a new suggestion, but trust the committee of awards may be able to stimulate interest in these particular nights.

I think the club will agree with me that something more interesting is needed than to attend the monthly meetings to transact routine business and listen occasionally to an essay. It requires some courage to refer to a subject that recalls disagreeable memories, that of flower shows, yet I have in mind that a way might be devised to arrange to hold an exhibition on a small scale in a hall of moderate size, open to the public free or by charging a nominal admission. I suggest that an advisory committee be appointed to consider the advisability of such a plan and report at an early date as to whether such an exhibition could be given without involving the club to any great extent financially, or, in fact, whether it would be at all practicable. I merely make the suggestion for what it is worth and to get an expression of your views on the subject of future shows.

I would recommend to the board of trustees that it might be well to have the funds of the club deposited with a trust company, where they would be earning from two to two and one-half per cent a year, as every little helps.

That the summer outings are popular with our members is shown by the success attending them for the past three years. If it is your wish to have another this summer, a committee, should be appointed at once, with power to go ahead and make arrangements and secure suitable grounds.

I should like to see the dinner committee get to work and complete arrangements for this event.

Having served my apprenticeship with the entertainment committee, I feel that I am justified in venturing the advice to the club to show a moderate liberality in an appropriation for the use of the committee. While the "canteen" serves its purpose, the committee should also bear in mind that something in the library line would also be welcome.

Unless the New York Florists' Club wants to be relegated to the ranks of the "has beens" as bowlers, it would be advisable for its athletic members to take an interest in the bowling club, so that we may be creditably represented at the St. Louis convention this summer.

I would impress upon you the importance of being on hand when the meeting is called to order at 7:30, that we may encourage out-of-town members to attend.

In conclusion let me ask your indulgence for any shortcomings on my part; I have the best interests of the club at heart and will, with your support and co-operation, endeavor to perform my duties to your satisfaction.

Mr. Traendly was followed by Messrs. Butterfield, Young and Weathered, each of whom acknowledged gracefully and gratefully the honor bestowed and promising their co-operation in making the coming year the banner year in the club's history. The various committees were announced by the president. Mr. O'Mara spoke eloquently of the club's appreciation of the good work of the committees of 1903, and also read the resolutions on the death of Thos. W. Weathered and George M. Cottam.

The annual dinner committee consists of Messrs. Lawrence Haffner, Lyman B. Craw and Walter Sheridan, and has instructions to arrange for the festivity soon after the next regular meeting of the club, the second Monday in February.

Six new members were elected and eight proposed, evidencing a renewed interest that should bring the total membership close to 300 before the end of the year. Letters of resignation were read from Messrs. A. Herrington and J. M. Keller and regretfully accepted. The secretary of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Association sent a letter of invitation to the club members to attend the annual banquet on Wednesday evening and a vote of thanks was tendered for the courtesy. Quite a few will doubtless accept the invitation.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were very interesting and showed an excellent standing of the club as to membership and finances, 237 names being on the roll and nearly $1,000 in the treasury. Mr. Sheridan, president of the board of trustees, in his report commended the treasurer for the splendid showing made and the secretary for the neatness and accuracy of his records.

A discussion of the president's address was participated in by Messrs. O'Mara, Samuel Henshaw and Mr. Butterfield. References to the splendid success of the florists' clubs of Europe and especially Holland in their exhibitions and the active co-operation of their members, were made as an incentive to progress here. Mr. Henshaw gave interesting reminiscences of the exhibitions of twenty years ago, and declared that he himself was "as young and enthusiastic today as fifty years ago." A motion was passed entrusting to the club's officers the matter of holding a flower show during the present year and the advisability of co-operating with the American Institute and using the same grand hall as in 1903.

An excellent outing committee was appointed, with W. J. Elliott as chairman, and another summer celebration similar to the last is already under way. A committee was appointed at the suggestion of Treasurer Weathered to arrange for the printing of certificates of membership in keeping with the club's reputation. Messrs. Young, Nash and Daille-douze were appointed to draw up suitable resolutions on the death of Ernst G. Asmus.

A splendid exhibit of seedling carnations was made by C. W. Ward. A fine white, a pink, No. 31 of 1900, and the grand red, No. 303 of 1901. The committee of awards reported most favorably as to all and a committee was appointed to visit the Cottage Gardens and report at the next meeting of the club as to No. 303.

W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., was a visitor and gave a very interesting address, commending the enthusiasm and interest shown by the club and its progressive character, declaring he was unable to detect any signs of paralysis, and adding his testimony as to the efficiency of the canteen service. He congratulated the president and members on the discussions and speeches he had listened to with so much interest and closed with many practical suggestions as to exhibitions, especially of carnations, to which flower he awarded the palm for progress during the year that has closed. He anticipates a great chrysanthemum show in Boston in November. His admiration of the courage of the New York club, after its vicissitudes in the flower show business, was unbounded. He spoke feelingly of his friend, Ernst Asmus, and the collapse from overwork he suffered at the Lenox Lyceum exhibition some years ago.

Various Items.

The seedsmen have their ears close to the ground and hear the voice of the vernal season. William Elliott is already perfecting plans for the opening of the auction season, which will announce itself unusually early this year and doubtless in time for Easter, which now is only ten weeks away. We are already forgetting that a week ago we had the coldest wave that has swept over New York in a generation.

Among the victims of the zero visitation is Wm. Hanft, of Thos. Young, Jr.'s, Sixth avenue store, who has been confined to his house a week with a serious attack of the gripe.

J. O. S. Hanft, of Hanft Bros., Madison avenue, is convalescing at St. Augustine, Fla., after a long tussle with typhoid fever. It was a close call and he will not return to business before May.

The present week is "banquet week" for sure. On Wednesday evening the Dutchess County Horticultural Society celebrates at Poughkeepsie, while the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society has a smoker and vaudeville at Madison. On Friday the New Jersey Floricultural Society dines at Orange. Fortunately the Tarrytown people didn't get hungry the same evening and have placed their "feast of reason" ahead to January 28.

The ball season, too, has awakened, and the regular events of the season in this line are at hand. On Thursday the Young Arion ball takes place at Arion hall, and on February 5 at Madison Square Garden the annual Arion ball, the greatest of its kind, with elaborate decorations, both in charge of Hanft Bros. The latter has been their especial province for over a quarter of a century. This firm had a novel decoration at the dinner of the New York Athletic Club on last Thursday evening, a floral printing press with wheels, cylinder and all the features elaborately worked out in roses, smilax, purple foil, etc. Two bunches at the Hammersely funeral sent by Hanft Bros., were of the finest orchids, one composed of six dozen cattleyas and the other containing 470 white orchids.

At all of the private balls the best work of the Metropolitan florists will be in evidence and with the opera season in full blast and cat, automobile, and other society exhibitions attracting fashionable people the good effects should soon begin to be felt by the florists generally and from now on until Lent there should be "something doing" all the time.

Bloomington Bros. will have, when completed, one of the finest conservatories and florist stores in the country, under the able management of Mr. Burnham. During the past ten years this establishment has grown rapidly and on legitimate lines. No antagonism to the legitimate florist trade has been developed. Only the best of stock is handled and fair prices are maintained. The new greenhouse on the roof being built by Hitchings & Co., will be 42x98, and connected with it will be a reception room 22x42, fitted up in the latest Parisian style, with palms, fountains and all the accessories. The old conservatories are 25x150, and 25x50, the new store will be 40x40 and beautiful in all its fittings and details.

Flatbush celebrated its annual departure from the beaten path last Thursday in the usual prize bowling competition, with a smaller crowd and lower scores than usual, but all the old-time enthusiasm on tap; and other things. The prizes were all valuable and the winners lined up for their pick in the following order:

Alfred Zeller, Patrick Riley, David Mellis, Henry Dailedouze, Eugene Dailedouze, Louis Schmutz, Clemens Wocker, I. T. Irwin, Paul Dailedouze. Cigars, vases, mufflers, tobacco jars, bottles, etc., figured in the general distribution.

The greenhouses owned by William Bell, of Bayside, L. I., were completely destroyed by fire last Wednesday. There was no insurance. Mr. Bell is highly esteemed by his brother florists, who feel much sympathy for him.

Cassidy & Sons, of Blissville, L. I., who were also burned out sometime ago, are rebuilding two greenhouses 22x90.

Mrs. John Donaldson, who has been very ill with pneumonia at her home in Elmhurst, L. I., is out of danger.

W. E. Marshall, the wholesale seedsman, came to the club meeting Monday evening somewhat battered but "still in the ring," after his accident at Newport. John Birnie, too, appeared with a nose almost out of commission, the result of some strenuous curling with brother Scots over in Jersey. Patrick O'Mara was again on deck after a tussle with one of Job's comforters, which held him captive for two weeks. A boil on the toe is an unusual affliction.

After the club meeting Monday night a half dozen enthusiasts, chaperoned by Capt. Lang, visited the bowling alleys selected for the new club and unanimously decided they were "out of sight." The club starts with a membership of twenty, all the old-timers among them. The place selected, Twenty-third street and Tenth avenue, with its four alleys, is one of the best in the city, and Monday evening next at 7:30 the opening ceremonies will take place. With the material engaged the captain should take a team to St. Louis that will restore the old-time prestige to the New York club.

C. W. Clucas lives during the summer season at Sparkill, on the Worth estate of thirty acres, which the firm has purchased and where nursery and trial grounds are already established. Here roses, shrubs, conifers, ornamental trees and herbaceous plants will be grown extensively. Mr. Clucas is a resident of Orange, N. J., during the winter and Mr. Boddington resides at Yonkers.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., has the decoration for the Arkwright Club this week at 320 Broadway, of which he is a member. Over 500 American Beauties, with abundance of smilax and lilac will be used at the banquet.

C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, is at Charlestown, W. Va., this week, and will return to the city Saturday.

W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., was in town on Monday.

John B. Nugent, of Young & Nugent, was unfortunate, with many others of the wholesalers in New York, in having several large shipments of stock frozen during the cold snap of a week ago. He is handling superb Liberties, 500 to 2,000 daily, some with four to five-foot stems, for which he realizes as high as 50 cents.

Arthur Cowee was in town on Saturday on his way home from the meeting of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society, before which he lectured on his favorite theme, the gladiolus. He has secured two acres of space at the St. Louis World's Fair for his exhibit there next summer. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The weather the past week has been most beautiful, it being warm, with plenty of sunshine. Cut flowers are in great abundance at the wholesale houses. Complaints are heard on all sides of dull business. Some of our florists have orders for decorations for small affairs and there is about the usual activity in funeral work, but transient trade is reported as generally poor. The fakirs, who have been kept indoors during the holidays, are out again in full force during these nice days.

Prices on stock have fallen, especially on violets and carnations. Of the first named, Californias are coming in heavier every day and consignors have to be satisfied with whatever price they bring. Double violets are very much neglected in this market. Therefore with the advent of southern stock we look for very cheap violets during the rest of the month. At the present time they are selling at 25 and 50 cents per single hundred, but much cheaper in 1,000 lots.

Of carnations we may say there is a big glut of all varieties, including white, which has a fair demand. The quality of the stock is very good, with prices as low as $10 per 1,000. In 100 lots $2 to $4 is asked and for extra fancy $5 and $6. Signs are again displayed in down-town windows which call for 25 cents per dozen, a great contrast with only a few weeks ago. There is also a big pile of bulbous stock coming in, in fact more than the wholesalers can dispose of. Romans, Paper Whites and valley are selling very cheap. Callas are more plentiful and sell well until Harrisii comes in, which will be about next week. Some freesias are in, but not many. Some calls were heard the past week for tulips, Von Sion and Dutch hyacinths, but none are in the market as yet.

American Beauties are arriving in better quality than they have been, still a great many of them are "bulls." Some excellent stock was seen from Ammann of these. Fancies are scarce, but plenty of those with medium stems are in, also shorts. Good tea roses are not so plentiful, still enough Brides and Maids are in for the demand. Meteor and Liberty of the second grades, with short stems, are abundant but fancy grades are somewhat scarce. Golden Gate, Carnot and Ivory sell well, also Perle. Top price on these runs from $6 to $8 for selects and $3 and $4 for firsts; seconds sell at almost any price. All greens seem to move well at their usual prices.

Various Notes.

W. Murray Hendrix, of Gainesville, Ga., was a visitor, representing the Stone-wall Lumber Co., selling orchid boxes.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville; J. W. Dunford, of Clayton, and "Billy" Winter, of Kirkwood, made friendly calls the past week. Mr. Winter reports that he will visit Chicago and Joliet this week on the lookout for new carnations.

Rudolph J. Mohr's new card reads, "Superintendent of Landscape, British Pavilion, World's Fair Grounds."

Thomas Maher, landscape gardener, fell while trimming trees in front of Dr. Foster's residence last week and died at the city hospital, his skull being fractured and three ribs broken.

Henry Ostertag was kept hustling with some big decorations the past week.

The Eggeling Floral Co. and Emil Schray, in South St. Louis, report some heavy funeral orders of late.

At Grand and Olive streets the four florists in this section are making an elegant showing of cut flowers but report trade somewhat light the past week.

There is nothing but good news to report from our sick brothers, Max Herzog, Carew Sanders, Julius Koenig and John Hudson. All are coming around nicely and will soon be out to greet their friends.

The prospects of a big delegation from here to attend the carnation meeting at Detroit, March 2, is good. Some ten are now in line, with more to hear from. This delegation will make an effort to have the carnation society come to St. Louis in 1905.

We are very sorry to have to report this week the sad news of the death of Mrs. Max Herzog, which occurred Sunday afternoon at her home at Gratiot Station. The funeral was held on Tuesday at 2 p. m. Mr. Herzog's many friends, I know, are with me in extending to him and his daughter our heartfelt sympathy.

Bowling.

Since returning from the last convention at Milwaukee the bowling club has rolled fifty-five games in which the following totals, averages and high single scores were made:

WORLD'S FAIR EXHIBITS.

F. W. Taylor, superintendent of horticulture at the St. Louis World's Fair, states that there have been planted in the outdoor display over 17,000 roses and 100,000 bulbs.

CALENDARS RECEIVED.

John Lucas & Co., Philadelphia, glass and paint; P. J. Berckmans Co., Augusta, Ga., nursery stock; J. J. Foley, New York, flowers; Idlewild Greenhouses, Memphis, Tenn., flowers; A. C. Brown, Springfield, Ill., seeds and flowers; J. C. Murray, Peoria, Ill., flowers; S. J. McMichael, Findlay, O., vegetable plants.

Vegetable Forcing.

CHICAGO. Jan. 13.—Radishes, per bbl., $2 to $5. Lettuce, head, per bbl., $1 to $1.25. Cucumbers, per doz., 50 cents to $1.25.

IN the last three months of 1903 Paul Swanson, Chicago, says he picked 3,200 pounds of mushrooms from 4,500 square feet of beds.

PROF. GALLOWAY, of the bureau of plant industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, has asked for an appropriation of $10,000 to be expended in the study of means to ameliorate the ills with which the crops of vegetables forced under glass are afflicted.

CUCUMBERS.

Where a grower's facilities are not of the best or the houses not of the bright, up-to-date build it is rather uphill work to handle a crop of cucumbers through the dull months of the year, but if started now, by the time they get well under way the days will be growing longer and brighter and the handling of the crop will be comparatively easy.

In a former article I gave my ideas regarding the starting of the seeds, but for the information of beginners who may not have seen the article mentioned and who may want a little enlightenment, a few hints may not be out of place.

The White Spine variety seems to take the market best and is the easiest to handle. Starting them now, I would place three or four seeds in a 4-inch pot in a light, free soil, such as one composed of equal parts of sand, leaf-mold and loam finely sifted. Care should be taken to place the seeds with the thin, flat end downward, as the root is emitted from this end, and they will start quicker and stronger if the seeds are properly placed than they will if carelessly thrown in.

A propagating pit, where a bottom heat of about 75 degrees can be maintained, will be a good place to start them. Cover the pots with glass to help conserve the heat, and also keep mice from getting at the seeds, for which they seem to have an especial fancy; if there are any mice around, they will quickly find the seeds and root them out.

When well started remove to lighter quarters to prevent drawing, but shade from strong sunlight for a few days, then gradually wear the shading off. They should not be allowed to become pot-bound or a check may result. Don't attempt to divide the potful, but plant it in as it is, and if four plants are in the pot thin out to three after they have got a hold of the new soil.

Cucumbers require a fairly rich soil. One composed of good, fibrous loam, not too finely broken up, with a liberal addition of old cow manure, will suit them. The old custom of placing a few shovelfuls of soil in a hill and planting in this in place of filling the bench up at once is, I think, a good one, as when water is applied it quickly drains off and eliminates the danger of stem-rot, which is sometimes troublesome if the soil around the plants is kept too wet before the plants are strong enough to take up the moisture. Fresh soil can be added from time to time, as the roots appear on the outside of the hills. Only a little need be added at a time. This system seems to coax the plants along. Probably the freer admission of air to the soil has much to do with it, but certainly the plants come along quicker and grow stronger than when the bed is filled up at once.

About four feet apart is the best distance for the hills. When a growth of about two feet has been made the points of the leading shoots should be taken out to throw the strength into the side shoots, as it is on the latter almost exclusively that the female flowers are produced.

Hand pollination is necessary to insure a good set and the operation will be most successful if done when both the flowers and the atmosphere of the house are dry. The simplest means of pollination is to pull off the male flower, first making sure that the pollen is ripe, and shake on to or rub lightly over the pistil of the female flower. If properly handled, fruit should set at almost every joint. The pinching off of the lateral shoots will need frequent attention to prevent the plants from becoming too thick and the shoots from crowding one another.

The atmosphere of the house should be kept damp and the plants syringed on bright days to prevent the attacks of red spider. Regarding temperature, they can be grown at 60 degrees by night, but if 65 can be kept up, so much the better. It won't do any harm to run them up 20 degrees higher by sun heat, as long as a little air can be kept on.

When the plants are carrying a heavy crop they can be assisted by the application of liquid manure. It is better to apply this often and weak rather than run the risk of causing injury by making the liquid too strong.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

BAYSIDE, L. I.—The greenhouses of William Bell were burned January 6, the loss being $2,000 on buildings and $6,000 on stock, all insured.

LEBANON, IND.—W. A. Bilger, formerly owner of the local greenhouses and lately a resident of St. Louis, has been employed as florist at Oak Hill cemetery.

BLUFFTON, IND.—As a result of the brisk Christmas trade Myers & Co. will double their planting of carnations next year, with Lawson and Wolcott predominating.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Cleveland Cut Flower Company, $10,000, has been incorporated by George Bate, F. R. Williams, H. G. Cause, J. M. Eaton and E. S. Park.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—There is a suit pending between C. A. Allen and B. F. and Lidia A. Haley, of the Fairview Floral Co., owing to a disagreement as to the dissolution of relations.

CAMBRIDGE CITY, IND.—Owing to the increasing business of Howard & Lively, Oscar Howard has resigned his place with Bertsch & Co. to give his entire time to the greenhouses.

DENVER, COLO.—Thomas Woolen, 20 years old, turned off a light in the greenhouse at Elitch's Garden and received an electric shock which rendered him unconscious for several minutes. Regaining consciousness he took hold of another light to show a fellow employe how it happened and received a shock which was instantly fatal.

DES MOINES, IA.—The united retail businesses of W. L. Morris and R. L. Blair will be carried on at the old Morris stand, 609 Walnut street, as the Morris-Blair Floral Co., with Mr. Blair in charge. Mr. Morris will devote his time to the management of his greenhouses. W. E. Kemble, of Oskaloosa, is also a partner in the new firm and much of the stock handled will come from his place.

LEADVILLE, COLO.—The City Greenhouse, conducted by Mrs. A. E. Johnson, is doing a nice trade.

HILLSDALE, MICH.—Carl Hirsch has established a branch store at Jackson, in the drug store of Waldron & Todd.

KINGSTON, ONT.—George Lloyd, formerly with L. O'Sullivan, West Superior, Wis., has gone into business for himself here with 3,000 feet of glass and an acre of land.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Godfrey Aschmann writes that he is working up the largest stock of Easter plants he has ever had. His specialties are azaleas and araucarias.

DECATUR, IND.—Jacob Closs, Jr., has a Ponderosa lemon in his greenhouse with a fruit measuring eleven inches in circumference. He obtained the plant from Springfield, Ohio, last spring.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.—The Ellsworth Greenhouses report the business for 1903 as fully double that of any preceding year. They have recently completed the entire reconstruction of their houses to obtain facilities equal to the requirements of their increasing trade.

READING, PA.—Henry J. Huesman & Son have bought out the well known Brookside cut flower store at Fifth and Franklin streets, and will continue it in connection with their greenhouses at Schuylkill and Greenwich streets. The firm enjoys a large retail plant and cut flower trade.

SAVANNAH, GA.—Christmas and New Year's trade was considerably better this year than ever before, good stock, plenty of it and good prices. Everyone sold out clean. A. C. Oelsenig says flowering plants went better than ever. This has been the coldest winter on record; since the middle of November the furnace has never been out of use, but fortunately we have coal this season.

TORONTO.

Christmas trade was greater than ever. Roses, carnations, violets and valley were all ordered ahead of time. There were a few nice mums for sale and poinsettias were one of the leading red flowers, which realized good prices and ready sale. Azaleas were the queen of plants offered and were of good quality. Some very fancy obconicas were grown by John Webber.

New Year's trade was fair, some customers returning the Christmas gifts.

Grobba & Wandrey are sending in some fine lilacs, azaleas and Trumpet Major daffodils.

William Hill has displayed in his window some very fine stems of Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, which proved to be quite an attraction, a novelty to the public, apparently not having been exhibited in Toronto before.

Funeral work has been plentiful and some good pieces have been turned out.

I might say the coldest snap experienced in years came Monday, January 4, when the thermometer registered locally from 12 to 25 degrees below zero, and a few small places had Jack Frost visit them.

F. W. J. H.

MONTICELLO, ILL.—A greenhouse 22x76 is being built at the university.

Good Bowling.

It is not often I bother you, Mr. Editor, with any sporting news or bowling scores, but having attended a tournament game last night I feel proud to recount the prowess of the five athletes who call themselves the Florists in the "Big Five" tournament now going on in this city. The "Big Fives" are ten teams of five men each, and the tournament began in October, and will last till April. Some of the teams are the strongest in the country and include Champion Eddie Gebhardt with an average in thirty games of 202, and many others. The Florist team is in sixth place, but coming fast. Last night they took two out of three games from the "Opportunes," a team any one of the five of whom could give George Asmus or Mr. Wilcox a terrible laying out. A few of our florists might call around on the nights our boys play a match. I am sure it would encourage them. If this team holds together, it's all off at St. Louis and interest will center about in who will be second. As I sat watching the foul line last night I thought what an entertaining thing to have instantaneous photographs of the men taken at the instant of delivery and the few following seconds and then reproduced on the biograph. Staid old business men were playing there in a business men's league and the attitudes they put themselves in to watch the results of their effort could not have been more earnest and serious if they were guiding the launching of a 700-foot vessel of their own building. Here is the score of the florists:

I regret to tell you that fire destroyed the shed and the ends of three houses of Frank B. Lewis, of Lockport, one day last week. The city water supply was very inadequate and the fire had done much damage before it was subdued. A great amount of stock was frozen and, worst of all, no insurance. This is too bad.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. B. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

VISITED CHICAGO:—W. H. Grinnell, Pierpont Manor, N. Y.

VISITED ST. LOUIS:—Frank J. Ries, representing the Goodwin, Harries Co., Chicago.

W. R. FRENCH, dealer in hides and wool at Waterloo, Ia., is also a buyer of seeds.

W. E. MARSHALL, New York, was thrown from a sleigh at Newport, R. I., January 7 and dislocated his shoulder.

ONION sets are quoted at $7.60 per bushel in the 1904 catalogue of a prominent seed house. This is evidently a mistake.

A SOUTHERN truckers' guide to hand this week quotes Stowell's Evergreen and Country Gentleman sweet corn at $3.25 per bushel.

THIS is likely to be a year when it would have been well for the trade to have adopted a uniform scale of prices previous to printing their catalogues.

THE scarcity of some of the wax podded varieties of beans is so great that there will be a difficulty in getting enough of them together for stock seed purposes.

BETWEEN $3.25 and $15 there is quite a difference. These are the highest and the lowest bushel prices noticed in the 1904 catalogues, for Country Gentleman sweet corn.

GRADUS peas are quoted in some of the retail catalogues at $9 per bushel. This is $3 per bushel less than jobbers are offered for five to ten bushel lots of this variety.

THE only shortages that seem to be serious are beans, wax podded varieties; sweet corn, all late varieties; cucumbers, all pickling varieties; egg plant, choice stock; asparagus seed, most varieties; beet, Edmand's; peas, Gradus; rhubarb.

NONE of the prices asked for wax beans in the 1904 catalogues are high enough. If the dealer has to buy at present values to complete filling his orders he will pay the jobber as much or more than he asks in his retail catalogue.

THAT current catalogue prices are not the actual values of sweet corn will be made plain by ordering the article from any of the dealers who quote low. If money is enclosed with the order the chances are that it will be returned with the statement that stock is all sold, or "we have some secured later at a higher price that is available."

ALL the important catalogues have now been mailed and the general report is that mail trade with the south is opening satisfactorily, but that demand from the north is slow in starting, possibly due to severe weather, where it had been expected that the well understood shortage in many lines would result in early orders.

THE one hundred and third annual edition of the general catalogue of J. M. Thorburn & Co., New York, is worthy of the study of all catalogue makers. The cover is rich without being gaudy and the mechanical features of the book are excellent. The type is clear, the paper heavy and opaque, so that the half-tones show up much better than on most highly calendared stock. The binding, too, is noteworthy in that the book is sewed with thread instead of being stitched with wire staples, as is the case in other catalogues. This permits the catalogue to open flat.

CORN BREEDING.

Funk Bros. Seed Co., Bloomington, Ill., has attracted much attention by the success which has attended efforts at up-breeding in corn. At the annual meeting of the American Breeders' Association J. D. Funk gave an account of the work, which is summarized as follows in the press report recently issued:

Commercially the corn breeder must have one aim and only one, that is utility. The acre is the farmer's unit. There are three ways to increase his profits per acre; improvement of fertility, improvement of culture, and improvement of productiveness of seed. The commercial breeder of corn must increase the number of shelled bushels of grain per acre, and also increase the feeding value of the bushel. On farms aggregating 25,000 acres in area, Mr. Funk and his partners breed a number of varieties of corn. They have twenty or thirty isolated, small fields or corn nurseries. On each are planted the seeds from each of fifty or sixty numbered ears of a certain variety, each ear being planted in a single row which is also numbered. Before tasseling, all plants that are seemingly barren of an ear are detasseled, and weak or objectionable rows are entirely detasseled and thrown out. Each row is husked separately and the corn weighed. By this means is secured the yield per plant of the progeny of each mother plant. From each of the eight or ten rows giving the highest rate of production, thus showing their mother ears to have had the highest breeding power, are saved several of the best ears for mothers of rows in the next year's nursery. From these same best rows, seed is also saved for larger plots, the yields of which the next year are also recorded. The yields of the mother plants, their centenger yields in nursery rows, and the yields of the field plots, become performance records of the strains of corn as the individual track record and the record of numerous of his progeny, become the performance records of the trotting horse.

EXPANSION.

I would like to ask about connecting our boiler with city water. As it now is we have an expansion tank set on top of the house, about twenty feet above the boiler, with a supply pipe from the city main. This tank is made of wood and has got to leaking and the question is should we abandon the tank altogether and connect with the city water direct? Or should we put up a closed tank in place of the old one? Which would you recommend? If you think a closed tank would be best please tell us how to make it. Would heavy galvanized iron answer the purpose? I cannot see why direct connection with the city main would not do. The city pressure is about sixty pounds and our supply pipe $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch.
J. W. M.

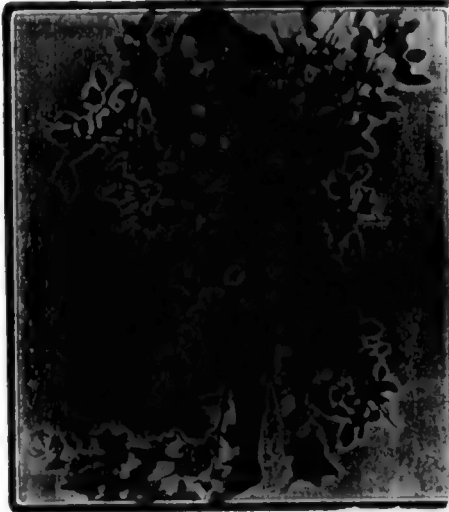

Many plants using hot water under pressure are connected directly with the city mains. Unless the piping is all of malleable iron, put together with threaded joints, it will not be advisable to adopt this system, as few hot water plants or boilers are constructed to work under sixty pounds pressure. Your safest plan would be to replace the present leaky expansion tank with a galvanized iron tank of proper size, similar to those used for the storage of water heated by a water front in a kitchen range. These tanks range in size from fifteen to 100 gallons and will probably prove less expensive than a similar tank made of any other metal. It will not be satisfactory to use a closed tank. Even if the hot water tank referred to be employed it must be provided with a small vent pipe to allow for escape of air or overflow in case too much water gets into the system.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 324 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Committee on Prizes and Exhibitions—J. K. M. L. Farquhar, chairman; W. N. Craig, A. H. Fewkes, W. W. Rawson, W. H. Spooner, A. F. Estabrook.

Committee on Plants and Flowers—Arthur H. Fewkes, chairman; William N. Craig, T. D. Hatfield, Robert Cameron, James Wheeler, William Nicholson, John A. Pettigrew.

Committee on Fruits—E. W. Wood, chairman; Charles F. Curtis, Warren Fenno, J. Willard Hill, John Ash.

Committee on Vegetables—Michael Sullivan, chairman; Warren H. Heustis, Aaron Low, Joshua C. Stone, Walter Russell.

Committee on Gardens—Charles W. Parker, chairman; David F. Roy, John A. Pettigrew, W. W. Rawson, Arthur H. Fewkes, Oakes Ames, Patrick Norton, Henry P. Walcott, M.D.

Library Committee—Charles S. Sargent, chairman; Samuel Henshaw, George E. Davenport, Charles W. Jenks, T. Otis Fuller.

Committee on Lectures and Publication—Aaron Low, chairman; James H. Bowditch, E. W. Wood, Dr. Robert T. Jackson, Edward B. Wilder.

Committee on School Gardens and Native Plants—Henry L. Clapp, chairman; Katharine W. Huston, William E. C. Rich, William P. Rich, Charles W. Jenks, Miss Mary Rodman, Henry S. Adams.

In his inaugural address President Walcott said, among other things: "There seems to be an impression in some quarters that it has been and is the wish of a portion of the society to curtail the exhibitions, either in number or extent. Those whom I have seen in the hall and at the exhibitions do not have this intention. The exhibitions in the future are likely to be just as many in number as they have been in the past."

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardeners' Magazine.

MICHAELMAS DAISIES.—Asters of the Michaelmas daisy persuasion have been so wonderfully developed of late years that they undoubtedly form one of the chief attractions of many gardens in the autumn, but the great bulk of the varieties have a terrible habit of absolutely invading the garden unless they be subjected to a persistent process of weeding out, and even then are, as a rule, far too robust and bushy for association with plants of ordinary garden size. Huge shrub-like masses, six feet high and nearly as much through, present, certainly, a rich effect when covered with their pretty star-like flowers, but when it is found that not only do they overshadow and crowd out everything of less lofty pretensions, and that their seedlings come up in such profusion and with such inherited self-assertion as to become veritable weeds, the gardener becomes in time sated with them and is likely to oust them altogether. But recently some dwarf forms have made their appearance.

VARIEGATED FERNS.—Probably the finest variegated fern in cultivation is Pteris tricolor, the ground color of the fronds being a vivid dark green when mature, though rose-colored in the young state, the center of each pinna purplish-red or crimson, margined with white or silvery-gray. Though somewhat variable under cultivation, the effect of this plant is frequently enhanced in good specimens by the diversity of colors displayed in the fronds by the continuous growth, development and maturing of the same, conjointly with the production of the pigmental matter. By some authorities P. tricolor is simply held to be a variegated form of P. aspericaulis, an East Indian species.

TOO MANY GARDENERS.—Overproduction is a question of more than passing importance at the present day among private gardeners. The advertisement columns in the papers every week tell their own story of gardeners in need of situations. Why do the "situations wanted" so far outweigh the "places vacant"; why do gardeners tremble at the thought of leaving a situation for the fear that they will not be able to secure another one; and why do young men who wish to become head gardeners have to frequently wait long and wearily for the fulfillment of their desires, till hope deferred makes the heart sick? There can only be one answer, and it is that the output is in excess of the demand.

PLANT NOTES.

Romneya Coulteri.

Romneya Coulteri must be conceded by everyone to be the queen of our Pacific coast wild flowers. It was discovered first in the Ventura mountains, where it grows naturally in great abundance, and from that neighborhood it has been disseminated until it is known in all parts of the state. It is liable to be cut down by our severe frosts, although in the vicinity of San Francisco, where we have many grand specimens planted, it has survived the cold weather thus far. The roots, of course, do not die, and the branches come up very early in the spring. The stems are heavy and numerous and grow from four to fifteen feet high and are covered with long, narrow, segmented glaucous, smooth leaves three to five inches long. The massive, pure white, fragrant flowers are borne on solitary stems from six to nine inches across and consisted of six white petals with very numerous yellow stamens. It is not a plant suited to small gardens, owing to its massive proportions, but makes a grand adornment for a large place or public park, where its great, showy blooms can be seen from a long distance. It is regarded by English gardeners as a wonderful treasure and although it has to be carefully handled in a colder country it well repays the trouble it causes.

As a florist's flower it is all to be desired. The flowers when cut should be only half-blown, and it keeps well for a week in water. I have found the plants very difficult of propagation from cuttings, but by root division early in the spring they can be multiplied easily. The flowers seed very freely, but they are extremely slow in germination. I planted about half an ounce of fresh seed that I gathered fully a year ago, and up to date I have seen only about twenty-five show themselves, and these within the past four weeks. They grow very quickly when transplanted in the open ground and bloom freely the first season. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Holiday Trade.

The holiday trade was the best ever! Nothing like it in the history of the trade here. When discussing the volume of business done Christmas week two of our leading firms pronounced it their banner week. Active buying began as early as Monday and continued most satisfactorily until New Year's night. Everything favored us this year. The weather, usually so disagreeable at this season, was clear and cool, but not frosty, which made the delivery of plants comparatively easy. Local growers fared well and supplied us with a fine lot of cut flowers. Stock imported from California also arrived in excellent condition, probably due to a few vigorous kicks by the florists to the express company for their carelessness a year ago through which all lost so heavily. The supply was equal to the demand and prices averaged as high as last year. Carnations in leading varieties retailed at $2 per dozen, with beautiful Enchantress, monarch of all, commanding $4. Roses sold readily at $2 and $3 per dozen. We had a few hundred choice chrysanthemums, the best blooms retailing at $8 per dozen. In flowering plants the cyclamen and azalea headed the procession, and, when displayed in the customary Christmas trimmings, were speedily moved.

The florists' windows were decidedly attractive and appropriate to Christmas, the greatest hit being a striking combination of Oregon holly and red bells. We wired New York a duplicate order for bells and received reply that all were disposed of. The sale on green goods equaled that of a year ago. Oregon grown holly and mistletoe is unsurpassed and there was a sufficient quantity to supply the local demand. Holly is sold here by the pound weight and the disposal of same is now more widely distributed than heretofore, the street vendors having a small corner on the market. Special orders for holly wreaths at $2 each were shipped as far east as New York and Maine. Mail orders for loose holly could not be filled and it is to be regretted that more attention was not given to the cultivation of same ten years ago, as we would now be supplying all the northwest and California. Holly grows luxuriantly in our climate and one of our florists recently imported 5,000 plants from France, and, as he practically put it, they will prove the best life insurance policy he can carry. CALIFORNIA CARNATION CO., A. MITTING, Manager. LOOMIS, CAL.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business has been only fair since the holidays. We have had an abundance of bright, warm days and flowers are beginning to be brought into market a little more profusely than they were a week ago. Prices still remain fairly good and I do not look for any reduction this month. Carnations are selling at from 50 to 75 cents per dozen and some of the smaller varieties at 30 cents. Prosperity and Lawson have sold as high as $1 per dozen during the past two weeks, but this price was for extra fine stock. Good Flora Hill are in demand at 50 cents. Good American Beauty roses are scarce and sell wholesale today at $2 to $3 per dozen. Fancy stock of this variety is not to be seen anywhere. Bride and Maid are becoming somewhat more plentiful and sell at from 75 cents to $1 per dozen. The quality is very fair. Kaiserin and Test-out are scarce and from the reports of most of the growers it will be several weeks before any good cuts will be made. Chrysanthemums, owing to the favorable weather, are still considerably in evidence and are very good considering the lateness of the season. The best outdoor flowers can be had at from $3 to $4 per hundred and some extra choice stock at about $6. Narcissi are in good supply, both the single white and the double yellow-centered varieties. They bring from 75 cents to $1. Lilium Harrisii is scarce and valley about equal to the demand. Smilax was cut very closely for the holidays. I spoke to a florist today who had received an order for 500 strings and he told me he had quite a time to get it filled. Violets are still scarce, although the price has been reduced somewhat. They are quoted today at from $1 to $1.50 per dozen bunches. Adiantum and asparagus seem to have been clipped very closely, as several of the florists complain that good stock is hard to procure. A few good daffodils are seen and they are eagerly bought up. It will be several weeks before they become plentiful.

Various Notes.

I regret to have to chronicle the death of Mrs. Honorah Galloway, wife of Albert Galloway, the well known carnation specialist of Fruitvale. Mrs. Galloway was buried last Friday and her husband has the sympathy of all the florist fraternity in San Francisco and Oakland.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The annual meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held December 31 and the following officers elected: President, James Ballantyne; vice-president, Joseph Bradley; secretary, E. W. Neubrand; treasurer, James T. Lawrie; corresponding secretary, Thomas A. Lee. Wm. Scott is chairman of the executive committee and F. R. Pierson of the board of directors.

The annual dinner will be held at the Perry House January 28. It was voted to hold the annual exhibition November 1 to 3, 1904. Robert Cochrane, Tarrytown, and Edward Parker, Rochester, were elected and R. Barton and Frederick Parker proposed for membership. David McFarlane won the handsome prize for the best exhibit of the evening with three fine vases of carnations, Enchantress, Harlowarden and Prosperity, six of each.

ATLANTA, GA.

Holiday business here was far in advance of any past year. Everyone reports twenty to fifty per cent more business than a year ago.

Nunnally is cutting some extra fine Beauties and Liberty.

The Dahl Co. have an extra fine lot of teas.

The Atlanta Floral Co. and the West View Floral Co. are making their usual good showings.

It is rumored here that Thomas O'Neil, C. J. Austin and Chas. A. Heard, of Chattanooga, contemplate the erection the coming spring of an extensive range of glass, either at Chattanooga or Birmingham, to be devoted exclusively to roses and carnations for the wholesale trade. Chas. A. Heard is to have charge of the greenhouses.

Visitors the past week: T. J. Moran, New York, C. J. Austin, Mississippi; H. Spiegle, New Orleans. OBSERVER.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Since my last notes the market has weakened and prices took the downward course. Stock is now plentiful, a large surplus in all flowers existing. The demand for flowers was practically shut off by the very cold weather which prevailed most of last week. The temperature fell as low as 20 degrees below zero. Many of the florists who received shipments from distant points had heavy losses by freezing. Quantities of stock were received frozen into solid mass, which never recovered.

Carnations are abundant and selling slowly; in lots of 1,000 they are offered as low as $15 and $20. Roses are far better, the supply being just about equal to the demand, but the call for Beauties is limited. An over-production in Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths is quite noticeable, and quantities remain unsold on the wholesalers' hands. Tulips, Proserpine, Yellow Prince and La Reine, are being received in quantities but sell slowly.

Various Notes.

Wm. Lauch is cutting on a fine crop of carnations.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is receiving yellow Trumpet daffodils of good quality.

T. M. Ulam had a busy week in funeral work.

Breitenstein & Flemm made a lavish window display of violets and baby primroses last week.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had several pretty decorations the past week.

Randolph & McClements furnished the decorations at the Duquesne Club, last Saturday, for the annual dinner of the heads of departments of the Carnegie Steel Co.

E. C. Ludwig is issuing an artistic and costly floral album. The album contains new and original designs of his own handiwork.

After the installation of the officers of the Florists' Club at the next meeting, Tuesday, February 2, a "smoker" will be held. The committee is C. C. Reine-man and Gustav Ludwig, who are making arrangements for a good time. Mr. Reine-man wants all members of the club to attend and come prepared to smoke a pipe, sing a song, dance a jig, or tell a story. Boys, refreshments will be served, so don't eat your suppers before.

C. T. Siebert, the inventor of the zinc glazing point, reports a heavy demand for this article.

Hoo-Hoo.

PHILADELPHIA FARMERS.

Gardeners, florists and farmers will meet in Horticultural Hall on January 19, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. Edwin Lonsdale will preside and Ernest Hemming will deliver an address on "The Old Fashioned Flower Garden." T. H. Peachy will talk on "The Making of Farmers." J. Otto Thilow will discuss "Improvements in Vegetables." James Boyd will describe a recent trip through Syria and Egypt. Other papers to be read are "Lawns and Lawn Making," by Professor R. Carleton Ball; "Value of Our Native Birds to the Farmer," by Professor Franklin Menges; "Soil Improvements," by Mr. Peachy; "Attractive Home Surroundings and Their Value," by J. Ogelsby Paul; "Insect Friends and Foes of the Farmer," by Professor Menges, and "Alaska, Land of the Midnight Sun," by ex-Senator Harlan. The question box for problems to be solved is in charge of G. C. Watson.

OMAHA.

Christmas trade was up to the mark; every store man and grower is satisfied. There seemed to be no favorites. Whatever was offered, if nice and worth the money, was sold. Some nice Begonia Gloire de Lorraine were seen at A. Donaghue, Jr.'s new store, along with several plants of English holly in tubs. Azaleas and all plants in bloom sold very rapidly; in fact, more pot-plants were sold than ever before.

The supply of cut flowers was equal to the demand, with carnations leading, a trifle higher than last year.

Holly, roping and mistletoe were very plentiful; in fact, a glut of the latter. One commission house disposed of 16,000 yards of roping. J. H. B.

THE BEST BRIGHT PINK
CARNATION IN SIGHT.
IT NEVER BURSTS.

This will be sure to become a standard commercial variety on account of its fine color, good form, size, stem and floriferousness. Nothing we have ever had on our place could touch it in blooming. Every shoot a flower stem and never off crop. Stands a foot above Lawson throughout the season and is easy to manage. The color is much brighter than Joost but not so dark as Lawson in the dark days of winter. It keeps its bright color.

TORONTO.

The Market.

We have had genuine winter weather with the thermometer hovering between 10 and 20 degrees below zero day and night and an occasional brisk breeze to help it along. However, at the time of writing there appears to be a change and bright days with moderately cold nights will very materially reduce the amount of coal that our florists are consuming. One of our brothers who is somewhat inclined to scoff, made the remark the other day, when asked how he was feeling, "Oh, I'm all right, but my coal pile has the 'galloping consumption.'"

The lack of sunshine we note has made itself felt considerably on carnations, which are very soft at present and many complaints are being made about stock not keeping, while some growers tell us that their great trouble is to get anything to keep. Roses are somewhat overplentiful, especially No. 2 stock, which seems to be more abundant than anything else.

Various Items.

We note among the other improvements in the floral trade in Toronto the new wagon put into commission by John McKerrighan, the west end florist.

Some comment has been heard of late about the number of bottles of the "Old Scotch" that were distributed by our wholesale men among their retail customers at Christmas. We have this to say, that the weather since has been such as to fully warrant this friendly act.

We regret very much that in reporting J. S. Simmons' Christmas business last week, an error was made. While Mr. Simmons' business was everything that could be desired, the $500 mentioned should not have been used in that connection. D. J.

SALT LAKE CITY.

Everything is dull here at present, owing to the cold weather now prevailing in Utah. During the holidays business was good and went far beyond expectations. The holly trade has passed out of the hands of the florists, the grocery and candy stores handling in large quantities, both loose and made up in wreaths, much to the discomfiture of those to whom the business legitimately belongs.

We are looking for a big spring trade for all the business men here are confident of a very prosperous year. H. T.

Skinner's Patent System of IRRIGATION.

NOW INTRODUCED FOR THE FIRST TIME.

Entirely new and incomparably superior to hose or circular spray systems of watering. Is equally adapted to a flower bed or a 1000-acre field. The only system that never has to be taken down and is always ready for use. It is an improvement on the natural rainfall in that it is never applied too fast. The easiest and cheapest to put up and the easiest and cheapest to operate. Has been in use in the inventor's garden for the past 6 years and so has been thoroughly tested. Is endorsed by all who have tried it.

We shall be pleased to send our illustrated circular to all interested and will quote special prices to introduce. Address for further information.....

OCEANIC, N. J.

The meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held January 8, President Turner in the chair. One new member was elected. The discussion of the evening was "The Forcing of Lilacs and Azaleas," in which most of the members took part. Two tables of flowers were shown. H. A. Kettel, gardener to James Loeb, had five varieties of tulips, some narcissi, Bride and Maid and Golden Gate roses in grand form. William Turner, gardener for M. C. D. Borden, showed carnations Enchantress, Lawson, Bradt, Prosperity, Queen, Lorna, Roosevelt and Governor Wolcott. Mr. Turner has about the best carnations in this vicinity and his Enchantress are exceptionally fine. N. Butterbach, gardener for C. N. Bliss, had Lawson, Prosperity, White Bradt, Manley and a seedling, a soft pink, unique in its shade, which scored 95 points and bids fair to surpass Lawson in shape, color and substance. George H. Hale showed a big vase of poinsettias, which are not easily excelled. Mr. Hale was asked to give a few points on the culture of same, which I am sure were a benefit to every one present. The judges for the night were W. W. Kennedy, John Kennedy and W. H. Griffiths. The society decided to hold its meetings twice a month during the winter, as previously. The eighth annual ball of the society will be held on February 12.

CANANDAIGUA, N. Y.

Business here during the holidays was all that could be desired, plants and cut flowers selling equally well. Carnations were in short supply, while roses and violets were about equal to the demand. Trade has held up very well since Christmas, with never at any time enough cut flowers to go around.

McKerr & Hawley have had two very fine decorations since Christmas, the most important being for the Sutherland-Smith wedding, which was the largest affair of its kind which has taken place here in many years. Robert H. McKerr put up the decorations in both house and church. This firm is growing some very good carnations and roses.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00,
carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

Novelties In Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bratt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Handling the Cuttings.

Some of the cuttings you put into sand early last month will be rooted by this time and you should pot them as soon as they are ready. Most propagators put their cuttings from four to six times closer together in the sand than they would plant them after they are rooted. After they are rooted they at once begin to grow and if they are allowed to grow much they draw up quite rapidly and it takes but a short while for them to draw up into spindling weak cuttings that are hardly worth potting. Then, again, the growth will be thin and weak for lack of nourishment, which is nearly always absent in the propagating sand. While the cutting has no roots it needs only water to keep it fresh, but after the roots are formed it is a plant and requires the same food as any growing plant. If these foods were found in any quantity in the sand the cutting would rot in most cases.

After the cuttings are rooted we withhold the water a little in order to prevent the cuttings from becoming soft and watery which they will do quickly if the sand is kept as wet as while they are rooting. Don't let them get very dry, however, as that will harden them too much and perhaps stunt them. Also, if possible, let the sun strike them all day for a few days before you take them up. They will suffer less if hardened off just enough so that they are not too sappy.

Many growers plant the cuttings into flats about two inches apart and plant from them into the field, while others pot them from these flats a few weeks before planting-out time. We believe in planting from pots and if you will do it the latter plan is all right, but so often you start out with intention of doing it and when the time comes for the potting, you are busy, room is scarce and the young plants are growing nicely, and so the potting is omitted and the young plants go from the flats into the field. The next fall, when your plants won't lift with any ball to them, you swear that you will never plant again except from pots, but the next spring it goes the same way again. We have been in the same boat, but we have learned from the experience. Up to the latter part of January we pot into small pots, 2-inch or less, and from these about March we shift into 2½ or 3-inch pots, according to variety, etc. From about February 1 on we pot right into 2½-inch pots and they usually do very well in them until planted in the field.

A light, well ventilated house is just as essential to growing these young plants as it is to the blooming plants. Many growers have a mum house and where these can be used for the young carnations you can give them just what they want. The temperature should be rather lower than higher than the blooming stock is kept at. They should grow slowly and stockily and this can only be in a cool temperature, say between 45 and 48 degrees. I would not advocate a lower temperature than 45 degrees, as below that you would have trouble in keeping the atmosphere dry, and the young plants enjoy a dry atmosphere as well as the older ones. If you have only your carnation houses you can no doubt find a bench in one of the coolest houses that has yielded the greatest part of its season's crop, or perhaps some variety has not done very well and you will be glad to throw it out. Take the soil and all out and put either sand or sifted cinders on the bench to set the of the novelties as they arrive. If you follow his advice you will have little trouble. I just want to emphasize what he says about not placing these young cuttings in a forcing house in order to get a cutting off of each plant, but rather grow each cutting into a sturdy young plant that will be able to show what the variety really is. Not long ago I heard a large grower say that last spring he bought 200 Enchantress, but when he planted them in the field he had just about 800 of them. Think how he must have pushed them and slaughtered them after they had made a big growth. Don't you believe that he will be one of the first ones ready to throw it out on account of disease and deterioration? I won't tell you his name, but I will remember that remark if he ever complains along that line. It sometimes happens that you can get a cutting from a young plant that is grown cool if it was propagated quite early, but they should not be forced along with that object in view.

Some of the novelties are arriving and pots on. Never set the pots on soil, as the roots will go down into the soil and the plant will feed on that soil, making a large, soft growth, and when you pull them loose the plants will wilt badly. Fishworms are also more troublesome when the pots are set on soil.

Disseminating Novelties.

Mr. Osborn has a good article in last week's issue on caring for the cuttings most of them are nice, clean stock. Some of them are a trifle soft, caused, no doubt, by being rooted rather warm. We will always have more or less of this to contend with, however, as long as we demand our cuttings as early as we do. Everybody wants his cuttings in January or early February and the disseminator is obliged to take many cuttings a week or two before they really ought to be taken and he has to turn on a little extra heat to get them rooted as quickly as possible, and so it goes. We lose our temper if he asks us to wait a couple of weeks because the cuttings are not quite ready and, after being urged to ship as soon as possible by a dozen parties, unless he wants to cancel the orders, he takes them out a week earlier than they should be, and then is when his trouble really commences, and all because he tried to satisfy his customers. And now and again he runs across a man who will unpack the cuttings, pick out the very best ones and, if there are any among them that are not as heavily rooted as might be, send back the few poor ones. Every grower or propagator knows that when he takes a batch of cuttings out of the sand he finds some heavily rooted, others only medium and a few not rooted at all. He knows that those with less roots will grow as well as those with heavy roots and make as good plants, and so he pots all that are rooted at all. You should remember that a novelty roots the same way and unless the disseminator leaves the cuttings in the sand longer than they should be, at the risk of having them draw up and become soft, he is sure to have many with medium roots. If he sends out only heavily rooted cuttings he will soon find himself in poor shape to fill his orders.

Of course you have a right to expect good, clean stock that will grow if given reasonable care, but if a lot comes in poor condition don't ruin them altogether by repacking them and shipping them back, keeping them on the road a week instead of three days. Pot them up and take good care of them. Notify the shipper at once and he is a poor business man who will not be fair enough to replace whatever you lose after taking the best of care of them. Be as considerate toward the disseminator as you can. Remember that he is usually a hard worked man, and that he will do the very best he can to fill all orders satisfactorily. I have assisted in the dissemination of a good many new varieties and I know that on the disseminators' places usually there is nothing that causes as much anxiety as the novelty that is being sent out; anxiety to fill the orders and to fill them satisfactorily; in fact, to satisfy the whole trade.

Unless you buy from some dealer or grower with whom you have had dealings before, you should always state what express company you prefer. He cannot know which one gives you the best service. Don't be offended if he sends you a box C. O. D. if you have never bought of him before. If he knew you better he would not do it. If this were done more there would be less financial embarrassments.

These are all small things in themselves, but I have seen many gray heads that were brought on a few years too early by just such conditions and actions as named above. A. F. J. BAUR.

ANOTHER WORD FOR ADONIS.

James Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Co., writes that "noting the words for Adonis in your last issue, by H. Weber & Sons, I wish to state that our experience with the variety is very similar. We are so favorably impressed with it that we shall grow more of it next year. While our plants are rather weak and not all healthy, we actually believe the blooms that they are producing are superior to anything the introducer ever saw."

BEST PINK CARNATIONS.

Will Mr. Baur tell us what pink carnation is as good and as easy to grow as White Cloud or Flora Hill? Have Mrs. Joost but for some reason it does not do very well with us. White Cloud and Hill do nicely. Z.

When you ask for an easy growing, first-class pink carnation you ask a question that is not so easy to answer. There are several pink carnations on the market that are first-class and there are several that are easy growers, but to find one variety that possesses both of these qualities is another matter. Mrs. Lawson is good, but not easy to grow.

one that does well with you make it your main stand-by and try the new ones as they come out, always in search for one that will do better for you than what you already have. You will never find yourself without a good variety then to take the place of some old favorite that has run its race and is deteriorating in health and quality.

A. F. J. BAUR.

FAIRY RING.

I send herewith a bud of Cerise Queen carnation. Can you inform me as to the cause of the spots on the calyx and foliage? O. A. S.

I think the disease on the specimen sent is what is called fairy-ring. It is caused by a fungus and must be handled accordingly, and as such it spreads readily if not held in check. First, go over your plants and remove all leaves and buds showing signs of it and burn them. Then spray about once each week with the copper and ammonia solution. Give all the ventilation you can, and in fact do all you can to keep the atmosphere dry and sweet. This is a bad disease and should not be allowed to get any headway as it will do a great amount of damage in a very short time and then it is hard to get rid of. Burn every sign of it. A. F. J. BAUR.

BEST WHITE CARNATIONS.

We have not yet found a satisfactory white carnation. Want a medium-sized flower and a healthy productive plant. Have tried Flora Hill, Queen Louise, McGowan, Glacier and Lillian Pond. Is there anything in white with size, shape and productiveness of Frances Joost? I. V. K.

About all I can advise you to do is to keep on trying new varieties until you find one that seems to like your soil and treatment. You may find some variety that is not generally considered very fine that will do extra well with you. Flora Hill and Queen Louise are two very good varieties and Lillian Pond is considered by some a very fine white. With us it has done fairly well this year. Innocence is troubled some with bacteria this year but otherwise we think well of it. Her Majesty is a very fine variety we think. The bloom is of good average size and it is extremely free. The color is not pure white, but a little creamy, with a few light pink stripes. I have seen Boston Market growing on several places, and it seems to be a good mate for Mrs. Joost in size, habit and freedom. I have seen most of this year's novelties in white growing and all are promising, but you will have to test them for yourself to find out which is best for you to grow. Try a few of each.

A. F. J. BAUR.

FOR SUMMER BLOOMS.

Last season I set out, for summer bloom, several hundred carnations. They were propagated in October and planted out early. They grew into fine, large, healthy plants, but produced very few blooms. The varieties were Flora Hill, Joost, Crocker and White Cloud. The soil was a heavy alluvial loam. I am very anxious indeed to grow carnations in the field and believe it is a question nator as you can. Remember that he is usually a hard worked man, and that he will do the very best he can to fill all orders satisfactorily. I have assisted in the dissemination of a good many new varieties and I know that on the disseminators' places usually there is nothing that causes as much anxiety as the novelty that is being sent out; anxiety to fill the orders and to fill them satisfactorily; in fact, to satisfy the whole trade.

Unless you buy from some dealer or grower with whom you have had deal-

Mrs. Nelson is good and grows easily, but it is hard to propagate. We consider Floriana right good and easy to manage. These we consider the best among the standard varieties, but we place our own variety, Indianapolis, ahead of all other bright pink varieties, for easy management, freedom of bloom, and general excellence in quality. It is our main pink for cut blooms.

As I have said in another answer today, you will just have to try the different varieties yourself until you find one that suits you, and when you find of soil. Is that the reason my plants did not bloom?

K. C.

I am at loss to know just what could have caused your carnation plants to refuse to bloom last summer. The varieties were all right except White Cloud, which is not a good summer bloomer. If you set out good young plants and they grew into fine large plants there was nothing wrong with the soil, I am sure. Perhaps you make the mistake of topping them after planting them out. Or perhaps they did not get enough rain to keep them growing through the hot weather. Blooming carnations need to be handled differently from plants that are to be housed for winter blooming. You should be prepared to supply them abundantly with water through the summer and keep them growing when the others are taking their summer nap. I am inclined to think that either one or both of above mentioned reasons were at the bottom of your trouble. You must bear in mind, too, that you must not expect them to produce a crop in midsummer like they do in the houses.
A. F. J. BAUR.

A SWING AROUND THE CIRCLE.

It is the custom for one of the Dailedouze brothers, of Flatbush, N. Y., to take a trip each year to the principal carnation growing points, as far west as Chicago, and usually it is Paul Dailedouze who makes the swing around the circle. His visits are always welcome, for he usually leaves more new information than he takes away. He told the Chicago Florists' Club what he had seen in his travels and here are some of the things he said:

Leaving Brooklyn, his first stop was at Cincinnati, where R. Witterstaetter has large batches of seedlings under test. Mr. Dailedouze considers several of them very promising, particularly No. 820, a red which he thinks an all-round better thing than Adonis.

At E. G. Hill's, Richmond, he found a house of Adonis which was a splendid sight, in as good shape as anyone could ask, and he concluded that it would not do to pass this variety up without another trial. He was confirmed in this opinion by what he saw at the Chicago Carnation Company's place.

He visited the Mrs. Grave place at Richmond, to see if he could learn how to do McKinley, which has proved a disappointment at Flatbush. He also called on Chas. Knopf, formerly foreman at the Grave place, now a member of the firm known as the B. K. & B. Floral Co. Their stock looks good.

Reverting to the Hill place he said that they have a red seedling rose that looks to him to be an all-round better thing than Liberty. It has the color, more petals, better growth, and it is said to keep going all winter.

At Indianapolis Mr. Dailedouze was favorably impressed with Baur & Smith's new pink and advised that it be tried.

Going to Dorner's he was well pleased with both Lady Bountiful and The Belle. He thinks each worth a trial, but prefers the former for his own use.

At W. N. Rudd's he liked the white he is growing, also Phyllis, the light pink, and said the latter ought to have a good place beside Enchantress wherever a shipping trade is done, for he heard many complaints that Enchantress will not ship satisfactorily.

He liked the looks of the stock in the big cut flower plants around Chicago, several of which he visited.

Going out to Joliet he was well pleased with Crusader, but he was all eyes for Fiancee, a few plants of which he had seen at Dorner's. He says that there is nothing in sight to equal it.

THE BRENNEMAN PLANT.

The accompanying half-tone was prepared from a photograph recently taken of the greenhouses of S. S. Brenneman, corner Roan avenue and Joplin street, Webb City, Mo. Mr. Brenneman's principal crop is carnations, but he also grows roses, ferns, green goods, etc. He reports a fine holiday trade both at the greenhouses and his retail store at Joplin, Mo.

A WINNING COMBINATION.

Kindly discontinue our Carlson's aster seed advertisement. Although we have had this in your paper only one week, our stock is exhausted owing to the exceedingly heavy orders received since our advertisement appeared. We do not know whether this is due to the fact that your paper goes in the hands of so many live florists or because the florists in general recognize the superior quality of this seed.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

During the busy season of propagating and caring for the young stock it frequently happens that the old stock, so long as they appear in good health, are somewhat neglected and left to take care of themselves in a great measure.

Proper attention to training so that every flower stem may be kept in an upright position and have the buds as fully exposed to light and as free circulation of air as possible, will result in a larger cut of high grade blooms. Neglect in this respect particularly at this season is conducive to the growth of weak, sprawly wood, which, if it does not come blind, will only produce weak necks and these are year by year, as cultural methods improve, becoming less marketable.

To secure a nice straight stem with perfect foliage and well developed bud the lateral shoots should be removed while they are yet young and soft. If they are allowed to remain long enough on the stem to become hard and woody they have by that time used a great deal of the nourishment which should properly have gone to develop the bud. The stem also will be more or less kneed, which spoils its gracefulness and detracts from its value.

Could we thoroughly realize the importance of cleanliness and pure air and how closely these conditions are associated with health, the ground under the benches and the walks would be as free of weeds and decaying matter as the soil on the benches. Were these matters more closely studied there would be fewer diseases, and as weeds and rubbish are the favorite sheltering places of thrips and red spider, if these are rigidly excluded, these pests will be easier kept in subjection.

We can now expect an increase in the duration of sunshine from day to day and can with more confidence resort to liquid feeding. This can now be applied to healthy stock more frequently, adding a little to its strength as the season advances. Mulching should also be renewed when necessary. Ventilation can also be given more freely and advantage should be taken of every bright day to admit plenty of fresh air, as this is one of the most essential requirements of health. While this is being practiced due care must be taken to guard against sudden and extreme fluctuations of temperature, as this is a fertile source of mildew. These sudden changes also seriously affect the tender growths, causing checks which often result in malformed buds, especially in Beauty crops, and causing black heads in Meteors, which, when once started, are hard to bring back to good color again.

At this season any neglect in the weekly fumigation will be followed by the appearance of hosts of green-fly which now multiply rapidly and which will greatly add to our troubles and call for more energetic efforts to again get them under subjection. RIBES.

SPIRAEA JAPONICA.

We have about thirty pots of Spiraea japonica which were planted about the first of November and put immediately into the propagating house. About the first of December we moved them into the rose house. Only one has shown any signs of leaves. The roots look strong and healthy. Please tell us how they should be treated. L. L. B.

We think there is nothing the matter with the spiraea roots, only a great mistake was made. If they were imported roots you must have put them into the propagating house directly after they were received. It's simply a case of their having no rest and they will take a few weeks' rest in spite of the heat you gave them. So many times has the very simple operation of forcing the spiraea been written up in the columns of the REVIEW that I don't understand how you have escaped it. "Read, mark and inwardly digest" all you see in the REVIEW and you won't make many mistakes. By this time most likely your spiraeas will be showing signs of growth and if you want them for Easter, and that's the only time they are profitable, it will likely still be too early unless you keep them cool and shaded during the month of March. Next fall unpack and place in flats with a little soil or litter over the crowns and keep them under the snow and allow about ten weeks in the greenhouse to bring them into flower. W. S.

ROSES A SECOND YEAR.

We purchased last year a very fine stock of roses from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind. The roses are in very fine condition and as they are not quite a year old, I hate to throw them away this year. They are in excellent condition, and have been blooming well this season. Now, the question arises, can we grow these roses another year by giving them three or four week's rest in May? Will they pay us in the cut flower business, and will we get good results from same the coming season? C. E. S.

This is a question which is propounded to me several times a year. It does seem like a sacrifice to throw out stock just when it looks to be approaching its best, but experience teaches us that there is greater risk of failure, more work and skill required to carry a house over with profit than in handling young stock. Most of us have given way to this feeling from time to time, and many have been the attempts to do this successfully. Some have succeeded fairly well in carrying them over, not only one season, but three or four. One grower of my acquaintance has a house which is three years old, and so well is he satisfied with his experiment that he contemplates carrying it over yet another season.

The majority of these experiments, however, are usually so much of a failure that one trial is all we care to risk. Personally, I favor young stock, as by this method I have had most success and have seen more success attending well handled young stock than with carried over stock however skilfully handled.

I have a theory that in the future our cultural methods will so improve that carried over stock will be the rule, as it is among English growers. This, however, being in the experimental stage, is a subject for experts and as experiments are simply a groping after knowledge and are therefore liable to failure, it is safer for the ordinary grower to abide by established and certain methods if he wishes to avoid such. RIBES.

SOFT GROWTH.

We have Bride and Bridesmaid roses that are growing nicely, but the trouble is that when a bud sets on a cane it stands open, with stumpy green petals. By leaving it on it makes a tolerably fair rose, but is wide open. The side branches of the same plants make good buds and roses. We used rotted sod, four parts to one of manure, with ten pounds of bone meal to 100 square feet of bench. What is the trouble and the remedy? C. H. H.

Those canes which are produced from or near the base of the plant during the short and sunless days are frequently so devoid of woody fiber that they are incapable of developing the buds properly. Cutting them back to the eyes which are likely to produce the strongest lateral shoots is the most profitable way to treat them. As this condition is most prevalent where the soil is deficient in calcareous matter, a sprinkling of lime has often a very beneficial effect. As the days lengthen, accompanied by a longer duration of sunshine, when ventilation can be more freely given, the wood will be of a better quality, and the defect will disappear. RIBES.

THE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—Radishes, 20 to 45 cents per dozen bunches. Cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.10 dozen. Lettuce, head, $1 to $3.25 barrel.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—Cucumbers, 20 cents to $1 dozen. Lettuce, 25 to 75 cents dozen. Radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches. Rhubarb, 75 to 85 cents dozen. Mushrooms, 10 to 50 cents pound. Tomatoes, 10 to 20 cents pound.

BIG VEGETABLE HOUSES.

The illustrations of the W. H. Weinschenk greenhouses, at New Castle, Pa., in this issue show what may well be said to be the most remarkable vegetable forcing houses in this country. The nearer house, of which only a part is seen in the photograph, is 60x200, the further house 80x200. As is seen, the houses stand on a side hill, the grade being steepest under the narrower house and four inches to the foot under the house which is eighty feet wide. A cross section of this house is also shown, illustrating the style of construction. Under the long slope there is a line of purlins every six feet, the roof being seven feet six inches from the ground at the ridge and four feet at the south gutter. The ridge is twenty-seven feet and eight inches above the south (lower) gutter, but Mr. Weinschenk says he finds no trouble in ventilating or in heating. There are twenty-three four-foot ventilator sash, each the width of four lights of 20-inch glass, along the south side of the ridge, and in the side wall there is a continuous line of 20x30 ventilators.

Both houses have solid beds, made of swamp muck twelve inches deep, liberally enriched with cow manure. In the nearer house there are four beds, each twelve feet wide, each bed elevated four feet above the one south of it by a retaining wall. No walks are provided, a line of 6-inch boards being laid along the center of each bed before planting, for convenience in setting plants and watering while the crop is being started. The wider house is on the same plan as the other except that there are no retaining walls, there being a gradual rise of four inches to the foot.

The narrower house is heated by a No. 8 sectional steam boiler, by the overhead system, having one 3-inch main and eight 1¼-inch flows near the glass, the same returning about fifteen inches from the ground. The bottom bed has about forty per cent of this piping, there being proportionately less as the house rises, it being obvious that on account of the sharp incline the heat rises quickly to the top. Nevertheless, an even temperature is maintained, varying but little except for a few feet at the bottom wall in severe weather. The wider house is heated by a No. 10 sectional steam boiler, with one 3-inch main and eleven 1¼-inch flows and returns distributed as described for the other house.

Both these houses are devoted to vegetables, growing three or four crops of lettuce and one of cucumbers from October to June, or beginning with cucumbers in September, followed by two crops of lettuce and ending the season with another crop of cucumbers. Mr. Weinschenk says these houses are especially adapted for these crops and under favorable conditions, with good stocky plants, lettuce is usually ready in about six to seven weeks in mid-winter, often averaging ten to twelve ounces each. Grand Rapids is the variety grown, planted 8x8 inches. But cucumbers are the most profitable crop, the plants fruiting heavily in the fine light. Mr. Weinschenk built the wider house after having tested the other, the plans and material being supplied by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago. He says that he is satisfied that where these wide houses can be erected they possess many advantages over a range of smaller ones, getting much more light by eliminating shade from gutters or walls. There is also economy in construction and heating and Mr. Weinschenk says they are much more convenient to work in.

TOMATOES.

I can sell a good many tomatoes during June and July. How long does it take from the time the flower is set until the fruit is ready to pick? Can I grow them in pots and plant out about May 20? What size pot would be required and how far advanced would the plants have to be at that time? It is intended to grow them to one or two stems. What variety would be best and when should seed be sown?

L. N.

The time between the setting of the flower and ripening of the fruit depends so much on the weather that no definite time could be specified, but under average conditions it would probably be from six to eight weeks. Seeds should be sown not later than the middle of February, and the plants kept growing on and moved up without a check. They will need 8-inch pots before the time of planting out. We grew a lot with this same end in view last year and they proved quite a success. Although the plants could have been held over in 6-inch pots we considered that the larger shift was necessary to avoid a check which would have resulted if the plants had been pot-bound at time of planting out. Even with this precaution and careful hardening off before planting out they lost quite a few of the bottom leaves, but it did not interfere with the ripening of the fruit, several trusses of which were set on the plants while still in the pots. As to variety the most productive one we had was Sterling Castle, though the fruit of this was rather small. Lorillard was good, the fruit being larger. I chose these two varieties because I knew they were free setters, but I should think any good early variety would act all right.

W. S. CROYDON.

PARSLEY.

This is one vegetable that no one need be in any doubt about growing, as it always finds a ready sale, being universally used by all sorts and conditions of people. The thrifty housewife would not consider her soup complete unless she used a few blades of parsley to flavor it, neither would the high-class chef consider many of the numerous creations of his fertile brain complete unless garnished by the same indispensable green: for him there is nothing just as good; it must be parsley and parsley only. And, this on the "q. t.," when the cook has been filling her hollow tooth with something that makes her breath smell suspicious, there is nothing that will counteract the odor quicker than the chewing of a blade of parsley. These and many other uses to which parsley can be put combine to create a demand that must be supplied.

To supply this demand in winter requires a little forethought, as parsley is somewhat slow in the earlier stages of its growth. When sown in spring in the open ground it does not require so long to attain sufficient size to be fit for use, but during fall and winter it takes about four months from seed to produce fully matured leaves. The best time to sow for winter use is during the month of July. Any garden spot, where the soil is fairly good, will suit. The soil should be forked over and well pulverized, the surface being smoothly raked. Sow rather thinly in shallow drills about one foot apart. Firm the soil well over the seeds and if the soil be dry give a good watering. All the attention needed until time to take indoors will be to keep clear of weeds and water occasionally if dry weather prevails. No thinning should be necessary unless the seeds have been sown too thickly.

About the middle of October is a good time to lift the plants, before danger of hard frost. A little frost will not do them any harm but the less they get the fresher they will be. When crowded for space we have often kept the plants protected by covering with boards at night until after the chrysanthemums were cleared from the benches. Lift with a spade in clumps and set about the same distance apart as they were outside. Pack moderately firm in the benches, give a good watering and shade for a day or two until they have taken to their new quarters. Once well established an occasional watering with liquid manure or a top-dressing of sheep manure will help to push the growth along.

Parsley will not stand hard forcing. A night temperature of from 40 to 45 degrees is quite high enough, a higher temperature only induces soft growth, with leaves of thin texture and is almost sure to bring on attacks of aphids. These will sometimes put in their appearance, even at a low temperature, but a few tobacco stems spread between the rows and renewed occasionally will prevent any trouble from this source. Tobacco powder should never be used, as the formation of the leaves makes it very hard to wash off and tobacco is not a desirable flavor for any kind of soup. If it is intended to keep up the supply until the outdoor article is ready it can be done in two ways. Either sow seeds in cold frames about the end of July and winter over for spring use or sow in flats about November and make a fresh plantation in the benches when the plants are large enough. The plants from which the winter supply has been picked are apt to run to seed by about the beginning of April, so they can be dispensed with then and the supply procured from the younger stock or from the frames. It is short sighted policy to pick too closely at any one time. If the plants are hard cut back growth will be stunted and both quantity and quality considerably reduced.

VIOLETS.

Seasonable Notes.

Well, if the holiday season lately past is not a lesson to the violet grower, then I think he will never learn wisdom by experience, for, according to all reports, both as to the quantities picked and the prices received for same, the violet business is very greatly overdone, and one would well think twice (or three times) before increasing his glass devoted to violets, or starting to grow them, unless for his own trade, where the demand is assured and for which he now has to buy. The day is past when the grower should hold all he can for these special days. Far better is it to send in a rather heavy supply for a week or two previous, for, like this year, the price is likely to be better then than on the day itself. This, of course, has reference to the grower consigning to a wholesale market.

The Moore, Hentz & Nash Silver Cup.

Have you been over your houses now since you finished your holiday picking, cleaning up all the old leaves, looking after the sow bugs, snails, aphids, etc.? If not, do not neglect it, as an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Look the borders over carefully, pull out and burn any questionable plants, any that are not right healthy and that did not yield a good crop of flowers for the holidays, as you do not wish to propagate from any such plants. If you fail to do this now they will soon be starting with their spring growth, and the first thing you know, when you go to making cuttings, you may not be able to tell these poor plants from the others; in fact, they frequently make the larger growth and the greater quantity of cuttings.

It will soon be time to take cuttings, and here, again, if you wish nice healthy stock, do not make the mistake of thinking any old sand will do for this that you have used for the past year or so. Have nice, fresh, clean sand that has never before been used and is not full of germs and a good propagating place for disease.

Keep your temperature as nearly even as is possible. Of course it takes a little extra care this season, when the thermometer outdoors goes from 22 degrees below zero to 32 above in perhaps twenty-four hours' time, but this is one of the violet grower's pleasant experiences.

While we are having no bright, clear days as yet, still we should have them before long, and then you will find that the watering may be done a little oftener, also a little more heavily, as a good bright sun will use up water fast, especially when the ventilators are open. To keep your violets of good size and good color watch your ventilators and heating pipes closely, for if you do not and let the stock get too warm you will soon run the plants out and get off crop, lose color and stem, etc., and of course you wish to hold till Easter is over, when you have no further use for them.

R. E. SHUPHELT.

MADISON, N. J.

The annual smoker of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held on Wednesday evening, January 13, and passed off with the usual great success. A short business session was first held, when the newly elected officers took their stations, as follows: President, Wm. McMillan; vice-president, M. McNulty; treasurer, Wm. Charlton; secretary, Samuel Redstone. The report of the treasurer showed that all bills were paid and that a balance of over $500 remains in the treasury, an encouraging condition of finance compared with many societies operating in a larger circle. During the business session Mr. Herrington presented the silver cup of Messrs. Moore, Hentz & Nash to the fortunate winner, J. F. Rusicka. In explanation of this award it should be stated that for several years the firm above mentioned has made it its business to award silver medals to the actual growers of the first prize exhibits of roses and chrysanthemums at the annual exhibition. This is, so far as I know, the only prize in the country that is given solely as an encouragement to the "man behind the gun," and Messrs. Moore, Hentz & Nash deserve the praise that is so frequently given them for this kindly action. This year Mr. Rusicka was fortunate enough to win three out of the four medals, and consequently it was decided to buy him a silver cup suitably engraved as a fitting memento of the occasion. The other medal, for the chrysanthemums, was won by Samuel Redstone, the genial secretary, who also won it last year. Mr. Herrington also made a presentation to J. Austin Shaw, the representative of the REVIEW, which on investigation proved to be an immense bunch of celery. Thereby hangs a tale, but as Kipling remarks, "that's another story."

The evening was wretched and the out-of-town attendance, as might be expected, rather slim on that account, but those who did attend were well repaid. The claret punch, for which this club is famous, was in evidence, brewed by A. Herrington and C. H. Totty, and rumor has it that some of the boys are not yet down to normal conditions.

The entertainers were fine and the only thing to be regretted was the fact that Mr. Duckham, always a shining light at this event, was on this occasion confined to his bed with sickness.

FUNERAL BUNCH OF CALLAS.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a funeral bunch of callas arranged with their own foliage. In addition to the open flowers a number of buds were used, and these added materially to the beauty of the arrangement, though they do not show very plainly in the photograph. Callas are generally considered very difficult to arrange gracefully, but this difficulty can be overcome by the use of buds and foliage. And there is no foliage—coarse though it be—that will combine so effectively with these flowers as that with which they are associated on the plant. The foliage of the calla lasts quite as well as the flowers if the stems have been stood in water for a few hours previous to using.

In response to a discriminating demand on the part of the public foliage is being more and more freely used in floral combinations as well as in decorations, and the wise florist will provide a supply of suitable material, and will not confine himself to ferns, smilax and asparagus.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has invited the Chrysanthemum Society of America to hold its next annual convention and exhibition in Horticultural Hall, in Boston, November 3 to 6, 1904, in conjunction with the annual exhibition of that society. This invitation has been unanimously accepted by the executive board of the Chrysanthemum Society.

An invitation was also received from the American Institute to repeat the success of last fall, in New York, and although the officers and executive committee fully appreciate the kindness of the American Institute in extending this invitation, they feel that it will be for the good of the society to change the location every year, if possible.

We are expecting next November the greatest show ever held, and every effort will be put forth to accomplish this result.

FRED H. LEMON, Sec'y.

THE USE OF CYANIDE.

In an article on the use of hydrocyanic acid gas for fumigating, W. S. gives, page 318, issue for January 7, the following formula and directions:

- 1 quart sulphuric acid.
- 1 quart water.
- 5 ounces cyanide of potassium.

Mix the acid and water in a two-gallon butter jar. When your jars are all in place walk along and drop in the five-ounce parcels of cyanide. Don't linger over the jar, because the fumes are not healthy for anything that has lungs. The above quantities are for 2,000 cubic feet of air space in the house. Keep the house closed all night.

Commenting on this Albert F. Woods, pathologist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, writes:

In houses with not more than two paths or where not more than two or three sets of jars, two or three in each set, are required, it is possible to put the cyanide in the jars in the manner described. The dose for each jar should be carefully wrapped, however, in two thicknesses of ordinary newspaper, or may be put in a small paper sack. It takes the acid about half a minute to eat through the paper and attack the potassium cyanide. If one operator works on each line of jars and they will start at the same end of the house and come out at the other end this method may be safely used.

There seems to be an implication in the statement of W. S. that he is not much afraid of this gas. He says: "There seems to be a dread of this gas with many people, and on the part of some whose opinion and experience I am bound to respect." The dread of the gas exhibited by all people who know its qualities is well justified. It is perhaps the most poisonous gas known and causes death almost as quickly as electrocution. It is quite true that the inhalation of a very small quantity of it may do no serious harm, but, like all other poisons, it must be used with the greatest caution, and carelessness on the part of an operator is not justified. It is perfectly safe to use the gas if the proper precautions are followed, but no laxity in observing the strictest precautions should be allowed. I do not mean by this that it is not safe to drop cyanide into the jars by hand if the cyanide is carefully wrapped and if the operators all start at one end of the house and work toward the other, care being taken that no operator is cut off by dropping the cyanide into a jar between the operator and the exit. Of course, it might be possible in such case for the operator to hold his breath and get out, but if he did not think to hold his breath he would probably draw his last one very quickly.

Five ounces of cyanide of potassium to 2,000 cubic feet is about half the strength usually recommended for double violets, but we do not recommend leaving the gas in the house for longer than thirty minutes. Of course a weaker dose may be left in longer without serious injury if the house is not very tight, but there is always danger of a certain amount of moisture collecting on the leaves of plants as the temperature falls, and any moisture forming on the foliage of any plant exposed to this gas will cause the portion of the leaf having the moisture on it to be injured. The field of use for hydrocyanic acid gas in greenhouse fumigation has been barely opened and it is such tests as W. S. has been making which gradually widen its usefulness. We have been conservative in the recommendation of this gas except under conditions and for crops where we feel that its usefulness has been amply demonstrated, and where used according to directions there is no danger of serious injury to the crop.

TROUBLE WITH VALLEY.

When you told how to handle valley pips as they are imported, you said that if they were dry to dip them in water and then pack in sand or moss. Now I had 12,000 valley pips that I packed without dipping and they are all right. But I had 5,000 come two weeks later and, as I thought they were a little dry, I dipped them and every one of them rot when they are brought in. Can you tell me the cause? Would they be any better to let them go till spring and then use them? J. J. L.

There must be some other cause than the dipping to account for all these pips rotting. As it was this pen that recommended the dipping, I did not intend to imply a soaking; just dipped a moment to wet the roots before packing away in soil if they were dry, and if that is all that was done it is impossible that it could in the least injure the pips. If not protected from rains and a wet, rainy time occurs, the pips are often injured. The lily of the valley is one of the hardiest of all the beautiful flowers we force, yet if exposed to a sudden severe freeze and then a quick thaw, they will be greatly injured, as many hardy plants will be.

If they are soft and rot when brought in, it is not likely they will improve with age, but as they are not taking up valuable space leave them for April forcing.

We have been receiving weekly all summer a few hundred valley pips from an eastern firm. Scarcely one per cent failed to give us a fine spike. It was a most satisfactory arrangement. About December 1 we received 1,000 for our Christmas batch and on unpacking them we found the pips about of the consistency that a Teutonic epicure likes his Limburger cheese. The cause we do not know. The stock was not hurt in transit. Perhaps the cold storage house was let down suddenly to a very low temperature, but more likely the accident occurred during the time after they left the cold room and before they were packed. W. S.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Art in Floral Designing.

EDITOR REVIEW: In the columns of your really inspiring paper I have read with pleasure the masterly articles of Miss Gertrude Blair. Without doubt we who "make up" flowers for a living, dull the keen edge of our artistic perception in studying the individual desires of our patrons, but is this not one of the most essential features of "floral designing"? For if we are not successful in this, will we be successful in any way long? Most of us, in all probability after dinner, or in the cafe chantant, like to allow our imagination to fashion misty sprays and garlands as the smoke floats upward, but behind our counters in the morning when our pipe is out we will find ourselves at the same metaphysical study of what our patron imagines she wants, and how much we can safely make her pay for it; and if she is German and an old flower buyer we will probably not forget to put on lots of tin foil and make it about as we did ten years ago. ALFRED DONAGHUE, JR.

Greenhouse Heating.

In your issue of December 24 appears an article by William Scott on hot water heating and in it Mr. Scott raises several points that are at variance with the ideas held by your humble servant, and I should feel much obliged if Mr. Scott would go further into the matter with me.

In the first place he seems to maintain that the only power which induces circulation in the system is that of gravitation in the returns. How about the water becoming lighter under the influence of heat and thus rising to the highest point? Surely this is as important a factor as the gravitation back to the boiler. And yet he seems to take some account of this force, for, in speaking of the uphill system, he mentions that the water being cooler at ninety feet from the boiler, presses back on the lighter water, thus impeding circulation.

And now to the point that causes me to rush madly in where angels fear to tread. This perpendicular drop. A column of water thirty feet high and one inch square weighs about fourteen pounds. If the column be perpendicular the pressure indicated is as given. The same pressure will be shown if the column be placed at any angle so long as the thirty feet head is maintained, although the volume of water may be increased manifold. For purposes of argument we will eliminate friction. This primary law of hydrostatics is illustrated in hydraulic mining. Water is brought miles in pipes usually at a very small grade, but the pressure is there just the same. This being so, how can a perpendicular drop in the return close to the boiler be any better than a gradual fall from the highest point? And how can the back pressure that Mr. Scott mentions as existing in the uphill system, when a rise of two feet to the 100 is maintained, be less than when a rise is straight up from the boiler and then only two inches to the 100 feet used in the pipe run? The same elevation is attained in both cases and therefore the same pressure exists. The route that Mr. Scott recommends in the longer course for the water to travel and consequently it will be cooler. It must be distinctly understood that these remarks of mine apply solely to circulation and must not be confounded with arrangement of pipes for economic heating.

The over-head flow that Mr. Scott so summarily dismisses is in my opinion not always to be foregone. Of course a great portion of the heat radiated from it is wasted, but if you happen to have a system in which the circulation is poor you can often remedy the evil by arranging an overhead flow. Lowering the boiler would be better, but the expense would be greatly in favor of the overhead flow.

Twenty-five years ago my first boss advised me to study heating. "My boy," said he, "fortunes are made and lost in the stoke-hole." Since then I have had to do with many systems, some good, some bad, some fearfully and wonderfully constructed. — I once handled a boiler which from a 2-inch delivery fed four 4-inch flows, and the water in the same number of returns came back to the boiler through a 2-foot length of 2-inch pipe. The result can be imagined. In my experience, provided you have a good rise, a sufficient capacity in the main flow and return and a boiler of ample power, it matters little which method you adopt, uphill, downhill or level. EDW. ALEX. WALLACE.

ORANGE, N. J.

At Orange on Friday evening the yearly banquet brought together a large number of the members of the New Jersey Floricultural Society. Visitors were not numerous, apart from Messrs. McMillan, Totty and Redstone, of Madison, and the writer. Letters of regret were read from Messrs. O'Mara, Herrington and Leonard Barron. A fine floral exhibit graced the banquet table. Vases of magnificent carnations were contributed by President George Smith, John Hays, Malcolm Macrorie, Peter Duff and Mr. Kindsgrab, also a fine dendrobium by W. A. Manda and a vase of euphorbia.

At the regular meeting the certificates were distributed to the successful competitors of the year, and further competitions for cups and medals were announced open during 1904 to members of any horticultural society. Jos. Davis was entrusted with the installation of the new officers and did the work gracefully. The popular George Smith was re-elected president, a well won honor; Mr. Kindsgrab, vice-president; Mr. Bennett, secretary, and Malcolm Macrorie, as usual, treasurer. The society is nearing the 100 mark in membership, and ought to reach it in 1904. The four generous associate members of the society will present silver cups, as in 1903, for general competition.

After the banquet speeches and songs continued until the wee sma' hours. When I left, Peter Duff had just finished a melody and John Hays' silver tongue was warbling something about the memories of other days. The opening address by President Smith was a revelation, full of eloquence, poetry and paternal advice, in which he characterized gardening as "the middle ground between God and man, the playground of the soul, the nearest profession to the divine."

Dr. Kitchen was in a story-telling mood and kept the company in a roar throughout his interesting response, as he toasted the press, the pulpit and the petticoats.

Mr. McMillan responded to the toast of the Morris County Society, of which he is president, and was ably seconded by Mr. Totty and Mr. Redstone, of the same society. Mr. Totty discoursed eloquently on the value of co-operation.

W. A. Manda gave one of his practical and advisory addresses and Mr. Davis spoke very entertainingly. Mr. Campbell and Robert McCarty, ex-president, spoke briefly, and the songs of Messrs. Duff and Hays were still ringing in my ears as the whistle of "the last train" sounded the close of a very pleasant evening to the lone New York press representative. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed against Henry Morris, and Charles A. King named as receiver. No schedule of assets and liabilities has been given out.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market seems to have steadied at the quotations given last week and the bottom doubtless has been seen for the winter season. From now until Lent there should be a gradual improvement, and there is little danger of the utterly abnormal conditions that have prevailed since the New Year. It has been Lent for the growers and wholesalers for more than forty days. While the rest of the world is in mourning for their sins let us hope the florists may rejoice. They certainly deserve to and their sins have surely been atoned for.

On Saturday there was a tendency to improve in the special Beauty market. As high as 35 cents was reached by a few of them, though many were cleared out at 25 cents. Lower grades remained quiet, and the short stems were having a hard time of it, and many were unsalable. Bridesmaids hold their own always, good ones, and are the first to feel the upward movement. The best stock found a ready sale at a higher price as the week closed, and the present week with its balls, its notable weddings and its society show in the automobile line should be about the best of the new year to date.

Fine Liberties have held quite as high a value as Beauties lately. The carnation market has been in the dumps in more ways than one. The "dump" has engulfed thousands of the common ones, while the fancy and novelty grades have lost about half their prestige. Even orchids have been too plentiful for the demand and prices have fallen. Tulips, narcissi and hyacinths are abundant, sweet peas also and mignonette. The latter is this season more abundant and worth less than ever before. Violets are swayed by the ebb and flow of demand. In supply there is always an abundance; in quality they are unsurpassed. But the prices are a nightmare and many boxes that go down the line come back unopened. It's a good thing "hope springs eternal in the human breast."

Various Items.

The Young Arion ball last Friday evening was decorated from basement to roof by Hanft Bros., and in addition to azaleas, lilacs, poinsettias and other flowering plants, immense quantities of laurel, hemlock and needle pines were used and twenty cases of wild smilax.

The severe weather continues to add to its victims. William Duckham, of Madison, has been very ill with an abscess of the ear.

J. W. Bebus, of Wm. Elliott & Sons, has just recovered from a ten days' siege with grippe.

John N. May, of Summit, has been confined to the house for a month and convalesces slowly.

W. J. Elliott leaves next week for his annual trip to Bermuda.

Arthur Herrington, president of the Chrysanthemum Society, sails on the Lucania next Saturday for England, mingling business with pleasure.

Weeber & Don report particularly gratifying results from their catalogue and all the wholesale houses have disseminated handsomer catalogues than usual this year in evident anticipation of a continuance of the good times of 1903.

There is a rumor concerning the contemplated plunge of a well-known bachelor into the seething sea of matrimony; a seedsman who has long held out against the attractiveness of the gentler sex.

Too much gas has caused a severe loss in the greenhouses of Geo. M. Stumpp, the Fifth avenue florist.

The slim attendance at the Flatbush alleys on Thursday is partially accounted for by the western trip of Paul Daille-douze among the western carnationists and the fatherly solicitude of Carl Woerner, whose wife presented him with another florist, the boy being his first born and none of Carl's hats large enough to venture out in the freezing weather. Wm. Fogarty also has had a visit from the stork. This also was a boy.

Our old friend James Dean maintains his place in the estimation of his neighbors, having just been honored with the presidency of the Freeport, L. I., Club for the third consecutive year.

Lewis Collins, secretary of the former Brooklyn Tree Planting Society, died Saturday, January 9, aged 71.

The next meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York at the American Institute, will be held the second Wednesday in February, and will be devoted to the subject "Orchids," and by a unanimous vote it was decided to try the holding of meetings in the evenings instead of the afternoons with a view to an enlarged attendance. At the January meeting, the president had on exhibition superb samples of cucumbers, cauliflower, tomatoes, radishes and watercress. The day was stormy and disagreeable and the attendance light, but the program was very interesting and instructive. Henry A. Siebrecht discoursed on ornamental trees, shrubs and plants, giving a practical lecture involving every variety of desirable tree and shrub utilized in American horticulture. T. Withers followed in an interesting address on "Our Native Trees in Landscape," evidencing a thorough, practical knowledge of his subject.

The "smoker" at Madison last Wednesday evening was well attended. Its details will doubtless be covered by your regular correspondent. The vaudeville entertainment was excellent. The chicken, celery and punch of 1904 "vintage," and the formal meeting of the society showed a most prosperous condition of affairs. The presentation of the Moore, Hentz & Nash silver cup to J. F. Rusicka, rose grower for L. A. Noe, of Madison, was a pleasing feature.

Slinn & Hughes report a growing demand for Amaze, Jerome Suydam's fine red carnation, which they say has brought $5 per 100 during the season. Mr. Slinn spent last Sunday with the violet growers of Rhinebeck.

Bonnot Bros., of the Exchange, are handling daily some very fine Golden Gates, which rose is a specialty with them.

Jos. Millang, the Beauty king, says American Beauties will not touch lower prices again this season and that a better business from now on in all lines is confidently anticipated. Joseph and Frank Millang had an all-night fire fight Sunday evening at Bayside, where they reside, and are prominent members of the fire department. Joe says he carried a piano out himself, but rumor says it was the pianist that he saved.

Mr. Kreshover says he is handling an average of 150 cases of wild smilax weekly, and that the demand for all kinds of decorative green goods is quite up to last season.

At the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club, February 8, it has been decided by the executive committee to hold a carnation exhibition, to which an invitation to all carnation growers is cordially extended. The ladies also are invited and a most interesting evening is confidently anticipated. The outing committee met at President Traendly's office on Monday evening and Chas. Schenck was appointed treasurer and Mr. Shaw, secretary. Mr. Elliott, the chairman, was directed to engage the boat and grove utilized last year for the most desirable day possibly the last week in June.

A splendid attendance and much enthusiasm materialized at the first meeting of the New York Bowling Club, Monday evening at the new alleys, Twenty-third street and Tenth avenue. Captain Young has called a meeting for 7:30 sharp next week Monday, when officers will be appointed and all arrangements as to prizes, match games and other interesting features will be then consummated. The bowlers were a little nervous, as the appended records indicate. Another week of practice and there will be a different story. Here are the best games of each participant:

Elliott	109	129	144	157
Craw	130	94	68	...
Haffner	122	177	141	15
Siebrecht	191	158	145	123
Traendly	134	136	141	...
Gibbs	137	158	159	145
Shaw	140	121	108	122
Nugent	70	68	76	84
Wallace	112	106
Butterfield	155	140
Young	139
Ford	126

Thirteen members, altogether, a lucky number. The alleys are very satisfactory. A spirit of fraternity and good will was prevalent and it was midnight before the last of the enthusiasts departed. Sister clubs will be heartily welcomed and every effort made to have the weekly meeting helpful and harmonious. A larger attendance next Monday is requested. At least twenty regulars are expected and there is ample accommodation for all.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Trade has pursued the even tenor of its way this week, with few features out of the common. Beginning last Saturday there was a little stiffening in values, but not enough to count for much. Beauties are not so plentiful as a few weeks ago and quality has deteriorated, particularly in the shorter lengths. Tea roses are now pretty well off crop and good stock commands ready sale at fair prices, but most of it goes out on shipping orders, for local business is still very quiet. There are plenty of carnations but the market is in better shape than a week ago, when average returns to the growers were the lowest in a long time. But still very good stock is to be had at $20 per 1000. White sells best. Violets have not benefited by the slight improvement which has taken place, even though receipts are reduced. Some of the eastern growers who found this market profitable around Christmas have stopped shipping, but this does not seem to help the sale of the locally grown Campbells, for after a taste of high life in the form of good Marie Louise the buyers will not be content with the pale variety; but for that matter there are still plenty of the eastern violets about.

Bulb stock is sharing the depression in the violet market. The overstock of Paper Whites continues and there are tales of some very low sales in quantity, sales at prices which will not repay the cost of the bulbs. Romans do a little better. Daffodils sell fairly well, but tulips do not seem to take hold. Not many callas are coming in and they generally sell well. Easter lilies are seen in most of the houses, but in most cases the quality is poor and the sale slow. Freesias are in.

There is a good sale for green goods; nearly every shipping order calls for something in this line. Sprays of Asparagus plumosus seem to be the most popular item, but strings are also going well. Ferns are up to $2.50 per 1000.

Club Meeting.

On Saturday evening the Chicago Florists' Club went proselyting to Rose Hill. It was the first of the series of meetings planned for the several sections of the city and was successful in all its features. The attendance was very large and a considerable number of new names were added to the membership roll. Paul Dailedouze, of Flatbush, N. Y., was a visitor and gave the club the benefit of what he has seen in his trips among the growers. As there are few better posted men in the trade, what he said of the new carnations should make the evening a very profitable one for many a grower present.

Meetings of similar character will shortly be held on the south side, at the Drexel cafe, Thirty-ninth and Cottage Grove avenue; on the northwest side, at Metropolitan hall, 856 North California avenue, and on the west side, dates to be announced later. The club held its regular meeting last night at Handel hall. It was the first allied trades meeting and pipe, fittings, valves, glass, paints and putty were named for discussion.

Various Notes.

Frank Garland will vacate his present stand May 1. He has not yet decided whether to go up stairs in the same building or to rent a couple of tables across the street.

The rooted cutting specialists say trade is opening rather slow. The novelties are selling well, but it is reported there is no rush for the varieties out of the same seed pod as Enchantress.

The craft regrets to hear of the death of Hugh McMichael, of Wilmette, which occurred last week, after a brief illness with pneumonia. He was in the prime of life and a good grower. For a time he was foreman for Paul Kreismann at the Morton Grove Greenhouses and went from there to Weiland & Risch, where he was foreman until he secured the Nicholas Miller place of about 12,000 feet of glass at Wilmette, buying the stock and making a very favorable lease on the houses. He was doing well. Interment was at Rose Hill on Sunday. Mrs. McMichael will not undertake to continue the business longer than is necessary to find a purchaser for the stock and lease.

J. A. Budlong is confined to his bed, having a tough time with rheumatism. It seems strange that one as vigorous as he should be laid up with this disease.

E. F. Winterson is getting in some fine blooms of W. N. Rudd's Phyllis carnation and says his out of town buyers prefer it to Enchantress as it is a much better traveler.

L. Coatsworth says coal is going down. On Tuesday he bought five cars at 55 cents a ton less than he paid for the same grade last August.

A. L. Randall has been having a bad time this week with neuralgia in his jaws.

Mrs. A. L. Vaughan and little daughter expect to leave in a few days for a visit with relatives at Collinston, La.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett are at Hotel La Pintoresca, Pasadena, Cal.

Some of the Greek sidewalk merchants some time since applied for an injunction restraining the city from interfering with them in the conduct of their business on the streets. On January 14 the Appellate court affirmed the Circuit court decree upholding the city's authority.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The florists' trade has now entered upon the regular social season, but from the reports of the different retailers the season will not be a lively one, as the orders booked ahead are not for the usual elaborate affairs of a year ago. This kind of work should be quite plentiful from now until Lent sets in.

The cut flower trade during the past week showed very little improvement. Transient trade is very quiet, but funeral work seems plentiful and white are about the only flowers in demand at the wholesale houses. The weather is still fine with us, with plenty of sunshine to make cut flowers of all kinds plentiful. Violets and carnations especially have suffered by the slow demand. Roses are not over-plentiful, especially white. Plenty of Bridesmaids are to be had. Good long Beauties are very scarce in this market, but we are fairly well supplied with short stock. Small Meteor and Liberty are also plentiful.

Bulb stock is still over-crowding the market, Romans and Paper Whites. Valley, too, is moving slowly. Callas are more plentiful, with Harrisii lilies still absent. Tulips and freesias are coming along slowly. Shipping trade in cut flowers is slow at the wholesale houses, but supplies and wire work are in good demand.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held another of those large and enthusiastic meetings last Thursday afternoon, in the Odd Fellows' building. The large attendance was attracted by the exhibition of new carnations, essays and other important matters.

The Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., staged a large and beautiful vase of their new scarlet carnation, Crusader, which attracted a great deal of attention. F. M. Ellis showed a number of varieties from Thompson, of Joliet. C. A. Kuehn staged a large vase of Indianapolis from Baur & Smith. These received a great deal of attention from the carnation growers present.

The meeting opened at 2 p. m. with all of the officers present except Vice-president Winter, who was in Chicago at the time. Three applications for membership were received. They were from Hugo Gross and John R. Steinicke, of Kirkwood, and E. Rotenhoefer, of St. Louis. Two members were elected to membership, F. W. Bruenig and Henry Felter. With these the membership is now seventy and only thirty more are needed to make up the hundred. F. C. Weber was elected a trustee. The trustees were instructed to prepare an entertainment next month for the members and their families. Messrs. Ammann, Fillmore and Koenig were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of Mrs. Herzog.

Walter Gilles, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, read an essay on ferns, which was well received by the members and was given a vote of thanks. The discussion on propagating roses, lead by F. J. Fillmore, was very interesting. Those who participated in the discussion were Messrs. Ammann, Dunford and Guy, who did not agree with Mr. Fillmore in using blooming wood for cuttings, holding out for the blind wood.

The president appointed Messrs. Steidle, Ude and Dunford to make a report on the carnations on exhibition, which was as follows: Adonis, very fine red; Harry Fenn, improvement on Roosevelt; Enchantress, very fine; Nelson Fisher, good carnation, better stem than Mrs. Lawson; Gov. Wolcott, best white seen; Hanna Hobart, good, large flowers, weak stem; Crusader, very fine blooms, with long stems; Indianapolis, very fine pink, large flowers with good, long stems.

The next meeting of the club, February 11, will be our annual carnation meeting. Prizes of $5, $3 and $2 are offered for the best vases of carnations, competition open only to local growers. Growers of new carnations are requested to make exhibits for the benefit of our carnation growers. At this meeting F. J. Fillmore will read an essay on "Carnation Growing," and E. W. Guy, of Belleville, will lead a discussion on propagating carnations.

Various Notes.

W. S. Lemar, late keeper of Forest park, one of the best men for a place of that kind, is now head of the landscape department at the World's Fair grounds.

Henry Johann, of Collinsville; J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville; E. W. Guy and A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill.; A. Jablonsky, of Wellston, Mo.; J. W. Dunford, of Clayton; John Steidle, of Central; W. J. Pilcher and F. W. Ude, Jr., of Kirkwood, were the out-of-town members who attended the club meeting last Thursday afternoon.

The Music Hall, Coliseum and east nave in the Exposition building have been engaged by the committee in which to hold the next meeting and trade exhibition of the Society of American Florists, August 16 to 19, 1904, subject to the approval of the executive committee, which meets here in March. The committee which will have charge of entertaining the executive committee is hard at work perfecting arrangements.

A committee composed of F. C. Weber, Otto Koenig, F. J. Ammann, Fred Meinhardt, Theo. Miller, Emil Schray and J. J. Beneke will meet this week Thursday at Mr. Weber's store to confer with J. H. Hadkinson, superintendent of floriculture, World's Fair, in regard to flower shows to be held at the fair grounds during the season, similar to those held during the Pan-American at Buffalo.

The Riessen Floral Company is making a fine show in the Broadway store windows. The company reports plenty of funeral work since the holidays.

J. W. Dunford, of the St. Louis Carnation Co., reports that they are having great success with their sale of rooted cuttings.

The Ellison Floral Co., at Grand and Olive streets, has very attractive windows in the new quarters and is making splendid displays for the public.

C. Young & Sons Co. is making preparations for the spring seed trade. They do a large shipping business in plants, seeds and bulbs during the season.

John W. Kunz, formerly in the retail business here, but now in the employ of Uncle Sam, has a team of bowlers composed of letter carriers and has sent a challenge to the florist bowlers for a match game to be played the latter part of this month, three games to be rolled on the florists' alleys and three on the postoffice alleys. These games promise to be very exciting.

Visitors:—Charles F. Meyer, New York; W. J. Hussey, Dayton, O.; J. B. O'Neil, Chicago.

Bowling.

The two teams got at each other again Monday night, this time team No. 2 winning two out of three games played, by close scores. Carl Beyer and A. Y. Ellison being absent, Fred Meinhardt made the highest single score, 221. Following is the complete score:

Team No. 1.	1st.	2d.	3d.	T'l.
J. J. Beneke.....	157	180	183	520
Theo. Miller.....	146	139	142	427

BUFFALO.

State of Trade.

Old Zero and business go along steadily with Old Zero in the lead. This cold weather horse got the start at the drop of the flag on November 17, led to the first turn and up the back stretch and is now going good near the rail. At the half it has several lengths the best of it under a strong pull. Perhaps when rounding the upper turn the track will improve and give Business and other heavily weighted horses a chance and, as the home stretch will not be reached till spring, we hope Easter Morn, Happy Nuptials, Glad Tidings, Baby Mine and others will beat Old Zero for the money as well as place and show. • Old Zero has been in training now so long and so constantly raced that we look for an early break-down and when they go under the wire my prophetic vision allows me to see the end of the race as follows: Fond Anticipation, first, by a nose; Industry, second, only beating out Coal Bill by half a length.

The winner is owned by Mr. Vernon Optimist and is by Credit, dam Independence; second dam, Good Intentions. The latter good mare was brought over on the Mayflower in the seventeenth century, year not certain. Icicle, Snowdrift, Cold Chills, Light Draft, Frost, Freeze, Slush Ice, Glacier, North Pole and Polar Bear also ran. The winner was ridden by the famous jockey, Snowden, who won the English Derby on Blair Athol in 1864. The great horse Frost ran a most consistent race, being fourth. He is by Gompers, dam Strike, by Loafer, and has been running with great prominence on the Chicago tracks, but is expected to increase his speed at St. Louis the coming summer. And now, virtuous reader, if you want a key to this allegory write to John Thorpe, Phil Hauswirth or W. F. Kasting.

We think business has slightly recovered from the slumber that overtook it after New Year's and, as the sun shines brighter, all feel alike a little brighter. There is no lack of flowers of any kind. A recent call at the emporium of W. F. Kasting showed us flowers in abundance, still none going to waste. Some very fine Bride and Bridesmaid roses from Brant Bros., of Utica, were conspicuous for quality in every respect. Daffodils and tulips are now plentiful and violets also and in good demand.

Various Items.

How a city grows! Unless you take a trip to the rural districts how little you know of the source of the immense supply of plants that are sold in our markets, not only in the spring but throughout the year. Very recently on a visit to George Urban, at Pine Ridge, we had a chance to see several of these places. First let me say that this most versatile and brainy gentleman has three houses, the construction of which it would pay many a florist to inspect. Hollow brick for walls, with weather boards on the outside. Benches of tiles lying on iron pipes. Supports of benches 4-inch tiles. Edges of benches a mixture of coal ashes, sand and cement. Iron gutters, in fact, nothing to decay or be replaced in the visible future and the contents as thriving as the structures are substantial. It's strange to hear a man who drives a trotter on the snow in 2:08, manufactures 1,000 barrels of flour every day, attends to a dozen banking and large industrial interests and consorts with the leading spirits of the state on state and national affairs, yet can discuss with the keenest judgment the relative merits of Mrs. Nelson, Cressbrook, Boston Market, Gov. Wolcott and all the rest. He has also got hot water heating down to an exact science and by having more pipe and boiler capacity than he needs in the coldest weather his outlay of fuel is about one-half that of the average commercial florist.

Schwerdt & Berner's place is in the town of Cheektowaga and is a beehive of industry. They have been very successful and deserve to be, for they are workers. Boston ferns, azaleas, lilies and a general Easter stock was most in evidence, and then most quietly occupying not much space just now are 20,000 geraniums. They had killed a hog the day before, so we had cider and sausage galore, but neither is necessary to keep up the perennial vivacity of the energetic Schwerdt.

Next we went to Bauman Bros., at Pine Ridge, who have their five up-to-date houses filled with current and prospective crops. This is another firm that does most of their work without expensive help and pays 100 cents on the dollar.

And then we went to the old Rapin place, surrounded by a dozen cemeteries. Cities of the dead that hold the dust of the faithful, also the Jew, the Gentile, the skeptic and up-to-date German philosopher who was a materialist in his prime, but as the sunset of life cast shadows over his intellect realized that there was something "beyond." The Rapin Greenhouses are rented by Messrs. Collins & Forbach. Mr. Rapin ran this place for years on a sort of a go-as-you-please system, but now that "Conny" is boss a change has come over the scene and Mr. Conny F. has done marvels under most unfavorable circumstances and has made more out of the houses than I thought was possible. If you want to see a man who is everlastingly good tempered, then an interview with Mr. Forbach will cure you of the blues, but who would not be perpetually happy with such a sweet, pretty, little wife as Mr. F. calls his own. THE ROSE SOCIETY.

ED. REVIEW:—As the time for the annual show of the American Rose Society, in Philadelphia, approaches, I am compelled to ask, through your columns, of the rose growers of this country: "What are you going to do to help the one flower that has been the foundation of your fortunes?" Are you going to trust to the efforts of others to do that which you should do yourselves? Do you expect others to do all the work and you reap whatever benefit may accrue? If you feel that way, and think that it will eventuate anything, why, go ahead and, when too late, find what a small hole you will have to crawl out of when asked why the rose society died. Are you any less interested in the rose than carnation men are in the carnation? Do you think that the rose will take care of itself better than the carnation can? Do you think that because it is older it can stand neglect better? Is this a good way, as business men, to advertise your wares? Is it that you think there will be none who need education on the rose subject? Or do you think that they will find others outside of our business who will prove efficient teachers? Can you afford this indifference? Can you sit down and let others pass you in the race? Brother rose growers, think of these questions; see if you are doing your business justice. And I trust you will make up your mind to exhibit at this show and by being present, aid the society and show others that you are sufficiently interested to devote a little time and some money in the cause of the rose.

DENVER, COLO.

The Market.

The holiday season, with all its trials, is past and the business man has a chance to realize where he is at and what he has accomplished, or in other words to learn where he has been successful as well as where he made mistakes and make notes therefrom for future reference. The perishable character of the cut flowers makes it necessary for the purchasing agent to be an expert in his line if he wants to clean up the bulk of his stock at the end of the day. He, as well as the man who produces the article, should know that which will be in greatest demand and best adapted to the market the coming season.

The brisk competition among the growers in the various departments of the profession has been the means of overstocking our limited market in certain lines, and since the holidays flowers have been placed on the market at prices detrimental to the business. A remedy to this evil should be considered by the growers as a protection to their interests in the future, as they certainly must be held responsible to a great extent for enabling the retailers to sell their products below their actual value. There is no reason for carnations dropping in midwinter from $1 per dozen to 35 cents in twenty-four hours. Such instances have a tendency to lessen the standard of the article and give the public the impression that the legitimate price was an imposition.

When the commission house was started here last fall we thought we had a remedy for this and other evils that spring up occasionally, but the commission house is gone for lack of support from the growers more than lack of finance or individual ability to carry it on. Many of the growers who in the past were the loudest in their demands for such an establishment were the least interested in its success and virtually gave it no support whatever. True, some had made contracts for their cuts and could not do otherwise, and others had a little shipping trade of their own, which they did not feel justified in relinquishing, but time will prove the necessity for a commission house in Denver, as it is generally conceded that the supply is far in excess of the needs of the city of Denver alone.

Various Notes.

Bulb stock has been coming in slowly and of inferior character, excepting longiflorum and valley. The former were very good at Christmas and successional crops are of the same quality. Glauber has been cutting the best valley, about as good as we get at any season.

Azaleas fill in a big gap at this season in the plant department and those turned out by the Colfax Avenue Floral Co. have been very good. Vervaneana and Mme. Van Houtte are exceptionally fine. The latter variety was in good shape for the holidays and although not a true red filled in a big gap and sold well. This variety is far preferable to Apollo in color and when properly handled not only sells well but lasts a long time in flower.

Lilies are likely to be a success this season. Very little if any disease is seen and I noticed the same conditions in this valuable flower at Colorado Springs on a recent trip to that city taken by a few bowling aspirants who went down there for a little recreation and got far more than they bargained for. But if fools will occasionally enter where wise men know enough to keep out, they must take their medicine without a murmur. One of the consolations connected with the trip is the hospitality of the fraternity in that beautiful city. The other consolation is that retaliation is sweet to some and a chance to get even is to be given in the near future.

The Scott Floral Co. has been busy since New Year's renovating the old store of the Park Floral Company, to which they moved on New Year's day. The light coloring used throughout the store shows off stock of all character to better advantage. Phil Scott and Ed Reynolds, who comprise the firm, are both old storemen and are pretty well acquainted with the trade here. Phil, although a scion of the Great Scott, may not be as great an expounder of the science of geology as is his progenitor, but is, I think, in the art of blending color in flowers and making a little go a long ways, well up to any other member of the Scott family. GREAT DIVIDE.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Trade is variable but quite satisfactory in general. With plenty of sunshine there has been a good supply of stock, the only noticeable shortage being Beauties and other red roses. Violets are becoming more plentiful and bulbous stock has made its appearance. Hyacinths and tulips in made-up baskets are attractive sellers, while Trumpet Majors give the first touch of spring to their surroundings with their bright yellow colors. Funeral flowers have constituted a large percentage of sales. Society circles seem very quiet this winter.

Country trade keeps up remarkably well, which shows that our country cousins have money for luxuries as well as necessities. With big crops and all farm produce bringing a good price, prosperity seems assured.

Notes.

W. G. Schuchert is calling on the trade this week in the interest of C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee. E. H. Vick, representing Wm. Hagemann & Co., and Mr. Schwake, with Chas. F. Meyer, were also callers.

A. S. Swanson has added one new house for roses, one small bulb house, and installed a new boiler, besides rebuilding two houses, giving him one of the largest plants in the city. He grows a great variety of plants, bulbs and flowers, probably a larger variety than any one in the state. Liberty on two-year-old roots is looking nicely and throwing long stiff stems, but three-year-old plants have not done well. American Belle has always done nicely here and Mr. Swanson considers it far ahead of Queen of Edgely. Chatenay is a superb variety. Its popularity, however, is limited, as the buying public does not seem to ask for it. Prince of Naples is one of those rare kinds whose great beauty and worth have not become known. The rose is very large, rivaling the Beauty in size, of a light pink shade not unlike the old La France. The foliage is superb. The growth is very strong and it is a good bloomer. Mr. Swanson has always been an enthusiastic and successful bulb grower, forcing more varieties than any grower here. One house is planted to Spanish iris. A large number of lilies are grown for Easter. This season he is growing Harrisii exclusively. Many blooming plants are also grown. This place is superintended by himself. A down-town store is managed by Mrs. Swanson, while a half interest is maintained in two other stores, one in Minneapolis, managed by his brother, the other but recently opened in St. Paul and managed by Gust Colberg. As a matter of fact these are quite up to the best eastern stock and far outclass it in fragrance. Kennicott Bros. Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O. Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 22d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis Mo., June, 1904.

VISITED CHICAGO: Jno. T. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill.

LONGFELLOW bean is one of the scarce varieties of the green podded sorts.

VISITED OMAHA: Jno. F. Geary, representing Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

VISITED NEW ORLEANS: C. W. Smith, representing Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

ONION sets are beginning to get a move on. Several of the jobbers are pushing car lots forward.

CONSIDERING the pronounced shortage in cucumber seed the prices are remarkably uniform in the spring catalogues.

THE cucumber and sweet corn prices in the D. M. Ferry & Co. retail catalogue are cited as good evidence of a shortage in those items.

THE one who thinks sweet corn is not scarce, also the one who thinks sweet corn is scarce, can easily pick out a seed catalogue to prove it.

THIS is the season when a small order written on a large order sheet is a disappointment, and quite at variance with the eternal fitness of things.

THE hustle to cover shortages of beans and other staple seeds that is now epidemic at the south will likely spread to other points as the planting season comes around.

CURRIE'S Black Wax at $7 per bushel and $10 per bushel for Wardwell's, are the prices at which orders have been booked by wholesalers for immediate shipment during the week.

FLAXSEED prices are moving upward, May closing at $1.08 at Chicago January 19. Timothy is slow; country lots sold from $2.40 to $3.25. Clover seed easy, spot lots $8.50 to $11, according to quality.

It is safe, and perhaps it is good policy as well, to quote the bushel price of sweet corn low where the greater proportion of the orders looked for are for quarts or less. This does not make the prices of those who are called upon to fill bushel orders look any more attractive, however.

THERE has as yet been no adjustment of the loss on the Buckbee seed warehouse loss at Rockford many months ago. The proofs of loss claim $118,000, while the insurance is $77,000. The underwriters' adjuster is insisting upon the cost value of the seeds, while Mr. Buck-bee maintains that he is entitled to appraise them at market value at the time of the fire.

WM. S. GILBREATH, for fifteen years associated with the Illinois Seed Company, of Chicago, and one year with the J. M. McCullough's Sons, Cincinnati, is about to open up a new seed house in Indianapolis under the name of the William S. Gilbreath Seed Company. The concern will conduct a general grass and field seed, grain and storage business.

W. T. PHILIPPS, formerly president of the Henry Philipps Seed and Implement Co., Toledo, O., has sold his stock in the corporation to his brothers and has organized a competing concern and opened as the W. T. Philipps Co., at 519 Monroe street. There are six brothers continuing with the old firm, Herman, Henry J., Albert J., Charles J. S., Fred and August J.

AN authority on the sweet corn situation says: There is a hitch at present between the farmers who grow sweet corn for the factories and the canners for whom they grow regarding the price that green corn shall be contracted at for the coming year. He thinks that as soon as a satisfactory rate can be agreed upon a boom will take place in seed sweet corn.

JOSIAH HOOPES, the well known horticulturist, of Westchester, Pa., died January 16, aged 72 years.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—C. & J. Kreitz say trade was very good for December, but that January is not so good, the weather being a little too warm for business.

THE rose Mme. Abel Chatenay, which has been so good a money-maker for several growers in the middle west this season, and which will doubtless be largely planted for next year, was introduced by Pernet-Ducher, the French rosarian, in 1894. It is stated to be a seedling from a cross of Docteur Crill and Victor Verdier.

The Market.

There is a better tone to the market this week. Winter has been with us in grim earnest, verifying so far the stormy times predicted for the next three months by the chap with the goose bone, and shortening stock considerably. We have just entered on the good month preceding Ash Wednesday. The buyers show a keener interest in securing good stuff, which has steadied prices, with here and there a slight advance.

Bulbous flowers are becoming more numerous, though perhaps that expression is slightly misleading. Julius Kohen & Son are sending in nice scarlet Duc Van Tholl tulips. Freesia can also be seen if you look quick. Campernelles and Trumpet Majors are also here. Brides and Maids are better stock now than at almost any time this season and have advanced in price. Callas are moving slowly. Dunn & Co. are handling some nice Princess of Wales violets.

A Wedding of Interest.

A wedding of great interest occurred on Tuesday last, when Miss Madeline Michell was married to Leo Niessen. The bride is the daughter of Fred J. Michell, vice-president and treasurer of the well known seed firm of Henry F. Michell Co. The bridegroom has by industry and ability established the splendid cut flower house that bears his name. The happy couple have the best wishes of their many friends.

A New Commission House.

William Berger, the well-known florist of Germantown, has five sons engaged in different branches of our business. Three are still with him. Two other sons, John Berger, for fourteen years with his father, and Harry Berger, who has had nine years' experience in different branches of floriculture, will on Monday, February 1, open a new commission house at 1220 Filbert street, under the name of Berger Brothers. The new firm will handle a general line of cut flowers. They are conveniently situated, close to both terminals, and will have all facilities for handling business.

The Best Profession.

Secularly speaking there are three professions, law, medicine and floriculture. Of these the best is floriculture. The reasons for this bold assertion are two. First, no other profession appeals to and cultivates the finer instincts as does floriculture. It lacks the dryness of the other two, giving its students returns in pleasure as well as in profit.

HELLER BROS.,

South Park
Floral Co., NEW CASTLE, IND.

Second, no other profession is considered so desirable for young men, by those who have achieved success in it, as floriculture. The successful lawyer thinks the law too difficult and uncertain for his son; four-fifths of the lawyers in this city, he will tell you, are not self-supporting. He will start his son in something more promising. The successful doctor feels that it is unfair to ask his son to lead the hard, dog's life he has had to do, getting up at all hours of the night with never a minute he can call his own. The counsel and practice each can give count for nothing in their minds against the known difficulties.

The florist, on the other hand, feels that his profession is a splendid one, the finest opening his son can have. The fact that flowers and plants are a luxury and the destructibility of glass houses are obstacles, obstacles to be overcome. This may be startling, but the proof is at hand.

One of our pioneer florists, Abram L. Pennock, has seven sons all in our ranks: Samuel S., the well-known wholesaler; J. Liddon, of the firm of Pennock Brothers; C. and G. L., rose growers; A. J., our valley king, and Herbert A. and Henry, both southern growers.

Two sons of the late Hugh Graham, Hugh and William, are following their father's profession. Then there are Robert Craig & Son, J. J. Habermehl's Sons, Thomas Meehan's Sons, Joseph Kift & Son, Chas. Schott's Son, Joseph Bevis & Son, Julius Koehler & Son, Robert Scott & Son, and many others.

The year 1904 has brought another illustration of this fact. Robert Crawford, Jr., has taken his son, William W., into partnership under the firm name of Robert Crawford & Son. Mr. Crawford is very successful and the fact that he has taken one son in with him and put the other son, Harry, into the Philadelphia Carnation Company, will go a long way toward convincing the skeptical of the truth of this statement.

An Outsider's Query.

One of the Beauty growers recently received a letter from a friend, which read as follows: "I had occasion to buy a few flowers just before Christmas and learned that the price was $25 a dozen. What will you do with all the money you are making?" This is rather a difficult question to answer off-hand; at least the grower who received the letter thought so. Perhaps William Scott will be able to elucidate. PHIL.

C. W. WARD has an interesting article on the Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, in the January issue of Floral Life, the illustration being from a photograph by L. V. Hallock.

A PRETTY STORY.

Practically all of the violets that are in the great New York market, as well as the other large cities of the state, are grown within an area of about twenty-five square miles in Dutchess county, and near the Hudson river. Farmers and townspeople alike are engaged in their culture, so that the industry employs hundreds of people and involves an investment of probably more than half a million dollars. This year it is estimated that about 100,000,000 violets will be shipped out of Rhinebeck, most of them to the metropolises. In a few years substantial fortunes have been made in the production of these gentle flowers for market. This man is pointed out as having made $20,000 in eight years. That man is said to have saved $15,000 in a short time; and these profits are greater than those of blacksmithing or teaching school or the grocery business. So the blacksmith of Rhinebeck left his forge, built a greenhouse, and became a violet grower—a radical change in occupation. One of those who has recently become a violet man is a school teacher; another was a butcher; another a street sprinkler. And after he has closed his doors at midnight one of the saloon keepers of Rhinebeck goes to his violet house to see that the temperature is as it should be and that the violets are undisturbed.—Leslie's Weekly.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

The Market.

Trade is a little more active than it has been for the last few days, and everything has the appearance that business will soon be back to the normal. There is a good demand for all kinds of stock and everything is being closed out well and at an advance in price over last week.

Beauties, which have been somewhat a drug, are now moving better. Tea roses are all sold out clean, and more could easily be disposed of. Liberty and Meteor are scarce. Carnations are coming much better and are selling well, especially white, which is in very good demand. Bulbous stock is doing very well. There is an active demand for callas, and Harrisii are not far behind. Romans do not move so well, but Paper Whites are very good stock. Valley also is going nicely. Violets have been very poor property of late. At times they could not be disposed of at any price. At present the demand for them is more active. All kinds of green goods are selling well, with the supply rather limited.

Various Notes.

Most of the florists who were on the sick list are now back at their posts and all seem pretty glad to get back, too.

Paul Dailedouze was in the city during the past week. He was making a rapid tour through the carnation belt and stopped over here long enough to make a few calls on our experts. He left for Richmond, Ind.

The funeral of ex-Governor Bushnell brought forth many large funeral orders. Nearly all of the florists had a few orders to send to Springfield and altogether the flowers sent amounted way up into the hundreds of dollars. The wholesalers shipped a good many flowers to the local florists, only the best stock being used.

The rose show given by the Florists' Society is scheduled for Saturday, February 13. From present outlook it will be the best ever held by the society. The schedule is now out and can be obtained by addressing the writer, at 113 East Third street. Several out-of-town growers have signified their intention of making exhibits and I would like anyone who has something that they are doing in good shape to send a few blooms along and let our boys see what it is like. Do not forget the S. A. F. silver and bronze medals. They are well worth having and our society has the awarding of them. C. J. OHMER.

IS THE PRIMULA POISONOUS.

Will you be kind enough to tell me through the REVIEW if Primula obconica is a poisonous plant. H. M. B.

Were this question asked of many florists who have handled the plant the answer would be most decidedly that it is poisonous. Bailey says of it, "loose-hairy leaves, the sharp hairs often irritating-poisonous."

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Parties disseminating new plants of any class for the first time this season are respectfully requested to forward to the secretary names and descriptions of them, or marked copy of catalogue containing such descriptions, so that a full and accurate list of such novelties, with the names of their introducers, may be prepared for publication in the next annual report of the society.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary,
79 Milk St., Boston, Mass.

NEW ALBANY, IND.—A. Rasmussen is quite ill with typhoid fever.

GOVANSTOWN, MD.—The stable and greenhouse of Alonzo Slayman were destroyed by fire January 8, loss $700 with no insurance.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—The F. B. Lewis greenhouses destroyed by fire January 8 are already being rebuilt. They are operated by Clarence O. Lewis, a son of the owner. The burned houses contained carnations and violets and the stock was a total loss.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.—C. H. Gebhardt, gardener for H. G. Selfridge, states that the local newspaper report of the accident to his boiler and the resultant damage to stock was greatly exaggerated. The break in the boiler was only a small crack and the stock did not suffer at all.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has been mild enough during the past week to suit any one. We have had only a few slight frosts and flowers continue fairly plentiful. Business has been quiet with all the retailers, so that there is an abundance of stock to meet all requirements. The quotations I gave last week have not changed materially, although I expect to see carnations somewhat cheaper in a few days. Tulips, especially the Rembrandt variety, have made their appearance in most of the stores and are selling at 50 cents per dozen. The florists generally pack about a half dozen in a 6-inch flower pot and retail it for 75 cents. As a great many growers have planted heavily in tulips I expect an avalanche of them in a couple of weeks, especially of Keizerskroon. Valley is in good demand and of good quality. I am inclined to think they have been a very profitable crop for the growers thus far this season. Maiden hair fern is very scarce and as there is quite a shortage of the wild variety, owing to the want of sufficient rain and the cold winds, the florists have had to use much asparagus and other greens in consequence. Mums are holding their own splendidly and I do not know what the florists would do without them, especially in funeral work. The outdoor, cheap flowers have disappeared almost entirely except narcissi, and it will be many weeks before much else is offered. Chrysanthemums, however, are good, both in stem and flower and are selling at from $2 to $4 per hundred.

Various Notes.

Matraia & Bertrand have leased a large store in the new Flood building into which they will move when the edifice is finished. This firm is one of the most enterprising on Powell street, and the location of their new store will be second to none in town.

Rosaia & Rossi have established themselves in good shape in the store vacated by A. Hilbert, on Geary street. They have taken in the next door premises as well and are making a good showing.

The finest exhibit of azaleas in bloom here is to be seen at Sievers & Boland's on Post street.

The Sempervirens Club of California, the parent organization of many sectional clubs in the state, held its annual meeting in the conservatory of the Palace hotel yesterday afternoon. John McNaught made an interesting and practical address upon forestry reform. The meeting closed with the election of new officers, the regular ticket going through without opposition.

The Realty Syndicate has donated to the city of Oakland 200 palm trees to be used in beautifying the streets in the vicinity of Sixteenth street station.

Wm. J. Dingee, the newly appointed park commissioner, has been dangerously ill for the past week, but is reported today as convalescent.

WE are great admirers of the REVIEW.—H. O. HANNAH, Sherman, Tex.

RICHMOND, IND.

Richmond is still in the push, notwithstanding there have not been many communications appearing of late from this point. All the retailers report an exceedingly heavy trade at good prices during the holidays, and everything sold out clean. The wholesalers were unable to supply all demands made upon them. Good prices as a rule were obtained all along the line.

At the annual meeting of the Richmond Florists' Club, held at the greenhouses of the B. K. & B. Co., the following-named gentlemen were elected as officers of the club for the ensuing year: President, Geo. R. Gause; vice-president, Chas. Knopf; secretary, H. C. Chessman; treasurer, John A. Evans. At the December meeting it was suggested that some member prepare a paper to be read before the club at the January meeting. The president appointed Fred H. Lemon to prepare such paper, he to choose his own subject, and appoint some one to prepare the paper for the meeting in February, and each one to appoint his successor.

There are many promising seedlings being brought forward by the different florists in this vicinity, both by the proprietors of the various greenhouses, as well as the boys in the trenches. There have been several at the E. G. Hill Co.'s place recently, one of whom calls, or will call, "E. G." grandpapa. The three Fulle brothers are well represented. B. H. Schroeder, foreman for Chessman & Schepman, is the latest, a twelve-pound boy.

BELOIT, WIS.—C. A. Reynolds assaulted A. Manahan, for whom his daughter formerly worked, and was arrested.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—William J. Reddy, for many years an employe of P. R. Quinlan & Co., died January 12, aged 70 years.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Herman Potter has bought a two-acre tract upon which he will at once invest $10,000 in greenhouses to grow cut flowers for the Chicago market.

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., Dec. 22, 1903.
CHICAGO CARNATION CO., Joliet, Ill.
Dear Sirs—Crusader cuttings arrived at 10 A. M. They are a credit to your business.
Yours respectfully, (Signed) FRANK PROS.

J. S. Wilson, Vaughan's Greenhouse S. writes: "It is a good thing. I was very much impressed with it when at your place."

CLEVELAND.

Announcement is made of the dissolution of the firm of Smith & Feters, who are one of the leading retailers. E. A. Feters retires because of continued poor health. He has been obliged to be away from business for a large part of the time recently and his health is such that his physicians advised that he remove to Arizona permanently, whither he has gone with his family.

FLATBUSH BOWLERS.

The prize contest last week must have been a strenuous affair or else some of the prizes must have had knock out drops in them, as only a few of the faithful materialized on Thursday evening. Still, as you will see by the scores below, there is a residue of ability left in the survivors:

Player—	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	Ave.

Flatbush fully intends to have a shy at first place at St. Louis.

VICTORIA, B. C.—W. Norman says Christmas trade for 1903 was far ahead of 1902.

ANOKA, MINN.—The Pratt-Ford Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000. The incorporators are J. W. Ford, J. W. Ford, Jr., and D. O. Pratt. They will operate the Pratt plant.

CLEMENTON, N. J.—Edward Banyard, senior member of the firm of E. Banyard & Son, died January 8, aged 68 years. He had been ill for a week with pneumonia. Mr. Banyard was a native of Woodbridge, England, and came to America in 1864. He had been in the florist trade for thirty-five years. He leaves a son and daughter. The son will continue the business. He formerly lived at Philadelphia, and interment was at Mt. Peace cemetery there.

BREITMEYERS' NEW ROSE

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID
TO BE DISSEMINATED APRIL 1, 1904

COLOR—Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy, flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE—Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM—Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH—Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific. ALL ORDERS BOOKED FILLED IN ROTATION, BEGINNING APRIL 1.

State Society Meets.

The Indiana State Florists' Association held its annual meeting at the Commercial Club rooms on January 12, and although only three out-of-town members were present, there was a good attendance, and much business was transacted. The most important was the election of new officers and an executive committee. E. A. Nelson, of this city, was elected president; J. S. Stuart, of Anderson, first vice-president; H. Junge, second vice-president, and J. Heidenreich was re-elected treasurer. Our worthy secretary of the past two years, Mr. H. Junge, announced that he was not a candidate for re-election, so Fred Huckriede was elected to take his place. The executive committee elected consists of the following members: Mr. Hatfield, J. Rieman, J. A. E. Haugh, F. Alley and A. F. J. Baur. This committee at once held a meeting and elected Mr. Haugh chairman and Mr. Baur secretary. It also outlined a plan of presenting to the society at its meetings something of interest, either in the shape of a paper by some member or a discussion on some subject of common interest.

The exhibition was not very extensive, but what there was was fine. J. Hartje showed a vase of Moonlight and a light pink on the order of Fragrance, but lighter in color and much larger, also a large, deep pink seedling. The first two received certificates of merit. Baur & Smith showed a large vase of fine Indianapolis blooms which were awarded a certificate of merit. They booked some nice orders on the strength of that vase.

Those present from out-of-town were J. S. Stuart and J. A. E. Haugh, of Anderson, and Vernon D. Grave, of Richmond.

A day late came Fred Lemon, of Richmond, and Paul Dailedouze, of Flatbush, L. I., but they did not come to attend the meeting. Mr. Dailedouze is making his annual swing around the circle to see what is doing, and what there is good sticking around in the odd corners of the country. Of course, he could not miss the chance to have a look at Indianapolis, which struck his fancy just about a year ago. He had some good words to say about some of R. Witterstaetter's seedlings, which he had seen a day or two before. We enjoyed his visit very much, only it was too short. A. B.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We are experiencing a spell of very uncomfortable and disagreeable weather, which has a rather depressing effect on transient business. While the general report on business among the retail florists is very favorable, the wholesalers and growers complain. There is certainly a lull in all branches of trade at the present time, and it has some effect on the florist.

Stock of all kinds is quite plentiful at this writing. Carnations are coming in heavily and of very good quality. With prices ranging as low as $8 per 1,000 (in small lots $2 to $4 per 100) stock does not clean up at all satisfactory. Maids, Brides and Liberties are in very fair demand and clean sales are reported. Prospects are that rose cuts will shorten up and prices will stiffen. Special American Beauty roses are anything but plentiful; of shorter grades there are more than enough. Tulips are very plentiful and poor sale. Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths still remain a glut. In greens the market is well supplied, plenty of smilax, asparagus and Sprengeri at usual prices.

Various Items.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is receiving some very fine white lilac and freesia.

The Wabash Railroad, which dealt so cruelly with our friend, Christ Rieger, evidently did the handsome thing, for he is building a five-story brick and iron factory building at Forbes and Boyd streets.

Randolph & McClements did the decorating for the Fairbanks-Cassidy wedding. Instead of the traditional white bridal bouquet the bride carried a handsome bunch of Marie Louise violets.

Visitors:—S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia; A. Roelker, New York; B. A. Heller, New Castle, Ind. Hoo-Hoo.

ARGOLA, ILL.—T. J. Denney's greenhouse had a narrow escape from destruction by fire January 4. The blaze caught from the boiler and was discovered in the nick of time.

MANSFIELD, O.

Death of Geo. W. Hunt.

George W. Hunt, a life-long resident of this city and for many years in the florists' business, died January 6 of paralysis, the day being the sixtieth anniversary of his birth. He had suffered three previous attacks of paralysis and had been in feeble health for some time. Mr. Hunt was born in Mansfield and held a position of esteem in the community. He was a member of several fraternal orders, including the Odd Fellows and the G. A. R., for he served through the civil war in the 64th Ohio. He leaves a widow and three sons. For some years Mr. Hunt and one of the sons, Homer D., had been engaged in the florists' business, which will be continued as before, under the old name of Geo. W. Hunt & Son, by H. D. Hunt.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

Holiday trade in this city was fully up to last year. Carnations were of fine quality and sold at good prices. Cyclamen, Gloire de Lorraine begonias, primulas and azaleas sold best in flowering plants, in the order named, and supply was up to the demand. The call for palms and ferns was less than last year, owing undoubtedly to the good supply of flowering plants. The weather for a week before Christmas was very fine; since that time it has been very cold. On Tuesday, January 5, the thermometer registered 26 degrees below zero, which was the lowest in this city for thirty-three years. G. H. S.

MIDDLETOWN, PA.—The large greenhouses of Charles Dohan were destroyed by fire January 7, the result of an overheated stove.

VAN WERT, O.—H. C. Scharff has sold a half interest in his greenhouses to Edward Scharff and the plant will be considerably enlarged and the business conducted as Scharff Bros.

Skinner's Patent System of IRRIGATION.

NOW INTRODUCED FOR THE FIRST TIME.

Entirely new and incomparably superior to hose or circular spray systems of watering. Is equally adapted to a flower bed or a 1000-acre field. The only system that never has to be taken down and is always ready for use. It is an improvement on the natural rainfall in that it is never applied too fast. The easiest and cheapest to put up and the easiest and cheapest to operate. Has been in use in the inventor's garden for the past 6 years and so has been thoroughly tested. Is endorsed by all who have tried it.

We shall be pleased to send our illustrated circular to all interested and will quote special prices to introduce. Address for further information.....

The Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.
Box 104.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business continued good for a few days after New Year's but since January 5 it has fallen off. I don't mean that it is quiet, like early fall and summer, but it is not like it was last season. Prices have dropped until they are ridiculously low compared with the season and the price asked at the holidays. It looks like an off season, especially for the grower. The cause we have to guess at. However, with the few longer days before the Lenten season there will be something doing, we hope.

The city and state inaugurations called forth quite a number of orders for flowers directly after New Year's but the supply was more than equal to the demand. Funeral orders have been limited, notwithstanding that there has been a long list of death notices.

Notes.

The Rhode Island Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its seventh annual banquet on January 14, about twenty-five members and ten invited guests being present. A very enjoyable evening was spent.

The J. A. Budlong & Sons Co. is marketing part of their cut here now after the holidays on account of the slump in prices in Boston.

The violet growers no longer say they are short, 50 cents per 100 being readily accepted at present for good stock.

Azaleas are a drug on the market at present.

It looks as though there would be some changes in the locations of the retailers next season.

Mary (Forrest) Pollock, for quite a long period connected with the Broadway greenhouses, and now for some months in business for herself at the old established Franklin street place, reports good business. T. J.

THE seed and plant catalogue of the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O., has as a color design fronds of Nephrolepis Piersoni lithographed in natural colors. It is one of the most attractive covers of the season.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00,
carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

CHICAGO AND NEW YORK, JANUARY 28, 1904.

No. 322.

Novelties In Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bratt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Adiantum Croweanum.

The new introduction in the Maldenhair Fern family.

Will be ready to distribute among the trade about July 1st, 1904. 3-inch pots, also large stock plants. Write for prices and place your order in time.

CARNATIONS

NOTES ON VARIETIES

In response to a request to express their opinions of the commercial qualities of the carnations they are growing several large growers have briefly set forth their views, as stated on this page. It will be observed that Lawson is the one variety most liked by all; on nearly every other standard sort opinions differ, indicating a wide variance in results in different soils and under various cultural methods:

Mrs. Lawson.

Bassett & Washburn:—This is the best dark pink we have ever grown.

Peter Reinberg:—They all doff their hats to Lawson; it is surely the best dark pink.

J. F. Wilcox:—This we consider our most profitable pink.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Best in its class.

Wietor Bros.:—Anybody and everybody is growing this and all have good success.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall plant about 30,000 next season.

Mrs. Nelson.

Peter Reinberg:—We think it the best variety of its color; very good producer and popular with buyers.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—We like it very much; requires careful treatment.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Next season 1,000 will be enough.

J. F. Wilcox:—Is a shy bloomer with us, but will try it another season.

Guardian Angel.

Wietor Bros.:—Best money maker of all the pinks, always in crop, good stem and color and a good shipper.

Peter Reinberg:—One of the very best from a financial standpoint; it is the "bread-winner" for many growers.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall not use it.

Bassett & Washburn:—It is "n. g." with us; too small.

Mrs. Joost.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Expect to plant 10,000 next season.

Bassett & Washburn:—Does well in spring and summer, no good in winter.

Peter Reinberg:—Discarded for Mrs. Nelson and Guardian Angel.

J. F. Wilcox:—Have discarded.

Cressbrook.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—No use; too much variation in color.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—None for next year.

Bassett & Washburn:—Shall throw it away. Flowers have very poor color and form and split badly.

Peter Reinberg:—Discarded in favor of Guardian Angel and Mrs. Nelson.

Wietor Bros.:—It won't do.

Enchantress.

Bassett & Washburn:—This has done well as far as production is concerned, but it is such a poor shipper that we are in doubt about it. Will give it a good trial next season in a separate house.

J. F. Wilcox:—Does well with us and will increase our planting next year.

Wietor Bros.:—The largest and best light pink, but not the best for shipping purposes; fine seller in Chicago market.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall not grow it.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Best in commerce.

Higinbotham.

Peter Reinberg:—Very good commercial variety; desirable shade of pink and very prolific.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Most profitable light pink; this variety is improving everywhere; very free; strong constitution.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Morning Glory will be our light pink next year.

grand shape, never splits and always in crop.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall plant 5,000 next year, no other light pink.

Peter Reinberg:—Discarded in favor of Higinbotham.

J. F. Wilcox:—Does not do well with us; will discard it.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Constitution gone.

White Cloud.

Bassett & Washburn:—This has proved one of the best winter bloomers with us. It shows no signs of playing out and is very steady.

J. F. Wilcox:—Does well with us and will continue to grow it.

Wietor Bros.:—The old reliable, best paying white on our place; our soil seems to be just right for this variety.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Next year 1,000 plants will be enough.

Peter Reinberg:—A good midwinter variety.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Will discard.

Flora Hill

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Good for summer bloom only; will continue to grow it for that purpose.

Wietor Bros.:—Will discard; cannot make it pay during winter months.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—We shall plant 3,000 Hill next year.

Bassett & Washburn:—We grow Hill

Carnation Adonis.

(A variety which bids fair to demonstrate that "a poor start makes a good ending.")

Wietor Bros.:—Have it in fine condition; good flowers and stiff stem.

Morning Glory.

Wietor Bros.:—Best of all the light pinks of its size; fine color, good stiff stems and an elegant shipper.

Bassett & Washburn:—The best light pink with us. It takes to our soil in only for spring, summer and early fall blooming.

Peter Reinberg:—Good commercial variety.

J. F. Wilcox:—Its last season with us.

Norway.

Wietor Bros.:—Rather shy bloomer but good seller and a fine keeper.

Bassett & Washburn:—This has improved this season with us and is the best all-round white we have grown.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall plant 10,000 for next season.

J. F. Wilcox:—Does not do well with us and will discard it.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Will discard.

Queen Louise.

Peter Reinberg:—Very good bloomer but at times inclined to burst.

J. F. Wilcox:—Consider it our most profitable white in the common varieties.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Good only for retail place where splits can be used; will discard.

Wietor Bros.:—We have fine plants but it is far from being an ideal white.

Bassett & Washburn:—Too small.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Expect to grow 2,000 next year.

Gov. Wolcott.

J. F. Wilcox:—Well pleased with it and shall grow more of it next season.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Not profitable enough; will continue to grow a few for stock only; it is a good exhibition variety, which creates demand for cuttings.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Like it well enough so that we expect to plant 10,000 next year.

Bassett & Washburn:—Produces excep-

Lillian Pond.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Bursts and stemrots; will discard.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall not bench it next year.

Bassett & Washburn:—We are disappointed, as it splits so badly. The size of bloom is good. Will give it another trial next year.

Gov. Lownder.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Very fine if constitution holds out, which seems doubtful; worth trying again.

Peter Reinberg:—We have not had blooms enough from it.

Peru.

Peter Reinberg:—The best white we grow; prolific and continuous bloomer; pure white.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall not plant it next year.

Other Whites.

J. F. Wilcox says Boston Market does well with him, and he will increase his planting next year. The Lakeview Rose Gardens have 10,000 Lorna, 5,000 Bon Homme Richard and are still growing Genesee. Bassett & Washburn say they are disappointed in White Bradt. Murphy's White is too small for them.

Wietor Bros.:—Have none left.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Don't expect to grow it.

Estelle.

Peter Reinberg:—Best red we grow very prolific, flowers large enough for commercial use.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—One of the best.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Can use 3,000 next year.

J. F. Wilcox:—Does fairly well with us, except that the stems are very short; we will only grow a limited amount next season.

Wietor Bros.:—Best of the scarlets now in cultivation; fine color and good keeper.

Crane.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall make it our principal red; plant 10,000 next year.

Bassett & Washburn:—This is the best red for early. It is hard to keep it from dying out late in the season.

J. F. Wilcox:—Have discarded on account of stem-rot.

Peter Reinberg:—Discarded for Estelle.

America.

Wietor Bros.:—Good for spring; brings a fine crop of good flowers.

Bassett & Washburn:—Good in the spring; worth growing on that account.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—We have 5,000 now on the place.

Mrs. Palmer.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Very free; has given good satisfaction but shall discard for newer varieties.

Wietor Bros.:—Large flower and of very good color, long, stiff stem.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall not grow it next year.

Peter Reinberg:—Discarded for Estelle.

Red Bradt (Chicago).

Wietor Bros.:—One of the best scarlets; will plant more of it next season.

Bassett & Washburn:—Very large flowers, similar in habit to Mrs. Bradt.

Peter Reinberg:—Would like it if it gave more flowers.

Harlowarden.

Bassett & Washburn:—Very fine flowers; had so few plants that we can only give a limited experience of it.

Peter Reinberg:—Probably the best crimson; does very well with us.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—We consider it the only one of its color, very free; we are now growing 10,000 plants.

J. F. Wilcox:—Does fairly well and will continue to grow it.

Wietor Bros.:—Best of all the crimsons.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Don't expect to grow it.

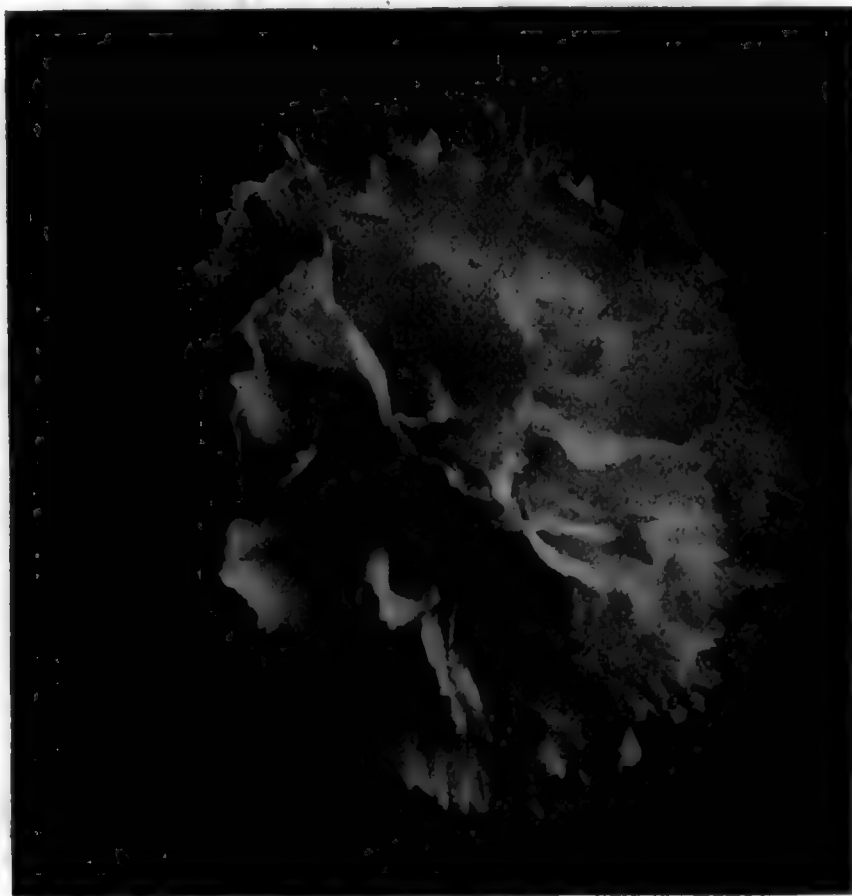

Roosevelt.

Peter Reinberg:—One of the best of this shade and a good bloomer.

J. F. Wilcox:—Does well with us; will increase our planting next season.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Expect to plant 5,000 next season.

Bassett & Washburn:—Very shy bloomer; Maceo gives more flowers than any other maroon variety.

Carnation Governor Wolcott.

(A flower hard to beat as a fancy white.)

tionally fine flowers, but not in such quantities as either White Cloud or Norway. It splits quite a little.

Her Majesty.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Our most profitable white.

Wietor Bros.:—Found it a good bearer of good quality flowers; will give it more bench room next season.

Bassett & Washburn:—Have only a few and the trial was hardly enough to give an idea of it, but won't try again.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Will plant 1,000 for next season.

Adonis.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Favorably impressed with it. Experts will succeed with it if patient. We shall increase our planting next season.

Bassett & Washburn:—The cuttings received had such a hard struggle to keep alive that it will take another season before a fair opinion can be given.

Peter Reinberg:—Despite bad showing so far we think it will turn out to be a fine variety. It is improving rapidly and now looks very promising.

J. F. Wilcox:—Does not do well with us.

A House of White Cloud Carnations Grown by Wiator Bros., Chicago, Where it Seems Perfectly at Home.

Prosperity.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Indispensable; can be grown at a profit if blooms sell for 5 cents average for season.

J. F. Wilcox:—We do not find it profitable, but will continue to grow a limited number.

Wiator Bros.:—Best variegated for size of flower, stem and keeping qualities.

Peter Reinberg:—Good flower but rather shy bloomer.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Shall plant 5,000 next season.

Bassett & Washburn:—Best variegated.

Mrs. Bradt.

Lakeview Rose Gardens:—Of 9,000 variegated next year, 3,000 will be Bradt.

Bassett & Washburn:—Will discard it as the demand is so small, also the stems come too weak.

Chicago Carnation Co.:—Discarded for Stella, which will try again.

Peter Reinberg:—Still the best variegated.

J. F. Wilcox:—Shall discard this season for Stella, which does much better with us.

Other Variegated.

Bassett & Washburn speak highly of Gaiety. Lakeview Rose Gardens will plant 1,000 Stella next season. Chicago Carnation Co. says Dorothy Whitney is a wonderfully profitable variety, the only yellow in commerce worth growing. Bassett & Washburn say Gold Nugget is the best yellow with them. Lakeview Rose Gardens have 5,000 Eldorado this year.

Novelties.

The Lakeview Rose Gardens will plant Indianapolis, Flamingo, Albatross and others next year. Bassett & Washburn will try Crusader, Flamingo and Lady Bountiful. J. F. Wilcox will plant Crusader, Flamingo, Lady Bountiful, The Belle and some others, not yet fully decided on. The Chicago Carnation Co. will try Lady Bountiful, White Lawson, Reliance and The Belle, for white; discard all but Adonis for Crusader in scarlet; Flamingo will be tested; a few plants of Indianapolis lead to a larger trial. Wiator Bros. will plant Lady Bountiful, Flamingo and others.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Feeding.

With the holiday strain well over and the plants back to normal conditions, the time has arrived when it is but natural that the plants will relish an addition to the bill of fare in the shape of food in liquid form. I wish to state, however, that this statement applies to healthy plants only.

The soil in the benches should by this time be filled with a network of roots eagerly in search of food, and if the product is to be kept up to the standard as regards size, brilliancy of color, stiffness of stem and, in fact, all that goes to make up high grade blooms, it is evident that those elements which have been taken from the soil, must be replaced.

To supply the needs of the plants thus far, I have advised the application of top dressing, principally for the reason that I am not in favor of using liquid manure while the days are growing shorter, but we are now coming to the point where the plants will begin to feel the influence of the sun's increase in power, growth will naturally be more rapid, food consumption greater, and if this can be supplied in a form easily assimilated there will be a perceptible gain.

My objection to the use of liquid manure during the darkest days of winter is based on the principle that complications arising, or apt to arise, from overwatering cannot be too strictly guarded against during the time mentioned. Every grower knows the operation of watering to be an art learned only by close observation and thorough knowledge of the requirements of the varieties under care and as the real object of using liquid food is not intended to serve the double purpose of supplying food and water at the same time, it is obvious that the safer plan is to defer this operation until more bright weather may be expected than generally occurs during the short days of winter. Of course, one cannot feed in this way without wetting the soil but the meaning I wish to convey is that the plants should not be suffering for water when an application is made. On the other hand, it is often the case that although not in want of water, there would be a lack of nourishment had not a top dressing been applied, the good elements of which have reached the roots through necessary watering.

It is important that due consideration be taken of how the plants have behaved since housing, of the quality of the soil when benched, also their present appearance as regards health, for, as I before remarked, it is only healthy plants that will be benefited by liquid food and it is assumed that your judgment will tell you that if for any reason a variety has not given good returns in suitable soil, it would be a waste of material to increase the food supply, to say nothing of the danger likely to occur through overfeeding.

Various manures can be employed for this operation, either separately or in combination, but from experience I am of the opinion that a combination gives the best results, for the reason that the opportunity is afforded of maintaining a better balance between the different fertilizing elements. But this is a subject which requires careful study, not only in order that those varieties with which we feel quite familiar may be properly cared for, but we must be prepared to judge the needs of new introductions which in course of time are bound to displace the present standard sorts.

Cow manure is without doubt the best for a foundation, while that from sheep I would place next. While hen manure is inclined to be of a fiery nature, it contains properties the value of which should not be lost sight of and when used in conjunction with other manures no harm will result. We have had unvarying success with a mixture in the proportions of two parts cow and one of sheep manure with an occasional addition of a double handful of hen manure to a bushel of mixture. Bone meal will be found profitable to use at times when the hen manure is left out, adding in about the same proportion.

Means should be devised whereby the solution when ready for use will be clear, thus facilitating distribution. It is impossible to give any exact directions as to the quantity a bench should receive, owing to the difference in strength of materials employed, how handled and time consumed in preparation. However, it is safe to begin with a solution of medium strength and, if good results follow, the plants will probably stand a stronger application later.

Weather conditions this month have not been conducive to ideal growth in carnations. There is a disposition to softness which is quickly perceived when we are now and then blessed with a day of bright sun and when considering the question of feeding this soft condition must be taken into account and before operations are begun in earnest it would seem best to wait until the plants are firmer in tissue and indications point to a larger percentage of bright weather. I will probably have more to say on this subject next week. GEO. S. OSBORN.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Exhibition Preparations.

It is only about five weeks from the time the REVIEW goes to print this week until the American Carnation Society opens its convention at Detroit, and it ties in fine shape and you want your reputation as a carnation grower to spread a little outside of your own locality, that's the place to show the results of your skill. If you have neither one to show, it will pay you many times the price of the trip to go and see what is doing in the line of improvement in the carnation.

The date being two weeks later than in past years, it is to be hoped that milder weather will prevail, making it less risky for those shipping blooms from a distance. During the past five years at every convention there were always several who either had their blooms ruined by freezing or the severe weather delayed the trains so that many blooms did not arrive until near the close of the convention. This is especially vexatious to those having novelties they wish to disseminate the next season. They lose the best chance for publicity they could possibly find. Those who have blooms of standard varieties frozen or delayed can recover a large part of the loss from the express companies, but the novelty owner cannot hope to recover even a small per cent of the damage he sustains through the loss of sales he would make on the strength of his exhibit.

What I started to write about is the preparations that might be begun now for that exhibition. By March carnations are usually fine and plentiful, and you will need extra fine blooms if you want to make a hit. A little feeding will be necessary, and, in fact, if the plants are growing strong and the growth is free, you can feed quite regularly now, according to the weather. During dark, cloudy weather you must not feed much with manure, but rather confine your feeding to wood ashes and lime. When the weather is bright you can make the liquid manures the main diet, with an occasional dose of wood ashes or lime between. You will soon see a ported, so that the large blooms, by the time they are half-developed, do not become too heavy and gradually weigh the stems down. Varieties that are inclined that way will be benefited more by wood ashes than by manure. You want to stiffen the stems all you can.

Unless the calyx of your variety is extra strong and the crop of buds extra heavy I would not remove any of the blooming stems in order to throw more strength into the exhibition bloom, but I would rather depend on a good strong growth and liberal feeding to produce as good a bloom as the variety is capable of, without running the risk of bursting most of the calyxes. Nothing will cause calyx splitting quicker than the removal of growths in considerable quantity. You have noticed this fact when you propagated all you could of a fine variety and you robbed the plants of all the cuttings you could get.

It is too early yet to put on much of a mulch, so you must feed with liquid. There are many manures and fertilizers you can use with success, according to the texture of your soil, but be sure you begin with weak doses. To make it too strong at the beginning is worse than to give none at all. A. F. J. BAUR.

ANOTHER WHITE LAWSON.

We are just in receipt of a fine white carnation flower from E. Metzmaier, of Columbus, which he claims is a sport from Lawson, having the same style of flower and habit and as free in blooming. Mr. Metzmaier has taken quite a number of cuttings from this sport and expects to have quite a few plants for next fall's planting. LIVINGSTON SEED CO.

THE STEM BORER.

We enclose some carnation cuttings which show the work of a little white worm which attacks them at the surface of the soil and makes its way upward, completely destroying the stock. The worm itself is also sent in a vial. This pest is only found on one bench of young stock. Other plants of the same varieties and in the same soil do all right on other benches. What is this pest and what shall we do to get rid of it? A. G. A.

I cannot give you the Latin name for the worm, but I am of the opinion that it is no other than what is usually called the stem borer. You will usually meet it in the field, attacking the carnation plants in the same manner as they are attacking these cuttings. I do not know much about this borer and can only suggest a remedy without knowing whether it will rid the place of it or not. I would soak some tobacco stems in boiling hot water and after cooling it off I would water the soil thoroughly with it. Then I would dust them heavily with hebebores or slug-shot. Shoot it into them hard so that it will get all over the stems well. They will be pretty sure to get some of it when starting in on a plant and most likely it will kill them. The tobacco water may drive them out of the soil if it does not kill them. Unless there are a big lot of these cuttings, or they should be very valuable, I would burn them up and steam the soil before taking it out where they could get into your planting ground. Once you get them in there you may have a hard job getting rid of them. A. F. J. BAUR.

is not too early to begin preparations for the exhibition to be held in connection with it. That every carnation grower of any importance in the country will be there goes without saying. Detroit is quite centrally located, and is easily reached from all directions, and there surely will be a great attendance. If you have anything new to show to the carnation trade, that's the place to show, or if you have the standard variedifference in the size and texture of the blooms and the strength of the stems.

Disbudding must, of course, be attended to as soon as the laterals can be handled without injury to the main buds. Take them off down as low as you will cut the stems. If you want the cuttings down low take them off and get them into the sand, but don't leave them on the stem to rob the bloom of its size. Also be sure the stems are well sup-

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The premium list for the fifth annual exhibition of the American Rose Society, to be held at Philadelphia, March 22 to 24, provides classes similar to those of the previous shows. The regular classes are as follows: Division A, teas and hybrid teas, twenty-five cut blooms, open to all, premiums for American Beauty and Queen of Edgely, $10 and $7; other varieties, $10 and $5. Division B, teas and hybrid teas, twelve cut blooms, open to growers having not more than 20,000 feet of glass, premiums $5 and $3 for best exhibits of each variety. Division C, teas and hybrid teas, twelve cut blooms, open only to private gardeners and amateurs, premiums $5 and $3 for best exhibits of each variety. Class D, hybrid perpetuals, twelve blooms, stems twelve inches or over, open to all, premiums $10 and $5 for best exhibits of each variety. Class E, same as above, open only to private gardeners and amateurs. There is a silver cup for group of six varieties in pots, also premium for six plants of one variety in not larger than 8-inch pots. The best fifty blooms of American Beauty get $100 and the Lord & Burnham silver cup; second premium, $50. Premiums of $20 and $15 are offered for fifty blooms, any variety, Beauty and Edgely excluded. For six blooms of any variety introduced since 1900, $5 and $3 is the offer. For best display, ten varieties, in space of 100 square feet, the premiums are $100 and $50. A silver cup is offered for the best American rose not yet in commerce. There are liberal premiums for six standard plants, specimen standard, specimen plant other than standard, specimen plant in not less than 12-inch pot, six Crimson Ramblers and six plants of distinct varieties. The special prizes include an offer of $25 for plants in pots, three of each of eight varieties; also $25 for six plants each of Magna Charta, Gabriel Luizet, Mrs. Laing and Mereville de Lyon. The American Rose Society's medals are offered for novelties.

beautiful cattleyas. C. labiata is out of flower by New Year's and most of them a month before. C. Percivilliana will soon be gone. After they are out of flower they need little moisture till they begin to break and make new growths. While resting, and that is now, is the time to give them attention. These cattleyas are grown in pots and baskets and on blocks of wood. For the commercial florist the basket is the better method, for then they can be suspended from the roof, and that's economy of space. A thorough cleaning of the leaves and bulbs is always in order. Scale is their worst enemy and must be removed with something that won't scratch the surface of the leaf, say the handle of the budding knife, and then sponge with warm water.

Peat is the only material that they need for their roots to work in, or on, and then surface with sphagnum. Don't increase the supply of water till the young growths are an inch or so long. Sixty to 65 degrees is the minimum temperature that they should have at any time. While it would greatly check the growth of a cattleya to disturb its roots when in active growth, say the month of April, at any time of the year you can with great benefit pick out and renew any decayed peat or sphagnum from the surface.

Oncidium.

Oncidium varicosum Rodgersii is grown in several ways, in baskets, pans or on blocks. A shallow pan is the better way. Peat with an addition of broken up charcoal (not dust) suits them well. Do any shifting or surfacing as soon after flowering as you can, because they soon start their new growths. Keep them in a night temperature of 65 degrees.

The dendrobiums are a most beautiful genus, but unless you cut the whole flower bearing stem, or so-called bulb, they are not very useful except in decorations where the whole plant can be used, and then what could be more beautiful than a well flowered D. Wardianum? It would adorn the reception room where Theodore Roosevelt settled the differences of the Czar and the Mikado, all three being represented in person.

D. nobile and D. Wardianum are the two most profitable and easiest man-

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

For the Orchid Growers.

In these dark days, when growth is slow, there is time to look over the orchids, if you grow any, and there are a number of florists like the writer, who grow a few dozen plants of the leading commercial species. It is for them these hints are given.

Cypripedium.

Cypripedium insigne will be about all cut. This is a terrestrial orchid that has no pronounced period of rest and a good healthy plant does some growing the whole season. If they have outgrown their pots, or the compost is in poor condition, or they simply want surfacing, now is the time to do it. Perhaps you may desire to increase your stock by dividing some of the large crowded plants. Fill the pots half full of clean crocks and in the case of repotting remove all the old soil that has become sticky or compact. Keep the crown of the plant above the rim of the pot and then surface with fresh, live sphagnum. The material to use differs with some expert growers. What is known as peat is used by some growers; others have equally good success with fibrous, turfy loam.

Just a word here about peat and sphagnum. The peat that is used in Europe is the surface, two or three inches, of some hill that has been previously covered with low growing heaths and then all the fine particles are shaken out, which leaves little but roots and fibers. Our American peat, at least all I have seen, is the chopped up, fibrous roots of our strong growing native ferns, such as Osmunda regalis and others. Perhaps one is just as good for the purpose as the other, for both simply act as a medium for the roots to creep about on and absorb moisture. The sphagnum moss every florist knows, even the dude behind the counter who hardly knows but what a cyclamen is an orchid, can pronounce sphagnum. But don't think the dead, dry material that you stuff a wreath with will do for surfacing orchids. It must be fresh and alive and when you see the sphagnum green and growing, you can be almost sure that your cypripediums are doing well. About 50 degrees at night, or a trifle higher, will do for the winter months. April, May and June is the time of the most active growth and then the greatest amount of moisture is needed, but at no time should the surface moss be allowed to get dry.

Cattleyas.

Pretty and subdued the cypripedium is, and in some arrangements most chaste, but the large public, when it asks for an orchid has in mind the aged, although both are generally worn out in four or five years. Nobile can be renewed by propagating from your own stock, but Wardianum is not so easily increased. They are always better suspended from the roof in small pots or baskets. Their growth is peculiar. About the flowering time, which, with nobile, is in December and January, they send out young growths from the flowering growths. These can be taken off and, if well managed, make the second year fine bulbs that will make the finest of plants. Several, or to be more definite, a dozen of these offshoots can be put into a 12-inch pan.

Although these dendrobiums will endure, during the fall months, a temperature of 50 degrees or a little below, they are tropical and when flowering and making their growths want 65 degrees at night. When dormant, which is before flowering, is the time to repot or surface them. Because you have replenished the little peat around their roots you need not start them growing. If nobile or Wardianum make a start to grow you must let them grow by bringing into warmth or they will not make a growth that will be of any use for next year.

Calanthes.

Calanthes are grown by a few. It's an orchid but does not look like one. Veitchii is the best species, a beautiful spike of pink flowers. They are or will soon be out of flower. When started the latter part of September or October they begin to make the growth which will form the bulb for another year. And after the flower is cut growth must be encouraged and continued until the bulb is fully developed, which may be the middle of April. Then they can be put to rest in any warm corner till next September and kept absolutely dry. They are a truly terrestrial orchid and want for potting material a good fresh loam with a fourth of rotten cow manure and, while making their growth, from now for the next few months, relish liquid manure. ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Those roses which were rooted in October or November with a view to planting them for summer bloomers should now be large enough for benching. Such varieties as Kaiserin, Liberty, Ivory, Golden Gate and Chatenay are largely used for this purpose because of their ability to withstand the hot summer weather without showing serious deterioration in size and quality.

By planting now these varieties can, with proper care and attention, be brought into flowering condition by Memorial day, just in time to take the place of those winter blooming varieties which have to be thrown out to make room for the young stock.

Those who have made no provision to have soil in good condition for this purpose will be badly handicapped this season, as it will take considerable time to get soil which has been exposed to the elements all winter into good, hearty condition. Where this system of culture is practiced it will pay to have a good soil shed, where the soil will at least be protected from rain and snow, so that it will be available for use however bad the weather may be.

If the soil is wet or frozen it should be allowed to lie on the bench at a rather high temperature until it gets mellow, when it can be spread and planting proceeded with, following the same methods as recommended for summer planting.

As the comparative lack of sunshine during the first few weeks after planting will incapacitate the young plants from using a very rich diet, it is better to refrain from using bone meal or other fertilizers until they are well started. Careful watering, ventilating and frequent cultivation will constitute the principal requirements for the first three weeks.

When the young plants have taken a good hold of the soil, and show a good growth, they will be greatly benefited by a sprinkling of bone meal, which should be lightly stirred into the soil while cultivating is being done. This can be alternated by a sprinkling of air-slaked lime every two weeks.

Until the warm weather commences and the soil is well filled with roots it is safer to refrain from liquid feeding, as this has a tendency to cause sourness in the soil and has a very sickening effect on young stock. When the weather becomes hot a light mulch will protect the tender roots from the strong sunshine, keeping them cool and materially aiding in keeping up size and quality of bloom.

The summer blooming stock which has been resting during the past two months should now be started, so that a good growth may be obtained by early summer. All the small and straggling wood should be removed, and as the plants are now in a dormant state they won't suffer from a good pruning. The strong canes should be cut back to three or four eyes.

The soil between the plants should be removed as much as possible without causing injury to the roots and the whole surface given a sprinkling of air-slaked lime. The bench should be refilled with a compost of equal parts of rich loam and well rotted cow manure and given a thorough soaking.

The canes should be bent horizontally and tied in that position. This causes the dormant eyes near the base of the plant to break and it is from these eyes the best canes are produced.

The temperature should now be raised to 42 degrees and the house kept rather close till the eyes begin to break, when the temperature and ventilation should be gradually increased until in three weeks it reaches the normal, 56 degrees.

Syringing will have to be practiced every bright day. This not only keeps spider in check but encourages the eyes to break freely by keeping a proper amount of moisture in the atmosphere. As the young growths increase in size the supply of water will have to be apportioned to keep pace, so that they may not receive a check from being over dry, nor get chilled by too much, as they are very impatient of wet feet.

RIBES.

TROUBLE WITH ROSES.

I send you some sample rose plants and soil. What is the matter? These are from a section in one bench that has been replanted three times and given different treatment, but they die within two months. Other plants in the same bench are two and three feet high and give fine blooms.

J. J. L.

These plants are to all appearance entirely free from disease, but they are far too weak to make any headway during winter weather; in fact, the two smaller specimens would never make thrifty, profitable plants under any circumstances, not because of their size alone, but because of the very poor quality of wood used in propagating. The soil is good and if properly composted is capable of growing fine stock.

There must be some defect either in the bench or its position in the house. If the drainage of that part of the bench is perfect, and it is not subjected to more heat, cold, or draught than other parts of the house, it must be one of these enigmas "which no fellow can understand." Throw out the plants and soil and give the bench a good washing down, then give it a hot lime wash, fill it with soil composted in the proportions of four of soil to one of decomposed cow manure. Select healthy and stocky plants and water only around the ball for the first three weeks, keep the night temperature 56 degrees, day temperature 60 to 75 degrees, according to intensity of sunshine, ventilate freely on all favorable occasions, and these plants must grow. As soon as they begin to grow cultivate freely, but do not attempt to feed until warm weather begins.

HEAD ROOM FOR MUMS.

We want to plant one house next summer with mums, and as it is rather low on the eaves we think of putting in Ivory or Alice Byron. The house is three feet at the eaves, and if we take the plants from sand the first of June, pot them in 2½-inch pots, and plant them in the beds the first of July, will they be dwarf enough to grow, in the thirty-inch head room? Will they throw off good blooms? Is White Ivory more dwarf than Alice Byron? X. Y. Z.

I see no reason why Byron or Ivory should not grow all right with the head room mentioned and if given good cultivation they will make very fair flowers. Buds can be taken on Byron any time after August 10, if they appear as soon as that; two and one-half feet is ample height. I don't know that Ivory is more dwarf than Byron; certainly not as I have grown it. I have had very fine flowers from this latter variety on a 12-inch stem, by taking the August crown. If plants are set very closely together in a bench they are apt to draw up much more and I would recommend X. Y. Z. to plant not less than 8x6 for good flowers. Of the two varieties I would certainly prefer to grow Byron. As I have before stated in these columns I consider Byron the best early white on the market today.

BRIAN BORU.

HARDY CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Will you kindly publish in your journal a list of outdoor chrysanthemums hardy in the northern states, giving names and colors? A yellow that, without disbudding or any special care, furnishes blooms from one to two and one-half inches in diameter, is frequently seen in gardens, and occasionally a pure white of the same general character and size is noticed; but I would like to get information upon all varieties that may be depended upon for autumn blooms and I am sure others would appreciate a list such as that referred to.

Not being familiar with the varieties of hardy pompon chrysanthemums that are grown outdoors in the vicinity in which this correspondent resides, I will not undertake to answer the gentleman as to what special variety he has reference to. There are many good varieties which stand the winters in the New England states. In yellows such varieties as Donkelaar and Mrs. Snyder are of the large-flowering type. What I mean is that they make flowers from two to two and one-half inches in diameter without disbudding. For small flowers there are Golden Fleece, Eagle d'Or, Gold Standard, etc. For white I would suggest Prince of Wales, Queen of Whites and Souvenir Melaine for large flowering, the best for cutting, and for small Rhoda, Labanah, Snowflake and Maid of Kent as among the best. In pinks there are Mrs. Vincent, St. Illoria and Day-break for large, and Edna, Captivation, Ivanhoe, President and Nellie Bly for small. In red or bronze use Georgiana, Grandeur and Julia Lagravere for large flowers, and Druid Hill, Gold Finch and Princess Louise for small. While this would make up a list that would somewhat cover the ground, it is only a sample of the good things found in the collection of any first-class nurseryman or florist who makes a specialty of such stock.

R. A. VINCENT.

TO ROOT REX BEGONIAS.

I would like to know the best temperature of house, sand and air for rooting Rex and flowering begonias?

W. R. G.

The Rex begonias, which are propagated by sections of the leaf, require a higher temperature than the great majority of the flowering species and varieties, and therefore the Rex is most easily propagated at the time that you are firing briskly, say from the middle of December to March 1, but the earlier you put them in the sand the better plants you will have for summer use. An ideal temperature for the Rex type would be 75 degrees for the sand and 60 degrees for the atmosphere. For the flowering varieties 65 degrees for the sand and 50 degrees for the atmosphere will do very well. As most florists know, nearly all flowering begonias propagate freely by cuttings in May and June, when the air of the house is warmer than the sand, but I never could root the Rex varieties at that season.

W. S.

GIVE THE DETAILS.

To those who wish replies to heating questions we would say that the dimensions of the houses, the purpose for which they are to be used, as well as specifications of boilers when these are at hand, must be included in all questions, otherwise a part of the data must be assumed by the person answering the questions.

L. C. C.

PLAN FOR WATER HEATING.

How shall we arrange our heating plant for this range: Houses run east and west, without partition walls. One house is 32x100, twelve feet to ridge, one house is 20x68 and two are 16x54, the three latter ten feet to ridge. There is glass in the ends and thirty-two inches in the south wall. All the houses have solid beds eighteen inches high. The boiler pit, eight feet deep, is at the east end of the largest house. A ten horsepower traction boiler is used, with thirty-five 2-inch flues. The top of the supply tank is twenty feet above the boiler floor.

J. W. M.

I believe that the best plan would be to use overhead or top heat supplied by a 3-inch riser under the ridge of the thirty-two-foot house and returning by twenty-two 1½-inch pipes over the benches at a height of eighteen to twenty-four inches, depending upon the crop to be grown. The other houses should be piped in like manner. The 20x68 house will require a 2-inch riser and fifteen 1½-inch return pipes, while the houses 16x54 will each require a 2-inch riser and eleven return pipes to maintain a temperature of 70 degrees during zero weather. If a lower temperature will answer fewer pipes can be used. If steam is substituted a considerable reduction in heating surface can be made. If it is practicable to run compact coils built out of manifold T's along the partitions or under the walks much less light will be obstructed and equally as good results obtained with many crops. I doubt if the ten horsepower boiler has capacity enough to heat these houses. It certainly has not capacity enough to carry the piping specified, which gives 1,932 feet of radiation, while the boiler is capable of supplying about 1,600 feet. If, as before stated, you can get along with a lower temperature and use less radiating pipe the boiler may carry it. It is poor economy, however, to attempt to get along with a small boiler.

L. C. C.

GREENHOUSE HEATING.

That little article that I innocently sent to St. Louis, which I never dreamed would get into print, has gotten me into lots of trouble. It's been a regular hot water circulator. Now I stand by all I said, only the system I attempted to describe was the ideal if starting under favorable circumstances. I did not go into particulars as to what could be done under unfavorable conditions. A communication like that of Edw. Aleck Wallace I like, but the long personal letters from people in trouble I must refer to the hot water professional expert. Mr. Wallace invites me to explain one or two points at which he is at variance and, as briefly as I can word it, I will.

He says: "How about the water becoming lighter under the influence of heat and thus rising to the highest point? Surely, this is as important a factor as the gravitation back to the boiler." I am sure it is but a small factor. The warm particles of the water would rise and do where there is no circulation at all, as the warm particles rise from the bottom of the tea kettle to the surface and surface colder ones drop to the bottom. If there was not the motive power (if it may be called so) of the return pipe the colder particles of water ten feet from the boiler would be pressing back or filtering back through the hotter particles that had later left the boiler. The water in the heater, improperly called boiler, is made lighter than that in the return pipe and its superior weight displaces or forces the hot water out of the flow pipe; therefore the heavier the column of water in the return pipe the faster will it displace the hot and lighter water in the heater. And the speed of the circulation will depend entirely on the difference in weight of the water in the heater and that in the return pipe. Supposing you have two columns of water each six feet high, say in 2-inch pipes or any size you like. They are connected at the bottom by a cross pipe or like the letter U. Half way in this cross pipe you have a valve. Close the valve, fill one of the vertical pipes with boiling water and the other with cold water. They are both the same height. Open the valve connecting these two columns of water and immediately there will be an overflow of the hot water and the cold water will go down in its pipe an inch or two, and that is the power or force which gives us the circulation.

I must admit that Mr. Wallace is correct in stating that according to the science of hydrostatics it makes no difference whether the drop in the return pipe is six feet in 100 feet or a perpendicular drop of six feet. The pressure where the return water entered the boiler would be the same. Yet in practice the perpendicular drop has been proved to be the better method. Perhaps it makes little difference whether there is a rise of two inches in 100 feet or a drop of two inches in the flow pipe, but after leaving the rising flow pipe near the boiler, to enter the house as near as possible level is much better than any great deviation from level.

The arrangement of heating pipes is too large a subject, so I will conclude by referring to the overhead pipe which I "so summarily dismissed." If you were heating the second floor of a factory it would be folly to do anything but place the heater on the ground floor. There are many instances where a heater cannot be placed more than a foot or two below the level of the greenhouse floor on account of the drainage or some other cause. Then to run the main flow pipe near the ridge will undoubtedly help the circulation, but you are wasting the heat and that flow pipe near the roof should be so encased with some asbestos or mineral wool that not a particle of radiation could escape till the water entered the pipes on the walls or beneath the benches.

Twinned Boilers.

ED. REVIEW:—On page 362, in your issue for January 14, F. W. tells how the water is driven out of one boiler into the other, the boilers being set level and twinned, without check valves in the returns. He also asks how a uniform level can be kept in both boilers. In reply to this we would say that this difficulty mostly occurs if the header, the main cross steam connection, is too small to provide an equal pressure in both boilers. It will be necessary to enlarge the present header, or better, place a large equalizing pipe from one boiler to the other. By so doing the pressure will be equal in both boilers, even if one is fired and the other not. With the above arrangement it will not be necessary to have check valves, but check valves are advisable wherever the boilers are valved off.

The Rose Society.

EDITOR REVIEW: I have just read the article by Benjamin Dorrance, "The Rose Society." It is a shame that he has to make such an appeal to the rose men. The foundation of our business is the rose. A florist's store without a rose? Think of it! We all, every one of us, ought to be most interested in the Rose Society. Every florist ought to be a member and support it in every way possible. S. M.

VIOLETS.

The Situation at Rhinebeck.

The very many violet growers in the vicinity of Rhinebeck, N. Y., as well as other sections, have experienced one of the worst years financially that have been known since the development to large proportions of the cultivation of the fragrant, modest little flower. There is no better bloom grown, either in color, size or perfume, than is found in Rhinebeck. The flowers of the best growers have been fully up to the average in quality this year; yet the cut in price has been really appalling. There are many causes alleged, among them, and perhaps foremost, the great financial straits in New York and other large cities.

The violet is truly a rich man's flower. Its freshness is its perfection and so it must be replaced very often, thus giving an outlet to the grower, who in turn must study to pick just at the right time and before any of the fragrance or color is lost. The overproduction of poor violets, and there are many, has certainly had its bearing on the study, carefulness and order of the first-class growers, while retailers, in order to dispose of the poor stock at all, have been obliged, no doubt, for their own percentage, to cut on the price of the good stock in order to appease the cry of the "anything that has a bloom" grower. The winter has also been an unusually severe one and the street venders, who are able to thus dispose of the left-over or second grade, have been obliged to go out of business.

As to the future of the violet much is to be said in encouragement to the painstaking grower and the careful shipper. The poor article should, and no doubt will, in the near future be given an honest cut price, thus encouraging or giving impetus to do better or go out of business.

There are very few new plants going up in Rhinebeck this spring. Many of the new growers are discouraged and willing to sell out, truly finding that money does not grow on bushes.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

Peter Reinberg, Chicago, Ill., submits for registration Rose Uncle John, a sport from Golden Gate. Flower opens nicely, like Bridesmaid, and is of a much deeper shade of pink than Golden Gate, which it resembles in all other respects.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., submit for registration seedling carnation New Daybreak. The result of a cross between seedlings of Scott extraction on one side and Daybreak extraction on the other, the vigorous characteristics of both these progenitors having been well perpetuated. Color, the true Daybreak shade, which is maintained without fading at any time of the year. Blooms three inches and over in diameter; stems eighteen to thirty inches, and always strong enough to hold flower erect.

Vegetable Forcing.

CARTHAGE, MO.—Perry Finn has just completed a greenhouse 30x200 for forcing vegetables.

LETTUCE.

All space should be kept filled up as soon as it is vacant. It will soon be too late for planting in raised benches. In these the crop will do all right through the month of March, but when April arrives the sun becomes rather strong and has a flagging influence on the crop, and even with all the moisture, atmospheric and otherwise, that can be given they lose that desired crispness that gives quality to the product. When solid benches are used, or where the crop is grown on the ground level, the natural moisture of the soil will be of material assistance in eliminating this flagging influence and in maintaining quality. Under those conditions, the indoor season can be considerably extended, and with judicious shading even kept on to meet the outdoor crop. But with the raised benches it is different, and I find it better to bring in a crop in cold frames between the indoor and outdoor crops, as the plants are easier managed in frames through the spring months than in the greenhouse, and it gives the space in the latter for other things.

A stock of young plants for this purpose should be kept coming along now. Any time after the middle of February planting may begin. By that time the sun's rays are of sufficient strength to thoroughly warm up the frames through the day, and, with covering at night, they can be kept warm enough. Hardening off of the plants is a very important matter. If taken right from the greenhouse and planted in the frames at once, the change in temperature and the check in planting is apt to be too much for them, and a set-back may result. It is therefore better to set the flats containing the plants in the frame for a week or so, to let them become acclimated before proceeding to plant.

If the soil in the frames is of ordinary good quality, it will not be necessary to change it, but it should be enriched by a liberal application of well-rotted barnyard manure, which should be thoroughly worked into the soil to a depth of at least a foot. This, too, should be done a few days before planting, and the sash bared to the sun through the day and covered up at night to concentrate the heat so that the soil will be warmed up as well as possible to make it more genial for the little plants. And unless the frames are set well down in the ground some rough material had better be packed around the outside to prevent frost from penetrating through the boards.

Several varieties that are hard to do in the greenhouse can be grown without much trouble in the cold frame. With ordinary care leaf rot and such diseases seldom or never attack them there. The Boston Market and Big Boston varieties are the ones we usually employ. Deacon also makes a splendid frame variety. Although a little slower than the others, it is worth waiting for, as it makes a firmer head and stands long before running to seed.

The Market.

Most of the wholesalers are in the habit of making pretty close comparisons of their sales, day by day and week by week, with the same period in previous years and to a good many of them, after looking at last year's record, the business this week looks pretty bad. The corresponding week a year ago was one of the best of the season; this week will not approach it. Not only is business dull by comparison, but the stock is not in sight to do much. However, much of the difference comes in the low prices now prevailing.

Good Brides and Maids are the only items which sell well; there are so few of these that it is hard to satisfy customers. Stiff prices prevail here but the small soft stock hangs fire. Beauties are scarce, except shorts, which are generally of poor quality. Carnations are again easing up, the lower grades needing considerable assistance in the quest for a buyer.

Bulbous stock is in a worse position than ever. Paper Whites are doing little better than previously. They have hardly brought the cost of the bulbs in the past few weeks. Tulips, too, are cheaper than ever before, stock which a year ago readily brought $5 per 100 now going slowly at $3. Valley must be good to sell, and other bulb flowers, including callas and Harrisii, are in the same predicament.

The violets are having as tough a time as the bulbs. There is only one ray of light, and that not a bright one. The fact that every day sees additions to the list of Hudson river growers who are shipping here shows that this market is fully as good as any in the country. But this is a mighty poor week for a comparison of results, for Monday was 20 degrees below zero. The weather man had to go back sixteen years to find as cold a day, and it has not yet warmed up very much. The New York violets were delayed twelve hours on Monday and several shipments arrived badly frozen. Several consignors shipped for the first time Saturday night and as a consequence are not likely to be pleased with results. However, as one party writes that Rhinebeck alone is producing 150,000 a day, if these consignors do not stick, the local dealers feel that doubtless others will be found to take their places. Quality seems to be good with all of them, at least the Campbells produced locally are having a hard time of it. Singles do better.

Various Notes.

A. H. Schneider, of Oak Park, has leased for ten years a piece of ground inside Concordia cemetery on which he will at once erect a couple of greenhouses to take care of the spring plant trade in the cemetery. The place opposite the cemetery formerly run by Mr. Schneider will be in the hands of Ernest Oechslin this season.

Phil Hauswirth is the youngest grandfather so far reported. His son Ed has a little daughter, born January 20.

The Fleischman Floral Company has taken a long term lease on one of the stores in the new Railway Exchange building at the corner of Michigan avenue and Jackson boulevard. Mr. Rubel states that the lease is more a speculation than anything else and that he has not decided whether he will sublet or put in a candy or flower store. The Fleischman Company, he states, has no thought of moving from the Palmer House, where they recently made a new lease.

T. D. Mosconesotes, of the Masonic Temple, has leased a room at North State and Division streets and will shortly open a store there. It is not far from Wienhoeber's on one side and Wittbold's on the other.

The building occupied by the Anderson Floral Company is to be demolished May 1 and Otto Young will build a sky-scraper there.

Bassett & Washburn are still cutting fine Liberties, stock that sells at $2 to $2.50 per dozen.

Peter Reinberg has placed an order with George M. Garland for close to 4,000 feet of iron gutter to be used in rebuilding the big section of his place running from the residence to Balmoral avenue. It will be a big job, and the old houses, only up about ten years, are still in fair shape, but Mr. Reinberg is so well pleased with the high gutter range erected last year that he thinks it will pay to put this piece in the same shape.

On the night of January 22 the Chicago branch of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company was burned out for the second time within a year. This time it was a total loss, approximately $200,000. The company has booked several good sized orders for greenhouse glass for early spring, but delivery will not be delayed on account of the fire.

On January 20 Herman Renneck, who shot Oscar Kreitling, was found not guilty of murder. In a previous trial the verdict was for conviction.

C. W. McKellar is making orchids a specialty, handling laelias and others as well as cattleyas and cypripediums.

James Hartshorne brought vases of Dorothy Whitney, Fiancee, Harlowarden, Reliance and Crusader to the Growers' Market last Saturday. It was all very good stock and he booked a number of orders for cuttings on the strength of the display. He says he already has orders for 175,000 Fiancee, to be sent out in 1905.

It is reported that labor troubles are imminent in the wooden box factories and the wholesalers are filling all available space with boxes "in the knock-down."

The Florists' Club will hold its second outside meeting this evening at Metropolitan hall, 856 North California avenue. The subjects scheduled for the last regular meeting, having to do with greenhouse building, will be discussed.

W. H. Hilton is at home from his trip to Cuba, having stopped for a day or two in New Orleans.

Mardi Gras at New Orleans comes February 15 and 16. It always brings a good many orders to this market.

Bentley & Co. are going into the rooted cutting business on an extensive scale, having made arrangements to supply practically everything in this line.

Leonard Kill has recently proposed twenty-four names for membership in the Florists' Club.

H. W. F. Goetz, with John B. Goetz, Saginaw, was a recent visitor.

C. Pruner, of Winterson's, is at his home in Ohio trying to get well.

John Zeck, of J. A. Budlong's, has been hobbling this week as the result of a fall off the ice which severely injured one knee.

J. Stern, the Philadelphia supply dealer, was in town this week, visiting his brother and the trade.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The opening of the week finds us enduring another siege of old-time winter weather, the outskirts, doubtless, of the cold wave that envelopes Chicago in a temperature of 20 degrees below zero. A few hours ago it was raining and overcoats were a burden. Now the festive ear muff is again in evidence. These sudden changes keep the growers on the anxious seat and accentuate the universality of the bronchial epidemic, which seems to affect about everyone in the trade.

There seems to be enough and to spare of every kind of cut flower stock. The very finest American Beauties touched 40 cents occasionally last week and Maids in a few special lots reached 12 to 15 cents. There was little change in the ordinary grades. Violets and carnations are plentiful and superb again in quality. Orchids are being called for by out-of-town buyers and hold steady.

Bulbous stock of all kinds commands low rates in comparison with last year, and in fact everything, when compared with the same dates in 1903, shows a marked recession from the prices then obtained. The outlook for improvement is some brighter, and a continuation of extreme cold weather will doubtless be reflected in a general improvement in demand. All the social functions, the opera, weddings and dinners are in full blast and balls of national repute will fill the intervening weeks till Lent with abundance of festivity and floral decorations.

Various Notes.

"Carnation night" at the next meeting, on February 8, of the New York Florists' Club promises to be of unusual interest. The rooms at the Grand Opera House building, corner of Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue, will be crowded, not only with members and exhibitors, but the ladies have been invited to attend the exhibition and will be the recipients of special courtesy. Not only members of the club who are carnationists are expected to exhibit, but displays will be welcomed from any grower desiring to place flowers of any kind on exhibition. They may be sent to Secretary John Young, 51 West Twenty-eighth street, who will properly care for and stage them for any unable to give them personal attention. Exhibits are expected from the leading growers of the country. It will be a splendid opportunity for all having novelties to make a preliminary display prior to the great convention a few weeks later, at Detroit.

Friday of this week is Carnation day and McKinley day, and it is much to be desired that the enthusiastic efforts of our friend Altick, of Dayton, in behalf of the McKinley memorial fund, are meeting with merited recognition and that the custom of wearing a carnation on January 29 in memory of the martyred president may be universally observed.

A. J. Fellouris is receiving splendid stock of galax and leucothoe daily and reports a busy season.

Nicholas Lecakes, of Twenty-ninth street, whose dealings in green goods of every kind have been rapidly increasing, has sailed for a well earned rest in Europe and will doubtless plant wild smilax on Mars Hill and in the pass of Thermopylae before his return.

The large phoenix sold by the collector of the port of New York last week on account of seizure by the customs authorities, were disposed of at famine prices, some stock worth $20 going at $4. Few florists were in attendance. The plants were ten to twelve feet high.

Charles Millang's conservatory proves a great convenience for city florists and the number of palms, ferns and flowering plants handled daily there is far in excess of expectations. Mr. Millang contemplates adding considerably to his room and facilities, having leased the whole building at 50 West Twenty-ninth street. He disposes of several thousand small ferns daily.

Croweanum holds steady at $1.50 per 100 at John I. Raynor's, the only New York source of supply for this beautiful novelty.

J. K. Allen is receiving a nice stock daily of the fine pink gladiolus Shakespeare, excellent quality for the season and for which there is a ready sale.

F. R. Pierson's new dark crimson carnation is a beautiful thing. It originated with W. C. Russell, superintendent of the C. F. Dietrich estate at Millbrook, and the stock was purchased by Mr. Pierson. The Pierson Co. also has a good novelty in a new smilax, Medeola asparagoides myrtifolia, a German introduction for which they have the American agency.

The winter residence of R. W. Clucas, of Clucas & Boddington Co., was erroneously stated in my last to be Orange. It should have been Summit, N. J. This firm has just received a large shipment from Japan of flowering wistarias, plums, peaches and cherries trimmed in attractive shapes and in fine condition, also immense quantities of tuberoses from their southern plantation.

On Thursday evening the fifth annual dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society will be held in the new hotel there and the secretary, Mr. Newbrand, announces the certainty of a large attendance.

Benj. Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa., will bask in the sunshine of the Florida climate during the balance of the winter.

Paul Dailedouze was delighted with his western visit, and the courtesy of his reception everywhere.

The trade extends its sympathy to A. L. Don, of Weeber & Don, seedsmen, in the loss of his mother in Scotland. The deceased lady was in her eighty-seventh year.

Hicks & Crawbuck, of Brooklyn, find the florists' supply department a good business venture, and have just added a fine team and new wagon to their facilities.

Theo. Paits, one of the old-time florists of New Lots avenue, East New York, died suddenly and alone at his greenhouses last Wednesday. For years he made his daily calls on the florists with hyacinths and valley as his specialties and personal memories of his frequent visits ten years ago remind me of his faithfulness to promises and sterling honesty that more than atoned for eccentricities. He was very fond of animals and a peculiar coincidence was the death of a faithful horse at the same hour he passed away. He was nearly 70 years old.

The proximity of the Detroit carnation convention develops a widespread interest in the east and a good attendance is certain from New York and vicinity. The railroads have announced a fare of one and one-third rate for intending visitors. It is quite likely a Pullman will be filled for the journey via the West Shore.

One of the most interesting exhibits at the great automobile exhibition here was that of the Caldwell Lawn Mower Co., of Newburg, N. Y. It was a steam lawn mower and its value for parks and large estates is evident. Its weight is about one and a half tons. It can be used as a roller, as well as a mower and attracted much attention at the show, which was attended by over 100,000 visitors.

The Bowling Club elected as officers of the new organization Wm. Siebrecht, president; Jno. B. Nugent, treasurer; Wm. Ford, secretary; Theo. Lang, captain. The second meeting was a most harmonious gathering, and thirteen members again demonstrated the luck of the proverbial unlucky number. Patrick O'Mara was present, still recuperating from his long struggle with Job's comforter, but will be in condition for his share of the sport by next Monday evening. The full membership is expected to total twenty. The scores follow and show marked improvement. Philadelphia and Flatbush may look for challenges before another moon.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business seems to have improved somewhat the latter part of the past week and the demand for stock is greater than for the last ten days. Since last writing we have been treated to some real winter weather, with a good fall of snow. This kind of weather will no doubt make a scarcity in the market. During the past week there were a number of dinners, weddings, receptions and other entertainments, which used up considerable stock. Counter trade is better and the downtown dealers claim that they see quite an improvement in this line. The street corner men are not able to sell in this kind of weather.

In carnations the market is well supplied, especially with pink sorts. Others seem in big demand. All whites sell well; the price on these is not so high; $2 to $4 buys a hundred fairly good blooms. Fancy stock runs $5 to $6. The best stock comes from Henry Baer, of Peoria, Ill. This stock is very fine and sells quick at top prices.

The rose market is somewhat weak but the demand is good for choice stock, the shortage of which seems general. The price is rather high, the best being not very fancy. The best of the Brides and Maids bring $6 to $8, Meteors as high as $10 and Gates $4 to $6. The market is not likely to be relieved if this cloudy weather continues.

Violets are in big demand and none too many are in the market. The price the past week was 75 cents per 100 and they are likely to go up to $1 this week. The quality of the stock is very fine. Bulb stock is still plentiful, but in better demand, as funeral work uses much of this, especially Romans and Paper Whites. These sell at from $1 to $3 per 100. Callas are in big demand at $12.50 as Harrisii are not in the market yet. Valley is very plentiful at $3 and $4. Most of the tulips are very short-stemmed to bring regular price. Freesias are scarce. A big lot of galax was sold last week, more bronze than green. Smilax, too, is selling well at 15 cents per string, also Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. Ferns have gone up to $2 per 1,000.

Various Notes.

Dr. A. S. Halstedt, of the St. Clair Floral Company, Belleville, was a caller last week. He reports that the Belleville florists have been kept very busy of late with funeral work. His new range of Dietsch houses is all ready for the glass and he says that the new addition will give the company much needed room.

It was learned at the Missouri Botanical Gardens that George E. McClure, whose home is in Buffalo, son of the well-known George, of that city, is to desert the ancient order of bachelors and become a benedict. He will lead to the altar Miss Ida Norton, librarian at the Missouri Botanical Gardens, on the morning of February 1. Congratulations are now in order and I know the members of the club are with me in wishing the young couple much happiness.

J. H. Hadkinson, superintendent of floriculture at the World's Fair, visited Omaha the past week on business connected with his department. The meeting of the committee from the club will take place this week.

J. S. Stern, of Philadelphia, was with us last week, selling florists' supplies. Jos. Roelker, of New York, was also a caller, selling bulbs.

Miss Birdie Jordan McDermon, youngest daughter of the late John M. Jordan, died last week at the home of her mother on Bacon street.

Henry Laucher, formerly with Edwin Lonsdale, Philadelphia, and later with John Brod, Niles Center, Ill., has taken a position with F. C. Weber, at 4326 Olive street.

Mayor Wells has asked for an additional bond of $550,000 from the exposition authorities as a guarantee to restore the western part of Forest Park to proper shape after the fair. A bond of $100,000 has already been filed.

William Adels has left the employ of F. H. Weber and is now with Fred Foster, at 505 Olive street.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., spent Sunday in St. Louis with friends. Fred reports everything all O. K. at his place and that he had a visit from his friends, Messrs. Steidle and Jablonsky. In company with Mr. Jablonsky and his foreman, Henry Blixen, he will pay a visit to Chicago growers next week.

ART IN FLORAL DESIGNING.

Like Mr. Donaghue, I "make up" flowers for a living, but must confess that instead of dulling the artistic perception, daily contact with this kind of merchandise has rather sharpened it. Neither has the study of human nature over the counter interfered with the development of a taste for the purer and sweeter objects which we call flowers. The financial part certainly is very essential, as is also the part of pleasing the patron. When I find that my ideas conflict with those of the customer, mine are immediately resigned. And it is well by the way, to be open to suggestions from customers. I am indebted to them for many valuable ideas. But at the same time, it might be suggested to Mr. Donaghue that he implant and cultivate in his patrons, as opportunity offers itself, an appreciation of the highest type of work he is capable of producing. And all this for his own benefit. This cannot be done in a minute; it takes long time, and patience of the same dimensions.

I have stood behind the counter for years, selling designs, and turned around and put up my own orders, and can testify to the fact that it pays, as well as pleases, to do things in the most artistic manner possible. Describe and illustrate different styles of work, until you hit upon a style that pleases the customer, but the working out of the details belongs to you. Be able to do rich, massive work, but be able also to spin misty sprays and garlands, like Mr. Donaghue's, but don't leave them in the air as he does. Fasten them on your pillows, wreaths and columns when you have opportunity to finish off a piece according to your best judgment. There isn't one customer in 500 who would ever inquire whether a design is lined with tinfoil, or any other kind of foil, if it pleases her in other respects. By all means study the inclinations of your patrons, each one individually. Know to whom you dare to make suggestions, and as well those who would not welcome your ideas. But there are dozens of people who prefer your suggestions to one who has a stiff preference for her own.

A piece that is poorly designed and well constructed is worse than a good design poorly constructed. It is all an error to suppose that beginners cannot take artistic instruction from the start, as well as mechanical details. Let them think along both lines at the same time. A large per cent of the designs sent out as models and samples are not up to the standard which they should reach. We have used Long's because they are almost the only ones available, and it is too expensive to make enough of our own. But many a time we have suggested improvements on these designs, while discussing them with customers, and they appreciate any such interest and suggestions.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

LEXINGTON, KY.—J. P. Keller says that they built three greenhouses last season and expect to put up two more this spring, for trade is better than ever. He says that the building of interurban trolley lines helps them considerably. Mr. Keller manages the city store and his father directs the growing at the greenhouses.

OAKLAND, MD.

Death of Henry Weber.

Henry Weber, the senior member of the firm of H. Weber & Sons, died at his home in the suburbs of Oakland, at 2:15 on the afternoon of January 21, after an illness of several months. He was 68 years of age and widely known in the trade. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon, January 23.

Mr. Weber was born in the Province of Hesse-Cassel, Germany, in 1835, and was a gardener by instinct. He had his own garden as a boy and after completing the usual course in the government schools he was apprenticed to the trade. At 19 he was in charge of the place as foreman. Enlisting in the British army, he saw active campaigning in the Crimean war, in 1854 and 1855. Later he participated in army operations in New Zealand, Asia and Africa, continuing in the service for ten years. In 1865 he came to America to join a brother, John, who had preceded him. The two engaged in market gardening near Mt. Savage, Md., continuing for five years. In 1870, Mr. Weber, having sold his interest in the business, removed to Cumberland, Md., and started at market gardening and plant growing. In 1879 he bought the property at Oakland where he has since lived. It was almost a marsh when he bought the land, but he converted it into an ideal property for growing cauliflower and celery for market. Soon, however, he was attracted to the possibilities in the line of florists' plants and cut flowers and in a few years developed this branch to large proportions. He was always alive to the value of the best cultural methods and was one of the first to take up the good work which has placed the carnation in the forefront as a florists' flower. Among the best known Weber introductions are Genevieve Lord and Governor Lowndes. Mr. Weber had three sons in the business with him and of recent years had left it largely to their care. One son, William, was vice-president of the American Carnation Society. They will continue the business as heretofore.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business since January 1 has been so light and everything so quiet that there has been nothing to write about during that time. Prices have been gradually falling until at present cut flowers are quoted as follows: Beauties, 75 cents to $3 per doz.; Meteors, Maids and Brides, $4 to $8 per 100; carnations, $1.50 to $4 per 100; tulips, $2 to $4; Romans, $3; valley, $4; violets, single, 50 to 75 cents; N. Y. double, 75 cents to $1; smilax, 15 cents per string. In large quantities these prices have been shaded heavily, and even then lots of stuff has been thrown in the dump pile. The downtown stores have kept very fine window displays, but even that does not seem to create any demand, and they all report nothing doing. The cuts with almost all the growers are light, which fact ought to make them feel very thankful.

Various Notes.

Sutton Parks will open a retail store in the Citizens' Bank building, on Euclid avenue. This location is a good one and is about half way between the stores of Smith & Feters and the J. M. Gasser Co. Mr. Parks has been in the business for the past six years, is well known and already has a good trade established with the best flower buyers of the city.

The trade has been agreeably surprised by the receipt of a notice from the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., announcing the opening of their commission and supply house at 52-54 High street on February 1. The company was organized under the laws of Ohio and has a capital of $10,000. It will do a strictly wholesale business in cut flowers and handle a full line of florists' supplies and has a force of men manufacturing wire designs. The first move of the new company was to purchase the stock, fixtures and good will of Bate Brothers and the F. R. Williams Co. Messrs. Geo. Bate and F. R. Williams will be found with the new company. E.

DETROIT.

Carnation Convention Plans.

The time has arrived when the carnation grower is thinking of the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society and wants to know what preparation is being made for the success of the meeting, which is to be held in the most central city in the Union, Detroit, March 2 and 3. The local club has been quietly working, has a meeting place that cannot be excelled anywhere and a program that should please all. The meeting will be held in Harmonie Hall, the exhibition on the top floor and the business sessions on the second. This is the same hall in which the S. A. F. met in 1899, and is sufficiently commodious. The banquet will be in the same hall and commence at 7:30 p. m., giving ample time for a pleasant program. The committee having the matter in charge has secured some of the most able speakers in the country for the occasion and a most enjoyable time is expected.

The exhibition promises to be the largest ever held. One grower has already written that he will bring over 3,000 blooms. As the one and one-third fare is secured from the railroads, there is every reason to expect the banner meeting of the society, and if the eastern growers appear with as good a representation as did the western growers at Brooklyn last year, the meeting is an assured success. Detroit has ample hotel accommodations of a first-class order and all who can should be on hand to help and to learn. The visiting ladies who attend will be asked to enjoy the banquet.

There will be three most interesting papers read and discussed, of interest to every member of the society. The president, G. A. Rackham, will be glad to secure hotel accommodations for any one in advance or give any required information. The members of the club will be glad to meet any and all delegations on arrival here and wish to be notified as to time of arrival. They also wish everyone to register on the first day of the meeting and procure their banquet tickets. It is necessary, to secure the one and one-third fare, to procure a certificate on buying a ticket and on arrival here turn it in to the secretary for validation to enable the holder to buy a return ticket for the one-third fare. Now let us get together once more for benefit and a social time. RAG.

BUFFALO.

Current Topics.

The most optimistic of our brethren pronounce the present state of business as quiet, and all will agree that there are plenty of flowers of all qualities to meet the attenuated demand. Very good long-stemmed tulips have been plentiful for the past week, but are not yet in brisk demand. Violets are in fair supply and few go to waste. Good carnations are always cleaned up. Roses appear to be rather more plentiful just now than is usual at this time of the year and there are too many of second, third and fourth grades. The public has not and perhaps never will fall in love with Golden Gate and Ivory will never sell if there are enough Brides to go around. Not every one wants big roses at an expensive price. A first-class Bridesmaid or Bride should retail now at $2.50 or $3 per dozen at least, and then you can pay the grower what he should have and what it is worth to produce them, but weak necked, limp and poorly colored roses of those varieties are wanted by no one.

And there is where I think there is an opening for most of us to grow perfect flowers of varieties that will produce a large quantity and can be sold at, say, $1 or a little more. W. J. Palmer & Son, of our city, grow a quantity of pretty, old Bon Silene and find a constant and profitable demand for it. Morgan is another variety, and what's the matter with sweet old Safrano, and Wootton seems relegated to oblivion. These varieties may not be the thing for the grower who ships his entire cut, but for the grower who retails his product there is room for at least some of them.

Perhaps Mme. Chatenay will be one of those roses that can be produced in quantity and sell at a moderate price. There is as much need for a dollar-a-dozen rose as for 50-cent carnations; there always will be, and this demand is not filled by a third quality of our finer and more expensive varieties.

We tried to have a meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday, but the slimness of attendance was excusable. W. F. Kasting was taking his forty-third degree of Masonry, better known as the "convivial rites." The secretary was suffering with "rumatis," to which he is a martyr. W. A. Adams could not venture across the street for fear of being drowned in semi-liquid snow. Others had good excuses and the country members could not be expected to travel through the flood. The executive committee decided to make the February meeting a carnation gathering, endeavor to get a few flowers of most advertised new varieties as well as some of the best home-grown standard varieties and a talk on the divine flower by some acknowledged authority, not a Buffalo man, of course, because he could not draw an audience. We shall be delighted to see Flamingo take flight from Syracuse and Lady Bountiful come, accompanied by her Fiancee from the west, and Crusader we will be particularly glad to see if he can leave the Holy Land, and others that can be spared. BELLINGHAM, WASH.—The bulb growers of Whatcom and Fair Haven should now be addressed at this place, as the two cities have been consolidated under the name of Bellingham.

THE TRADE AT CLEVELAND.

In the REVIEW under date of January 14 there appeared a notice of the incorporation of The Cleveland Cut Flower Co., by George Bate, F. R. Williams and others, and if space will permit I would like to say just a few words about these Cleveland florists and the Cleveland trade in general.

George Bate and F. R. Williams are among the leading men in the cut flower trade in Cleveland and it is gratifying to know they have joined forces in this new enterprise. Cleveland is fast becoming a great cut flower market and the demands of the trade must be met in an up-to-date and business-like manner.

On the one hand, the grower who sends his stock to market to be sold demands the highest market prices, and usually expects his entire shipment will be readily disposed of. On the other hand, the retailer always wants the best of stock at the lowest price and expects the commission man to let him select it himself. And right here is where the commission man's troubles begin. Only too often stock comes to market in anything but satisfactory condition, and when, in all justice to the grower, the commission man asks the market price for it, the retailer sets up an awful wail. Our wholesale men must use much tact and diplomacy, to say nothing of good common sense, if they wish to suit both retailer and grower, especially if stock is plentiful and weather conditions unfavorable.

And then there is the question of the street fakir to be considered. While he is not particularly active in the winter time, he is everywhere in evidence during mild weather in the larger cities, and is a great help to the grower and the market in general.

The class of people who buy flowers of a fakir on the street seldom patronize a florist's store.

These are questions which have been discussed quite often before and it is not necessary to go into more lengthy details now. But there is a class of florists who are neither wholesalers, store men nor fakirs, but who often do themselves and the market in general more harm than they are aware of. They are the small florists who, when they find that they have more stock than they can sell to their customers or the home trade will persist in peddling their goods to the store men at cut-throat prices. They won't send it to the commission man, who will get for it what it is worth, for they can't bear to think of paying a few cents' commission, but they will drive several miles to market, neglect their greenhouses and spend several hours going from store to store, never thinking of the time they are wasting.

Bate Bros. have made a remarkable record for themselves in the short time they have been doing business. The firm is composed of three brothers, all young men, and hustlers, too, and their modern range of about 35,000 feet of glass is devoted exclusively to growing cut flowers for the wholesale market. Roses, carnations, violets and adiantum are their specialties, and these are always well grown. Robert Hand has charge of the rose section and much credit is due this young grower for the fine stock he produces. The carnations, violets and other items are always good and better adian-tums cannot be seen anywhere in Cleveland.

This young firm had much to contend with when they launched upon the sea of business. The houses they bought were getting old, the stock was run down and their capital was not very large. By persistent effort, strict attention to business and fair dealing they have gradually climbed to the top of the ladder, and now they have a fine range of houses in East Cleveland, just outside of the city and a visit to their place is well worth the time and trouble. HANDLING LATE BULBS.

What shall we do with Von Sion tulips and Dutch hyacinths that were left over and just now potted up in pans and flats? Must they be at once placed outside or will under the bench answer, well covered over and in a cool house, say 45 to 50 degrees at night? Is it necessary they should freeze, and about when and with what treatment may they be brought into bloom? C. M. B.

These bulbs will be ready and anxious to make roots directly if they are put into pots or flats and given water. Beneath a bench, where it is never over 45 degrees, and covered with four or five inches of soil or tanbark, or any material that will keep the light away from them may do fairly well for them, and in six or seven weeks they will be so well rooted that when put on the bench they will flower quite satisfactorily. It will then be so late in the season, say the middle of March, that they will flower in a night temperature of 50 degrees and require nothing that we call forcing, such as those flowering at this date have required. If, however, you have a frame where you could cover them with a few inches of soil and then stable litter, to keep the soil in the pots or flats from freezing, I would much prefer it than beneath a bench in the greenhouse. Freezing is not at all essential. Tulips and hyacinths freeze hard in the beds when planted out for spring flowering, but they have made roots in the fall before freezing up and make more in the spring, after the frost is out of the ground and before the flowering time. The more active the root growth is in the spring, which late planting induces, the more lasting and beautiful will your tulip beds be in the month of May. W. S.

In the advertisement of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., last week the price of cuttings of Gov. Wolcott was given as $4 per 100 and $50 per 1000, where it was obvious that $4 per 100 and $30 per 1000 was intended. The price is correctly quoted in this week's issue.

VISITED ROCHESTER, N. Y.: Chas. P. Braslan, of Braslan, Seedgrowers Co., San Jose, Cal.

NEW YORK: The catalogue of Peter Henderson & Co., is delayed on account of a fire at their printers'.

W. F. MASSEY tells the North Carolina tuberose growers to get together and they may easily control the market.

IN general the reports from the catalogue seedsmen indicate that the extreme cold weather is keeping back mail orders considerably.

REPRESENTATIVES of eastern wholesalers are in the west with a knife fresh from the grindstone; "orders" is the watchword, regardless of price.

M. J. SHIELDS, Moscow, Idaho, a large shipper of grass seeds, estimates the grass seed crop of Latah county as worth considerably more than $50,000.

THE trade is just beginning to realize how short many of the standard varieties are. The week's quotations by the wholesale dealers have been thought too high in many cases. Refusals to pass orders at the prices asked, have, however, been followed by orders which in some instances have been refused except at a higher price.

THE drought in the southern and central valley counties of California has at last been broken, and the outlook for the crops is much more cheerful. In some of the southern counties there had been no rainfall of importance or value since last May. A copious downpour in nearly all sections on January 17 was welcomed with universal gratitude. The seed farms in the Santa Clara valley will be much benefited.

REPORTS from the vicinity of Omaha, Neb., show quite a disturbance there. Chilly temperature with occasional hot flushes prevails between the representatives of eastern and western houses. Conflicting statements are given out as to the cause of the short deliveries made by the corn growers. The local dealers put the blame for their failure to make decent deliveries upon outsiders who bought up sweet corn, intimating that the outside parties bought corn that the local people owned through contract. This is considered a lame excuse by those who expected a fair delivery on their contract orders, as they claim to have knowledge that shipments in good sized lots have gone out from the said local dealers at the higher prices which have prevailed. The calmness which usually characterizes the actions of seedsmen and other good business men in cases of emergency is lost sight of and the present temper of the interested parties is hurtful to the well being of the seed trade generally.

CONTROLLING PLANT DISEASES.

At the recent meeting of the American Breeders' Association, W. A. Orton, of the United States Department of Agriculture, discussed plant breeding as a factor in controlling plant diseases. His conclusions are summarized as follows:

Hybrid watermelons resistant to the dreaded watermelon wilt have been obtained. Sutton, of England, has produced potatoes resistant to the disease called "phytophthora." Millard produced disease resistant grapes, and Nilsson has produced a vetch resistant to peronospora. The United States Department of Agriculture has developed strains of cotton resistant to the cotton wilt. The best of these, the Rivers' Sea Island varieties, produce full crops of cotton of high quality on the worst wilt infected land. This department has also originated the Iron cow pea, which is entirely resistant to the cow pea wilt, and also to root knot caused by nematodes. Other new hybrid cow peas have been obtained, also resistant to both of these diseases and of better yield and quality.

It has been found practicable to breed for resistance and at the same time increase the value of the other desirable qualities of the variety. Mr. Orton emphasizes the selection of individuals and particularly for the resistance of their "blood" to disease as shown by the disease resistance of a large number of the progeny of individual mother plants. Hybridization should be resorted to when selection fails to accomplish the purpose. In using hybridizing as a means we sometimes have the added difficulty of fixing the types. There is no likelihood that the fungi causing disease will change their habits and become parasitic on the resistant strains.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Holiday Trade.

The January meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was the occasion for two papers on the holiday trade, which have proved of more than ordinary interest. One paper, prepared by William J. Stewart, covered Boston and New York. Another, written by G. C. Watson, covered this city. Both writers are warm supporters of the future of the Christmas plant, and treated the subject from the plantsman's standpoint. Both papers give an impression that plants are driving cut flowers out of the market at the holidays. With regard to this city, this idea is not borne out by the facts.

William J. Baker obtained a better average price than ever before for carnations. The Flower Market growers produced an immense quantity of the finest Beauties, and sold completely out of all flowers except a few poor teas. Leo Niessen sold more stock and realized a larger amount from Christmas sales than ever before.

More examples might be given, but these are enough. They may be summed up as follows: Cut flowers, more stock produced, more used, prices lower except on carnations. Plants, a slight increase at good prices on foliage and a decided increase also at good prices on choice flowering stock. The volume of business done in plants of all kinds at Christmas is small when compared with that done in cut flowers.

It was a wise move on the part of the Chicago Florists' Club to have exponents of the holiday plant give their views. There is danger in the extremely high prices. There is even more danger in stale stock. There is also a great opening for plant growers, but the field is limited as yet. Midwinter is not the best time to handle plants. At that season the general public prefers flowers, provided they are good and not too expensive. Let us hope they will continue to do so.

TORONTO.

The Market.

The weather during the last week has held to the traditions of the genuine old-fashioned winter. When it did decide to give us what sometimes is called a January thaw, about six hours was all it could spare. This has had its effect on the cut flower trade, and one of the most noticeable features has been the rise in the price of roses to what is known as Christmas prices. Carnations have been scarce, that is, good stock. Bulb stock of all kinds is coming plentifully now, which is helping considerably to make up for shortages in roses and carnations.

The severe weather has almost entirely demoralized train service, so that we never know when express goods are coming in or when stuff sent out by express will be delivered. Trains are running from five to twenty-four hours behind time.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Association held its annual election of officers in St. George's Hall on January 19, when the following officers were elected and installed for the ensuing year: President, W. H. Ford; vice-president, Geo. Douglas; second vice-president, Geo. Manton; treasurer, Geo. Mills; secretary, E. H. Collins; executive committee, W. Muston, T. Manton, W. Jay, D. Robinson, J. H. Dunlop, H. Dilleuth, J. Ede; representatives to the exhibition board, W. Jay and T. Manton.

W. J. Lawrence is at present cutting some nice Harrisii lilies. His roses are considerably off crop at present, which I might say is quite a common complaint with so many of the florists around town.

Among the younger growers who have lately embarked in business on their own account, Geo. Allan, of Toronto Junction, and John Milligan, of Mimico, are certainly making very creditable showings, their principal stock being carnations, and these have had good sale.

John Cotterill, who for years has had a reputation as a grower of Asparagus plumosus, has this year gone more extensively into carnations, violets and bulb growing and is sending in quite a quantity of good stock. His big houses of asparagus have been supplying the bulk of the asparagus put upon the Toronto market during the last two or three weeks.

D. J.

TEXARKANA, ARK.—M. S. Stegall says trade was splendid for Christmas, and has kept up well ever since.

CYANIDE FOR WHITE FLY.

EDITOR REVIEW: In your issue of January 7, I note that J. E. P. would like to know how to get rid of that little white fly. We had lots of trouble with the same fellow for the past two years, but I think we are entirely rid of it now.

I use two jars of any description, holding about one quart, as the mixture is liable to boil over. It consists of one ounce water, one ounce sulphuric acid, three-fourths of an ounce of cyanide of potassium. I use this quantity in each of the two jars for a house thirty-three feet long, twelve feet six inches wide and eight feet two inches to the ridge, inside measurement, even span. Allow the mixture to remain in the house all night and use two nights in succession. I also paint two of the hot water pipes with equal parts of lime and sulphur mixed with sour milk and let the latter remain on the pipes all winter.

J. E. P. will find the above too unpleasant for the fly to stay with him very long after the above dose. I have also noticed we have been free from tomato rust and blight since using the sulphur and lime on the pipes. S. J. TRESPASS.

YOUR paper does the work, all right.—J. C. SCHMIDT, Bristol, Pa.

RICHMOND, VA.—Business continues good. Frank Mosmiller reports the holiday sales as twenty-five per cent ahead of a year ago.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL
 by WILLIAM SCOTT
 Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.
Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopaedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

WARREN H. MANNING, of Boston, was at Minneapolis January 20.

HOWARD A. CHASE, of the R. G. Chase Co., Philadelphia, has been re-elected president of the Pennsylvania State Horticultural Society.

THIS is the season for meetings of horticultural societies and many nurserymen are taking advantage of the opportunity to shake hands with the buyers.

A. NORLANDER, of Elmwood, Minn., will again engage in the nursery trade in the spring with a large lot of ash seedlings, elder, elm, wistarias, etc.

At Newark, N. Y., the nurserymen are going in for raising beets for the local sugar factory. Stuart & Co. and C. H. Perkins are among those who will put in a considerable acreage.

THE newspapers chronicle the prolonged and unexplained absence of E. R. Hurlburt, of the Mt. Zion Nursery, Mt. Zion, Ill. He is chairman of the board of supervisors of Macon county.

THE Colorado State Board of Horticulture reports a grower who from one and one-fourth acres of Elberta peach trees last season marketed 2,363 boxes of fruit, bringing from 65 to 70 cents.

THE Meaders Bros. Nursery Co., of Dumas, Ark., is moving its general offices to Little Rock. They report business good in the southwest and will increase the number of their travelers this season.

I. M. SHEPHERD, Fair Oaks, Cal., complains that nurserymen are unwilling to pay the grower living prices for producing such specialties as Mammoth blackberry and Burbank's new Phenomenal berry.

H. A. SURFACE, economic zoologist for Pennsylvania, recommends the following formula for a spray for San Jose scale: Unslaked lime, 40 pounds; sulphur, 20 pounds; salt, 15 pounds; water, 60 gallons.

EVERGREEN, ALABAMA.

THE executive committee of the New England Association of Park Superintendents met in Boston January 20. It was decided to hold the annual convention of the Association in New Haven, Conn., June 14 to 16.

J. P. BROWN, of Connersville, Ind., secretary of the International Society of Arboriculture, will have charge of an exhibit of catalpas at the St. Louis exposition, the purpose being to demonstrate the economic value of the tree.

C. W. STUART, of Newark, N. Y., addressed the recent farmers' institute on "The Outlook for Apple Production as a Nurseryman Sees It." He said that increased plantings have hardly kept pace with the increasing demand and evaporation has created a profitable use for "seconds."

THE Pennsylvania Nurserymen's Association was organized at Lancaster, January 21, with these officers: President, W. H. Moon, Morrisville; vice-president, Thomas B. Meehan, Philadelphia; treasurer, Thomas Rakestraw, Kennett Square; secretary, Earl Peters, Mount Holly Springs. The annual meeting will be held in conjunction with that of the State Horticultural Society.

TROUBLE WITH ANTIRRHINUM.

We have the center bench of our house planted with antirrhinum, propagated in August from plants growing outside. Some weeks ago a cream-flowered variety became affected by some disease. The tips of the leaves first turn brown and within ten days the whole leaf will be affected and have the appearance of being scalded or burned by blistered glass. The white and yellow varieties in the same bench are perfectly healthy. We are keeping a night temperature of 55 to 58 degrees. The plants are growing in the same soil after chrysanthemums without any additional fertilizer, only a light sprinkling of lime. Can you tell what it is and suggest a remedy without the necessity of lowering the temperature?

SNAPDRAGON.

The one who has been asked to answer the above does not claim to have had a very extended experience with antirrhinum under glass. We have never seen any trouble with them as described. The best we ever saw were growing in a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees, but if the temperature quoted above keeps some perfectly healthy that will not account for the cream-colored varieties withering. Any poorness of the soil will certainly not account for the trouble and as no insects, fungus or bacteria is mentioned, I must pass and trust that some one of larger experience can enlighten and relieve Snapdragon.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—Trade is quiet here just now on account of the shut-down of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. plant.

FRANKFORT, KY.—Henry & Leclere are doing a nice business. They began in 1902 with two houses 20x100 and last season built another of the same size for carnations. E. Power also increased his range by one house last year. John Kraehenbuehl has taken the position as gardener to Dr. A. J. Alexander, at Spring Station, where they have three houses in plants and vegetables.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN JOSE, CAL.—The frosts have been as severe as last year. Callas have been cut to the ground and some bulbs entirely lost. And the outdoor beds of Paper White narcissus are producing no flowers of value. But the cut flower trade seems to be good. C. Navlet's store is continually filled with customers, and G. A. Lehmann is busy at both store and greenhouses. Mr. Braslan, the seed grower, is still in the east. Some very fine Princess of Wales violets are being received from Colma. The violets of local growers have all been hurt by the frosts.

NILES, CAL.—John Rock, of the California Nursery Co., says that the season's business so far shows a satisfactory increase over that of last year. The selling season extends from October to May. In fruit trees there has been a run on cherries this season, and prunes have sold better than for some years past. Olives are less in demand each year. The large amount of labor required in gathering the fruit extracts about all the profit from the crop. Mr. Rock believes there is a great future for the Jordan almond, which he is now introducing to California growers. It has a very large kernel of fine quality. The nursery contains 500 acres and is strong in ornamentals. There are many acres of palms and ornamental trees that are never seen planted outside in the east. An avenue of immense Phoenix canariensis is a sight to remember. There are greenhouses for some of the tender plants and an immense earth house for plants and shrubs in pots. Mr. Rock is not an old man, but he has been in the nursery business in California for forty-one years.

PLANT NOTES.

Although the plant buyers in California do not devote as much space to carpet bedding and annual flowering plants as is given in the east, there is some demand in the vicinity of our large cities and in many of the better class of country residences for showy, soft-wooded stock. We have not had a very severe winter and geraniums and heliotropes in the neighborhood of San Francisco are still growing, although in some exposed places they have been bitten somewhat.

Achyranthes, alternantheras, geraniums and salvias can be easily rooted here, at this time of the year, in cold frames and kept in flats until the middle of March or the first of April and they will be ready for sale. We are planting seed of Golden Feather and Lobelia Crystal Palace Gem today and giving the boxes a little bottom heat and they will be ready at the same time. The dwarf blue ageratum is one of the most delicate bedding plants here and is grown from seed also. Coleus is not much used for outside planting in California, being grown principally in pots for house decoration.

In geraniums, the best selling sorts are Mme. Salleri, Mme. Pollock, Mountain of Snow, Marechal McMahon and Happy Thought. Both the yellow and red alternanthera, variegated alyssum, dwarf lobelia, achyranthes in three colors and scarlet salvias are about all that are used in quantity. The canna, although in great favor in the eastern states, is not planted generally in California. Owing to the long, dry season they do not make as much growth or attain such showy proportions as they do elsewhere. We use instead the giant Abyssinian banana (Musa ensete) and various hardy palms, either as a background for smaller plants or as individual clumps in the lawn. The bananas have not been frost bitten to any extent this season and unless we have some very severe weather they will begin a new season's growth with plenty of foliage on hand.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are having fairly cold weather during the present week. The thermometer registered 28 last night, and that has been about the average for the past ten days. All kinds of flowers are somewhat scarcer than they were last week, and the price of good roses has gone up a step. I do not think the quality of Brides and Maids is improving, as almost everything offered is weak in stem and small in flower. Carnations are holding their own, and there is no surplus of any variety. Chrysanthemums are still in the ring, but they are getting smaller and soon will be a thing of the past. Bulbous stock of the narcissus tribe is very plentiful, but daffodils are scarce yet and bring very fair prices. It will be a couple of weeks before they are handled in quantity. Valley is plentiful and sells at $5 per hundred wholesale. Much of it is soft from over-forcing. Tulips are to be had only in limited quantities, but in a week or two we may expect a deluge of them. All sorts of green stuff is scarce. Freesias are somewhat easier, but there have been no large quantities brought in yet. Lilium Harrisii are not up to the standard with most of the growers, many short-stemmed flowers representing either poor quality of bulbs or improper handling.

Notes.

H. Rowland Lee, the well-known landscape architect of Los Angeles, is in town for a few days, and so is Chas. Olaine, of Palo Alto.

The Holland Floral Co. has purchased an acre of ground in Elmhurst, and is contemplating the erection of several more greenhouses.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Three days of steady rain and two days of flood hurt the flower business of this city last week. On January 23 and 24 the raging Allegheny and Monongahela rivers overflowed their banks and flooded the lower part of Pittsburg and Allegheny. Among the florists who have their places of business in flooded districts are Mrs. E. A. Williams, L. I. Neff, Geddes & Blind, Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., Breitenstein & Flemm, and W. C. Berkert, of Allegheny. Timely preparations were made by these firms and all goods were removed to a place of safety.

Prices on all flowers descended very much last week; they surely reached their lowest point; never before has good stock brought so little as now. Quantities of good carnations and roses are arriving and the demand for them is limited. Tulips of very good quality are being received. The demand for Romans and Paper White narcissi is light.

Notes.

The committee which has the Florists' Club smoker in charge has sent out a very unique announcement, a programme which should insure a full attendance.

Gardeners' Club Dinner.

The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club spent an enjoyable evening at the Regina, January 19, the occasion being its annual dinner. R. W. Whiting, the president, occupied the chair and there was a large attendance of members.

An interesting feature of the evening was the presentation of a watch to Mr. Whiting, as a token of esteem from the members of the club on his retirement from office and approaching departure from the city. The presentation was made by James McKenna.

The toasts were as follows: "Montreal Horticultural Society," replied to by A. J. Bowles, secretary-treasurer of that society; "Canadian Horticultural Society," Ex-president I. Bennett; "Lachine Horticultural Society," President Church and C. A. Smith; "The Seed Trade," Messrs. A. Simmers, Toronto, and William Ewing. During the evening songs were rendered by W. C. McAllister, W. A. Lea, W. Wilshire, Mr. Knowles and Archie Walker.

The officers of the club are as follows: President, R. W. Whiting; first vice president, A. Gibb; second vice president, C. Craig; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Horobin; assistant secretary, Herbert Eddy; executive committee, A. C. Wilshire, J. Eddy, J. Walsh, W. Alcock, W. C. Hall, A. H. Walker and George Trussell.

BREITMEYERS' NEW ROSE

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID
TO BE DISSEMINATED APRIL 1, 1904

COLOR—Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petals is of a creamy, flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE—Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM—Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH—Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific. ALL ORDERS BOOKED FILLED IN ROTATION, BEGINNING APRIL 1.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business remains very much the same as last week. Stock of all kinds is being fairly well cleared out, but the price is nothing to brag of. Altogether the total business doing foots up pretty well, but there is no life to the demand. The buyers do not appear to care whether they get what they ask for or not, and for that reason there is no hustling to fill orders. This has more to do with the low prices than anything else.

Roses of all kinds are of poor quality, especially American Beauties, the majority of which come bull-headed and buds that will not open. Short ones, especially, are hard to move. Liberty and Meteor are the only roses that are in short supply.

The greater portion of the carnations are of very good quality, and the better the quality the better they sell; it's only the cheaper kinds that are hard to move. Bulbous stock has not been doing any too well, especially narcissi and valley, which are rather slow sale. Romans are doing somewhat better. Callas and Harrisii are selling nicely. Violets are not doing so very well. Many of them do not find buyers at any price. Long-stemmed single ones do best.

Notes.

J. M. Gasser, of Cleveland, was a caller during the past week. He is on his way to San Antonio, Texas, where he will spend a month or so. En route he is stopping at various cities to see his friends.

The stork has been working overtime in this vicinity lately and the result is the arrival of two lively little chaps, one at the home of Geo. Meyers and the other at that of Jos. R. Goldman, Middletown, Ohio.

One of the errand boys of Fred Gear fell three stories down an elevator shaft, but as luck would have it, he was only bruised a trifle. Those over-the-Rhine boys are pretty tough customers.

Herbert Heller, of New Castle, Ind., was in the city Sunday.

We believe in shifting young roses often. All stock offered in 2 1/2-in. pots have been shifted from 2-in. and are equal to most stock advertised as 3-in., and when we send it out is well established. We solicit your order and guarantee satisfaction. Write for special prices on large lots. Ivory is a money maker. Be sure and include a few in your order. Send 50c or $1.00 for samples of anything you may want, then you see exactly the stock you are ordering.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held in Redmen's Hall, January 22. The officers were installed and Prof. C. H. Walling officiated. The officers are as follows: President, Wm. Turner; vice-president, George H. Hale; recording secretary, H. A. Kettel; financial secretary, George Kuhn; treasurer, W. W. Kennedy. The treasurer's report showed a good balance on hand from this year, in addition to the stocks the society holds, for this is one of the most prosperous societies in the state of New Jersey.

Some beautiful roses were shown. Geo. H. Hale had Morgans, which scored eighty points. H. A. Kettel had the finest Brides, Maids, Carnots and Golden Gates ever shown to this society and scored ninety-seven and a half points. He also had some fine sprays of clerodendrons and two varieties of tulips. James Dowlen had a crimson carnation seedling, a splendid bloom with a strong two-foot stem, which scored eighty points. He also had a good scarlet, but not enough blooms to be judged.

The judges of the evening were Geo. H. Hale, James Dowlen and A. Williams. Mr. Hale read a list of chrysanthemums, 117 varieties, which he grew ten years ago in Brookline, Mass., but there is not one of these varieties grown at present. The discussions of the evening were "Strawberry Forcing" and "Remedies for San Jose Scale." After the business meeting a lunch was served and the boys had a high old time. B.

MERAMEC HIGHLANDS, MO.—N. Himmers has 200 sash 3x6 feet in violets in fine shape for a big crop in February and March. He grows Campbell, Louise, Princess of Wales and California. He expects to build two greenhouses in the spring, one for green goods and one for carnations.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

We have been having weather that the old-timers tell us has been the coldest for thirty years. The snow has been kind to the florists, having frozen so hard on the greenhouses that it made a good protection. A. B. Hathaway is the only one here who lost by the snow to any extent. He was going to put some extra stays in his new house, but forgot it, and the center caved in. Moral: Don't put off until tomorrow what you can do today.

Business is very quiet. There are plenty of flowers around that are loafing.

The regular meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held January 12 and the following officers were elected: President, Wm. Keith; vice-president, Peter Murray; clerk, J. C. Forbes; assistant clerk, Geo. W. Woods; treasurer, Wm. F. Turner; executive committee, Dennis Sea, Peter Murray, James Gartley, August H. Jahn and A. J. Fish. After the meeting a supper was served at Wickham's Cafe, thirty-one plates being laid. President Keith acted as toastmaster and Thomas Gray, of Boston, was the guest of the evening.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held at R. S. Noxie's, Mattapoisett, and we all had a very pleasant evening. W. L. G. Brown gave a very interesting talk on boilers and heating. Mrs. Noxie provided the members with a very nice supper. The next meeting of the club will be held with the downtown florist.

W. G. Kræber, of Danbury, Conn., has returned to New Bedford with his family.

C.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—John Logan was recently assaulted as he was feeding his boilers at midnight by a colored man to whom he had refused to rent a house.

DECATUR, ILL.—The Decatur Horticultural Co., recently incorporated, has capital stock of $2,500 held as follows: Oscar Mueller, $1,285; G. W. Neyhard, $625; Jos. Charonne, $600.

Skinner's Patent System of IRRIGATION.

NOW INTRODUCED FOR THE FIRST TIME.

Entirely new and incomparably superior to hose or circular spray systems of watering. Is equally adapted to a flower bed or a 1000-acre field. The only system that never has to be taken down and is always ready for use. It is an improvement on the natural rainfall in that it is never applied too fast. The easiest and cheapest to put up and the easiest and cheapest to operate. Has been in use in the inventor's garden for the past 6 years and so has been thoroughly tested. Is endorsed by all who have tried it.

We shall be pleased to send our illustrated circular to all interested and will quote special prices to introduce. Address for further information.....

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Just after New Year's trade took a considerable drop and continued very dull for two weeks. Since then, though the change has been slow, business has now regained its former footing and remains steady. The supply of roses is at about the lowest ebb, the old crops being entirely off and the new cut just beginning. The prospects are good for a very fine cut in the near future. Beauties are producing some very high grade blooms but the supply is far short of what it was at holiday time. Carnations are in full crop. The demand is fair but prices, as a rule, are not so satisfactory. The lily crops for Easter are showing up in excellent form, little or no trace of disease having as yet appeared. The quantities grown will be largely in excess of last season. Bulbous stock of excellent quality has been on the market for some time and commands a ready sale at good prices.

The Van Bochoves have been cutting some very fine Harrisii since before the holidays, their cut being sold out every day.

The weather has been cold and cloudy and on Sunday we had a blizzard with the temperature 8 degrees below zero.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., register New Daybreak, color the true Daybreak shade, which is not affected by the heat of summer. The result of a cross between seedlings of Scott extraction on one side and of Daybreak extraction on the other. The vigorous characteristics of these two varieties are fully conserved in the New Daybreak; the color at no time of the year has a washed-out appearance. Blooms three inches and over in diameter, stems eighteen to thirty inches during the season and always strong enough to hold the flower erect. A very free bloomer and possessing the elements of a most profitable commercial variety. Does not burst and is a splendid keeper and shipper.

Novelties In Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bradt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Adiantum Croweanum.

The new introduction in the Maidenhair Fern family.

Will be ready to distribute among the trade about July 1st, 1904. 3-inch pots, also large stock plants. Write for prices and place your order in time.

BEGINNINGS

IN DESIGN...

THE FLAT BUNCH.

The Source of Correct Ideas.

Making a flat bunch may be termed the free hand drawing of our art. There is no excuse for its not being well done. Often in filling design frames the artistic value of a flower must be sacrificed for a mechanical reason. Certain space must be filled or covered, whether the best effect is secured or not. While the utmost care should be exercised to prevent such a necessity, there are times when it cannot be avoided. But in the arrangement of flat clusters there is no need of that kind of scheming. We are free to execute our best ideas and the first necessity is to find an idea, or rather, the source of ideas. Start right. But how start right? Form correct habits of observation. This is no easy task, yet there are many more difficult ones.

For absolute standards of correctness in design natural objects are the only models whose style no one can attack. Therefore, to start right, cut out all remembrance not only of pyramidal, stiff necked, clubby "bouquets," but even those much more creditable and modern, and clear the mind for a new impression. The natural object selected for this pattern is one ready at hand, a single long-stemmed rose, one of the number out of which the cluster is to be made. First grasp its character by analyzing its form and studying its curves. Get the general trend of the stem; see where the foliage is placed and how it hangs; the taper of the stem; how the flower hangs; the shape of the bud, whether it is long and pointed, or round. Shut your eyes and see its image in your mind's eye. Take another look and compare the mind's image with the real rose.

Elaborate the Flower Model.

Soon there will flash across your mind the picture of a cluster which takes the same general appearance as our model flower. You can see the easy sweep of the spray and the curve and bend like that of the pattern. The lines will be thicker, but not any thicker in proportion; the spray will point out like the bud; a little branch will show where a leaf was conspicuous on the pattern; the stem end of the cluster will be heavier than the tip, and the bunch as a whole will be a second edition of our model rose.

If this principle is followed out, there will be no need of copying other people's work. You will have an unfailing source of ideas, for no two flowers are alike, much less the design of a branch or a flower stalk. Your work will be varied in proportion to your powers of observation and adaptation.

The Form and Tie.

The ribbon tie conforms to the character of the bunch by following the lines of the cluster. Observe that it is not square with the stem ends. That would be awkward here. A rose is drawn back from the main part of the bunch through the upper bow and falls over one of the ribbon ends. The bunch is tied with wire before the ribbon is put on.

Observe that in this bunch the flowers are at irregular distances from each other. It has no built-up appearance. The flowers composing it have a relation to each other, which is taken from the grouping of buds as they often appear in clusters on the stem. There is a connection, not only between the individuals of these little groups, but between the groups themselves.

Don't be afraid of using space. There is plenty of it. Let in a little light here and there through the bunch. It will help wonderfully. About one-third of the foliage is removed toward the lower ends of the stems, to prevent the

As to Colors.

Now, as to coloring in the rose bunch, this cluster was for an elderly man's funeral. The roses were Ivory, and the ribbon light violet satin. The general tendency now is to use flowers of one color in one bunch, but there is no reason why a touch of a contrasting color, or a shade or tint of the same is not perfectly in keeping with the most fastidious taste. By the term tint is meant a lighter tone, and by the term shade is meant a darker tone of the color in question. In selecting colors for use together in one bunch, many people will expect to see you use half of one color and half of another. But instead of checker-board combinations like that, let one color be in excess and introduce just enough of another color to relieve or touch the predominant color. That cannot take from the simplicity of the cluster, which should be the rule, both as to arrangement and coloring.

The Carnation Cluster.

In the carnation cluster the same plan is used, both in obtaining the design and in following its pattern in the cluster. There is selected as a pattern a carnation flower with a spray of foliage on the same stem, and the carnation bunch is a product of similar style. There is no attempt made with the carnations to have a long, slender cluster.

Design for Cluster of Ivory Roses, After a Rose of that Variety.

"humped" look under the tie on the stem end.

As a rule, one kind of flowers is best for beginners. Roses and carnations are not happy partners for the same cluster. If compelled to use them together, make separate clusters, and throw the smaller one over the stem end of the other, in place of a ribbon tie.

It is quaint and bunchy, more in keeping with the appearance and character of the carnation as a flower. A thick mat of asparagus should be set under the bunch to raise it off the flat surface. Carnations do not lie flat gracefully, as most roses do.

Where it is possible always use the natural foliage with its own flowers. Don't throw away the long-stemmed buds which remain when carnations are used for design work. Use many of them among and under the flowers. If the natural foliage cannot be had, get foliage which most nearly resembles it in color and form. Centaurea gymnocarpa, any of the pteris ferns, asparagus and fancy grasses are good substitutes for carnation foliage.

Narrower ribbons with plenty of loops suggest themselves as ties. But don't tie all the bunches with ribbon. Use as many bunches without. A spray of green often makes a dainty tie. Sometimes at a funeral the amount and variety of ribbon is entirely too dazzling for the everlasting fitness of things. There is usually enough variety in the different kinds of flowers used nowadays, without aggravating the condition.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

PIMELEAS.

These beautiful greenhouse shrubs are nearly all natives of Australia and New Zealand, and consequently require cool greenhouse treatment. They are easily grown, are profuse bloomers, the tip of each shoot producing a flower head, and when they are properly handled and of sufficient age the number of these shoots is large, so that a three or four-year-old plant will average from fifty to 100 blooms.

Being compact in habit of growth they require little training, the only pruning required being to cut back the blooming stems to about one-half of their last growth. They succeed well in a compost of one-half fibry peat soil and one-half good fibry loam, to which must be added about one-sixth of sand, broken pot-sherds and charcoal in equal proportions. Unlike most other hard-wooded plants, they delight in plenty of water, so they must be provided with perfect drainage and as red spider is particularly fond of them they require frequent syringing.

As soon as the flowering season is over the shoots should be cut back and the plants removed to a cool house or, if the season will permit, to an outside frame, where they should be kept cool by shading and moist by covering the pots with moss until the eyes break, when the shading should be discontinued. During this stage they should be frequently syringed to encourage the eyes to break. When there is a good start made with the new breaks they should be repotted and shaded for a few days.

Although they blight in a cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees during winter, they are very susceptible to frost, the first touch causing them to shed their foliage, so they must be housed before there is the least danger.

Propagation is usually effected by cuttings in sand at a temperature of 48 degrees, kept moist and shaded until the hairlike roots appear, when they should be potted and placed in a cool, moist atmosphere until the ball is well filled with roots, when they can be fully exposed to light and sun. They can also be propagated by seed but the process is too slow to be either profitable or interesting.

Well-grown specimens, by their attractive shape and color of bloom, usually command a ready sale, as they make a good window plant and coming into bloom just as most other hard-wooded plants are going out, they are doubly valuable. They remain in bloom from three weeks to a month. Their colors vary from deep red through all the shades of pink to a pure white.

Some of the varieties best suited for commercial work will be found in the following list: P. arenaria, white; decussata (ferruginea), rose; glaucæ, white; Gnidia, red; ligustrina hypericina, white; rosea, rose and pink; specabilis, white tinged with pink.

These plants can be flowered in very small pots while in a young stage but this ruins them for afterwork. The cut flowers have good keeping qualities and are very effective in design work or sprays.

Notes on Varieties.

Before receiving the last number of the REVIEW I had decided to give my impression of some of last spring's novelties, of which we bought more or less quantity for trial, and as only a few of these are mentioned I will go ahead. We make a practice every year of buying at least a few of nearly all the varieties that are introduced and are likely to be of value to us. Some few that we did not buy I have seen growing on other places, and was able to get an idea of what they looked like on the bench.

Two varieties have stood out above all the rest with us, but most of the others have some very good points about them and some of them will no doubt be grown in quantity for a few years. Enchantress has produced a good crop of large blooms on fine stems. The color is fine when the bloom first opens, but it wants to be cut when three-quarters open, else the edge will fade. The center does not open quick enough. It keeps well with us.

Harlowarden is a grand crimson and so far ahead of Roosevelt that we do not want the latter any more. It is very early and free in spite of the long stems it makes. The color is a trifle dark. It never splits and will stand lots of feeding.

Gov. Lowndes made a poor growth in the field, but after housing it at once shot up long, strong stems and made good blooms. This may make a good commercial sort.

Lillian Pond has disappointed us somewhat. We were led to expect a big crop of large blooms extra early from it; three and one-half inch blooms in September, we were told, but we failed to see them. It is a strong, sturdy grower and produces large blooms, rather late with us. Splits some in midwinter. One large grower told me not long since that it will be one of his main whites next season.

Her Majesty we consider a very fine thing. It comes in early and blooms steadily. The blooms are of good size and it never splits. We are making all we can of this. Will stand heavy feeding.

Mrs. Theo. Roosevelt has a beautiful color, neither red nor pink. The early blooms came rather single and flimsy, but it rounds up in good time. Perhaps it wants more feeding than we gave it.

Innocence would be a grand carnation if it did not inherit a bad fault from one of its parents, Flora Hill. With us it has a little bacteria this year, but we hope to keep it clean next season. A nice round bloom, pure white and a fine stem. Makes a fine plant in the field and is very free.

Murphy's White has not done well for us, but some say that for quantity of medium grade blooms it is hard to beat.

Sybil stem-rotted badly with us, but what was left made good plants and fine long stems. The bloom is average size and the color is a fine soft shade of cerise. Should be a good commercial sort.

Fragrance is a free flowering variety of a blush color. The blooms are fair sized. The stem and calyx are good.

Pres. McKinley has not made good with us, but I am inclined to lay the blame on ourselves. On the originator's place it is doing fine and also on another place not far away. Both of these growers have a very rich soil and their carnations make a very strong, heavy growth. I think a lack of food is the cause of this variety's poor showing on so many places. Give it a heavy diet next year and see if it does not improve.

Success has not shown us anything very good yet. The growth is very thin and wiry and we did not expect a large bloom. The bloom is quite small, but the color is very pleasing. Too small for us.

Adonis has surprised us twice this season. The first time by refusing to take hold of the soil after we planted fine strong plants. The plants seemed to dwindle away until they looked fit for only a hospital. The second surprise was when those sick looking plants shot up some fine stems and produced blooms that would make a seedling raiser's heart leap for joy. We are going to learn to grow this variety if we possibly can. It will never become an every-day scarlet, like Crane, but it always brings a fancy price and will most likely be a paying variety. Will try indoor culture on a few of it.

We did not buy any of The Queen, but have seen a couple of batches that looked very fine indeed. Large blooms on good, long stems and very free.

Fair Maid is also liked real well by those who bought it, I understand. It is very early and free, though not so large nor of as good form as Enchantress. Recommended as a fine summer bloomer.

And few plants of the new Richmond Gem have demonstrated that this is going to be a factor in the race between the scarlets for commercial favor. The color could not be improved. The stem and calyx are perfect and in productiveness it has no equal among the scarlets. The size of the bloom is equal to Crane, or perhaps a trifle larger. An easy doer; keep your eye on it.

Most of the above varieties will be tried again next season. Of some we shall plant only a hundred or two, while of a few we will plant all that we can make from what stock we have. Some of those that look only medium this year may surpass the more promising ones next year, when we will know their wants a little better. We think that every variety that shows the least bit of promise should have at least two years' trial before it is discarded. You don't need to go into them heavy. You will often save for yourself a fine variety that did not get the treatment it wanted at the first trial and could not show its good points. Many a grower will discard Adonis this year, but I will venture the prediction that many of them will try it again in a year or two.

A. F. J. BAUR.

NOTES ON VARIETIES.

I was much interested in the opinions of the different large growers on the varieties of carnations in last week's REVIEW. Now, those opinions are all right and a guide to other large growers who have but one, two or three varieties to a house, those varieties doing well under the same treatment. But I would like to see the opinions of some of the smaller fellows, who grow, say, from 1,000 to 5,000 plants, the blooms of which they retail over their own counter. They usually have to grow several varieties in one house. In that way we could find out which varieties were best to grow for one's own counter trade. Of course we all know that Lawson is at the head of the list, and if the different sports that are springing up all over the country prove as good, as profitable and as easy to grow as the original, I am not sure but what most of us will be growing Lawson and Lawson sports and give all other kinds the go-by.

BEST WHITE CARNATIONS.

I note I. V. K. asks for the best white carnation in your issue of January 21, and in Mr. Baur's reply he has given a list of good varieties. With us some have done exceptionally well, but there are a couple of others that in our district are very largely and successfully grown; in fact, one variety is considered the most prolific and best type of commercial white in the list to-day. That is the Glacier. This might be more successfully grown than the ones enumerated. Peru has also done well here. These are not show flowers, but for good average commercial whites they are more profitable and easily grown. Glacier will not give a long stem early in season, but by November it is all right, while Peru gives a good stem early and is a continuous and prolific bloomer. I would say that either Glacier or Peru are more prolific and better average flowers than Mrs. Joost or Lillian Pond. The latter has been a very constant bloomer and of superior size and substance. Flowers of pure color, well built, and bringing a higher price than any other white.

A Bunch of Carnations After the Natural Form.

JOHN H. DUNLOP.

SUMMER CARNATIONS.

Please tell us the best carnations for bedding outdoors in summer. L. L. B.

Some of the very latest introductions may be fine for this purpose, but we can't speak from experience and, again, some varieties that have lost their usefulness for winter flowering are still very satisfactory for summer blooming. An instance of this was old Portia that gave us fine blooms in the field in August and September for several years after it was "N. G." for inside. Not everyone knows what a grand variety Estelle is for flowering in the field, but last August I had the pleasure to give John Dunlop the first prize for a vase of Estelle picked from plants in the field, and if we could all grow them like that there would not be need for looking any further.

I would plant for summer blooming any of the following in their color: Crane or Estelle, scarlet; Crocker, Scott or Joost, pink; Boston Market, Evelina or Her Majesty, white; Harry Fenn, crimson; Mrs. Higinbotham or Morning Glory, light pink. Of all of the above, unsatisfactory as Ethel Crocker is during the winter, it is a wonder for the fall months outdoors. W. S.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Young stock which requires repotting should be attended to without delay, as any approach to being pot-bound will be certain to cause a check to their growth. As the larger and better grown stock always makes the best plants for benching, start earlier, grow better and give the most satisfactory results as bloomers, they should have the very best of care while in this stage. To produce hardy, stocky plants with short-jointed, solid wood, a half inch shift is preferable to a larger one. This, while entailing more labor, saves a good deal of room, which, during the next two months, will be especially valuable.

When new pots are used particular care should be taken with the first watering, as they absorb so much of the water that it is more difficult to get the soil equally moistened, so it is better to water lightly and frequently till this is accomplished. Pots which have been previously used should be washed thoroughly, outside and in, and allowed to become dry before using.

When plants are shifted from a 2-inch to a 2½-inch they require no drainage, as the bulk of the soil added is so small that there is no danger of souring, if the soil is properly packed and the material upon which they are to be set is fresh and free from mud.

As there is so little room around the ball when a half-inch shift is practiced, the soil should be made fine by passing it through a quarter-inch screen, and if the soil is in a hearty condition it can be passed through readily without caking. The ball should be disturbed as little as possible, simply rubbing off the sharp edges around the upper part and placing it in the pot so that the surface of the ball will bear the same relation to the new pot as it did to the old.

After repotting the stock should be returned to the house without delay and not be allowed to stand around in the potting shed, where there is always more or less draught, which is very injurious.

Before commencing this repotting the planting plans should be so far completed that a definite knowledge of the number of plants required should be had, so that any weak plants may be discarded. Twenty or twenty-five per cent. margin is amply sufficient to give a good pick, unless there is a wish to have a large surplus for sale, which is very rarely profitable. It is better to give the space, care and attention to that which has to earn the money next season than to have them crowded and half cared for in order to gain a few dollars by surplus stock.

Precaution should be taken against mildew by using the sulphur blower once a week and keeping the pipes painted with the sulphur mixture and paying particular attention to ventilation, it being so easy to induce an attack of this pest, especially when the plants are in such a soft growing condition, and so hard to get rid of for the same reason.

By giving the young plants plenty of room it is easier to keep spider in check and is beneficial to the stock by admitting more light and a freer circulation of air among the foliage. RIBES.

WEAK STEMS.

My roses were planted in June, half of them on raised benches, the others in solid beds. So far those on the benches have out-bloomed the others by about one-fourth, but now those on solid beds seem to be catching up pretty well. The trouble is, all have weak stems, those on solid beds being weaker than those on the benches. I twice gave them a mulch four parts cow manure and one part soil, with one quart bone meal to the barrow load of mulch. Having bright weather in December we fed twice with liquid manure. The plants look healthy and the blooms are of good size. We watch the temperature closely and ventilate when needed. We gave the benches some lime between the mulches, but without results. The soil is three-fourths sod and one-fourth cow manure. What is the cause of the weak stems? A. B.

So far as the evidence furnished goes there seems to be nothing wrong with the general treatment of this stock. A. B., however, fails to mention the night and day temperatures at which he runs his roses, a most essential piece of information where weak stems constitute the principal trouble.

The roses on raised or table benches, no doubt, will do better during winter than those on solid beds, as the roots and drainage are more under control. For summer blooming those on solid beds generally give best satisfaction.

There may be some very essential element absent or deficient in his soil, and as wood ashes contain every element necessary and in the right proportions to insure rapid growth and perfect maturity, a sprinkling of these might be of benefit. But as these elements are in a very concentrated form, ashes must be used with caution. One peck is sufficient for every 500 square feet for a first application, one such application every two weeks, closely watching the results and increasing or diminishing the quantity as results warrant.

If these are, as I assume, tea roses, the night temperature should be 56 degrees, with a day temperature ranging from 60 to 75 degrees, according to sunshine, ventilating freely on all favorable occasions and whenever possible keeping a small crack of air on at night to keep the air in circulation. RIBES.

BEDDING ROSES.

Please give a short list of such roses as are sold in the spring as potted plants or are suitable for bedding. W. F.

Leaving out that great class, the hybrid perpetuals, which are seldom sold in pots, and to give the best results should be established in the ground, the roses known as bedding would include the teas, hybrid teas and Bourbon and are often all classed as monthly roses. Here are a dozen that, with good fresh soil and cultivation in the way of watering and hoeing and mulching, will be most satisfactory. Only a few of our monthly roses are hardy in our northern states.

White Maman Cochet, Pink Maman Cochet, Admiral Schley, crimson; The Burbank, shell pink; Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, white; Souvenir du President Carnot, delicate flesh pink; La France, rose pink; Perle des Jardins, yellow; Clothilde Soupert, blush white; Rose D'Evian, red; Safrano, deep copper yellow; Bon Silene, sulphur yellow; Isabella Sprunt, deep pink.

The last three are very old and well-known pure tea roses that give a great abundance of blooms in the fall months, which most of the newer, fine tea roses will not do in the open ground. W. S.

CHRISTMAS MUMS.

We have read in the REVIEW of mums being had for Christmas. How is this done and what varieties are used for this purpose? M. B. C.

It is not a very difficult matter to hold back mums for Christmas if the right varieties are used. Whether it pays is another question. Personally I don't think it does and the demand seems very limited after Thanksgiving. M. B. C. must figure out the question of profit and loss for himself.

For late work plants may be set out as late as August, but they should be grown in a separate house from the early and midseason kinds, as they require somewhat different treatment. The plants should be encouraged to continue growing just as long as possible. When crown buds form rub them off and let the plants continue growing until the last or terminal bud appears. This will not be until many of the earlier varieties are in flower, which explains why a separate house is better for late flowers. Treatment does not differ to any very material extent after the bud is taken, only that the house is kept as cool as possible, short of admitting actual frost. Kept cold in this manner not much water is needed, and buds develop slowly and, of course, once the flower is developed, it is only a matter of holding it as long as possible without spoiling.

As to varieties to use, the old Lincoln was a good late one. Bonnaillon, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Christmas Eve, Chadwick and Rieman I have held back with more or less success. Nathan Smith & Son have sent out several kinds of late years that they recommended for late flowers. Not having any use for flowers after November 20, I never tried them, but I have no doubt this firm could assist M. B. C. in a good selection of up-to-date varieties suitable for his purpose. BRIAN BORU.

A WINTERICH DESIGN.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken at the establishment of Christ. Winterich, Defiance, O., upon the occasion of a patriotic parade. The photograph shows a part of the residence, the tank and pumphouse, packing shed and an end of a modern greenhouse. In the foreground is the floral float constructed by Mr. Winterich. The wagon platform is 8x16 feet. The American eagle was made of chicken wire netting covered with crepe paper and measured five feet from tip to tip of wings. The globe was covered with white cape flowers and stood in a base covered with Wm. Languth geraniums which were in turn surrounded by S. A. Nutt geraniums in full bloom. The platform carried palms and ferns. Around the edge of the platform hung Asparagus Sprengeri and the name was made of the same material. The idea was that the eagle represented the nation as above the world, or the other nations. The figures on the float were hailing Uncle Sam as the leader of the nations.

CYCAS AND BOSTON FERNS.

Would you please let me know through your valuable paper how to take care of the sago palm from starting the stem, also the best treatment for Boston ferns? M. S.

The dormant stems of Cycas revoluta are usually received from Japan in the spring, and should be potted up as soon as possible after their arrival. The stems should be put in as small pots as they may be conveniently potted into; for example, a stem that weighs three or four pounds will usually go into a 6-inch pot without much trouble, though sometimes a 7-inch pot may be required for one of that size.

Pot firmly and then give a good watering, placing the stems in a warm and shaded greenhouse, a night temperature of 70 degrees being enough to start the stems into growth gradually, the object being to get some root growth at the same time as the leaves come up. A syringing over the stems once or twice a day will help to swell them up and start the leaves, but until the growth shows they will not require daily waterings.

The young leaves of a cycas are very tender while they are unfolding, and they must therefore be handled very carefully at that stage. A good rose or carnation soil will grow cycas all right, but avoid fresh manure when first potting them up, a sprinkling of bone dust in the soil being better at that time.

A stiff soil with a moderate quantity of well decayed stable manure is the best for the Boston fern, the use of a light soil with peat or leaf mold in it resulting in long and thin foliage and a plant of less substance. Grow them in full sunshine at this season and only give moderate shade in the summer. Give the plants space enough to get plenty of light and air, and see that they do not get dry, shifting them on into larger pots before they get starved and runty. Set the plants over from time to time and cut off the runners that are outside the pots, this helping to keep the strength of the crown and to develop a sturdy and compact plant.

If you wish to get up a stock of the Boston fern, plant out a few plants on a bench in a house kept at about 65 degrees at night and the runners will soon take possession of the bench after the fashion of an old strawberry bed, but if the most satisfactory kind of plants for the retail trade are desired, it is much the better plan to grow them in pots during the whole season, rather than to adopt the plan of growing them in a bench and lifting and potting the ferns in the fall.

W. H. TAPLIN.

THE MAKING OF WINDOW GLASS.

Being asked to tell the Chicago Florists' Club something about window glass, M. G. Holding, of the Sprague, Smith Co., described its manufacture in the following words, read at the meeting January 28:

The materials of which window glass is made are chiefly white sand, lime and alkali, all melted together by intense heat, about 2,600 degrees Fahrenheit, applied for about fifteen hours.

Formerly, and for many years, all glass was made in crucibles or pots made of fire clay, very thick and heavy, to stand the heat and hold the weight of the batch. In later years a large proportion of window glass has been made in what is known as the continuous melting tank.

The first successful tank was built in Belgium, in 1884, and created a great disturbance with labor and in 1886 a mob destroyed the factories. Ever since the rebuilding, the tanks have been in successful operation.

The adoption of the tank came in this country much later and they have now largely displaced the old pot factories. Still a large quantity of glass is made in pots, the capital required for a tank factory being large compared with that for a pot factory.

It would be impossible to give you in words any adequate description of the process of making window glass. It must be seen to be appreciated. In general the gatherer dips the end of the blow pipe, which is a heavy iron tube, into the melted glass and brings out a ball of the material, which is then taken by the blower and gradually blown into a large cylinder. The cylinder is cracked open with a hot iron and it then goes to the flattening oven, where it is flattened and annealed, and is then ready for the cutter.

It is interesting to watch the blower make from a ball of glass a cylinder from twelve to eighteen inches in diameter and from six to seven feet long, of even and uniform thickness. In fact, the whole process of making window glass, from the melting of the batch to the cutting table, requires skill of a high order and can only be learned by long practice and experience. It is no easy work to handle on the end of a heavy blow pipe, four feet long, a heavy cylinder of glass six or seven feet long.

The skilled labor around a glass furnace is very well paid, the average wage being high, and some of it very high. It is not unusual for a blower of large double strength glass to make $400 per month. Of course the average is much below this.

The workers have had for many years the strongest kind of a union and have kept wages high, taking advantage of the very high tariff on window glass. The worker in Belgium receives much less for his labor, and glass costs much less there than here, as labor is about sixty-five per cent of the cost of the glass. In Belgium the cost today of a box of 16x18 double is about $1.45, and here about $3.25. The duty on a box of foreign glass, 16x18, would be $1.50, certainly a large protection to American labor, and the American workman takes all the advantage of it.

It would appear, however, that the day of great wages in this line of business is drawing to a close. A machine, as you know, has been invented, and is being slowly perfected, to take the place of the man blower and gatherer. It is already turning out glass in considerable quantities at several tanks, and it seems to be only a matter of time when it will largely displace man power, and certainly decrease the cost of making glass, but as long as the present tariff rates are maintained, the manufacturer will take advantage of them and no cheap glass is in sight.

The machine makes glass in cylinders, by use of compressed air instead of the breath of man, and there is good reason to believe that it will ultimately be entirely successful.

WATER AND SUN.

Will it injure shrubbery or plants to syringe during middle of the day in hot weather?
H.

This question was pretty well thrashed out a few years ago, G. P. Rawson, of Elmira, N. Y., contending that it was wrong and injurious to plants to syringe or wet their foliage when the sun was shining on them and Edwin Lonsdale contending that it was not. I think the writer had something to say on the subject and agreed with Mr. Lonsdale. It is not pleasant or wise to set one's self up as an oracle on any subject, or be too emphatic in opinion, but I scarcely am afraid to be contradicted by any competent authority when I say that it will not injure, burn, nor is it harmful in any way, to syringe or wet the foliage of any plant when the sun is shining on it. It happens continually both in nature and in our gardening under glass.

It should not be necessary to recall the instances of this. We syringe roses in May and June as late as ten or eleven in the forenoon because we can't get round to it before. Who ever saw the leaves burn from it, or any other leaves? Do you think that a drop of water on a leaf of a palm, a begonia or a rose is going to be so heated by the rays of the sun that it will scald the leaf? Nonsense! Rather would the drop of water protect the leaf. I am not saying that all plants need syringing at any time and have mentioned the begonia, which, of all our cultivated ornamental plants, needs the least moisture on the foliage. Neither are the hours from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. the time you would syringe, for you try to follow nature and if you spray in the morning you have provided the humidity that nature's dews would give outside and your plants under glass will then endure and thrive during the hot hours of the day.

Yet often do we see, in May, June and July, a passing cloud that drops its refreshing tears on the maple, the apple, the rose, the lowly little plants we call weeds, the just and the unjust. The cloud passes, the sun shines brightly, the robin sings for joy and all the plants are refreshed and no blade of grass, or petal, or leaf is anything but more perfect and beautiful.

W. S.

ROSES AT PITTSBURG.

The following are the remarks of David Fraser, before the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club at its rose night meeting, January 5:

In Pittsburg roses must have a little special treatment after the dark days of December begin; having no sun for weeks the wood gets weak and the only remedy we find for this is not to force them much, giving a night temperature of about 55 degrees in cold weather. We then get fairly good stems, and the plants are less liable to mildew.

We propagate our stock from flowering wood about the end of January and plant about June 15. Our soil is rather heavy. We make up our compost heap the end of September, consisting of sods cut about three inches thick, putting four layers of sod to one of cow manure about two inches thick, on this a good sprinkling of lime and bone meal. This is what we grow our roses in and mostly everything else we grow.

When the old stock is taken out the benches are thoroughly cleaned. The soil is then put on the benches to a depth of five inches. We plant eighteen inches apart in the rows and when planted we go over the benches and pack the soil quite firmly. The soil in the benches will then be about four inches deep, which is quite ample. We leave a hole around each plant, to hold water, only watering around the necks of the plants for the first two weeks, after which the soil is given a good watering.

In the hot summer months there is little to do, only keeping them tied up and the hose going to keep red spider down. About September 20 we begin to cut. After the first big cut is over and new growth started we begin to feed. We mostly use liquid from cow manure, giving it every time we water with clean water. We don't believe in mulching. By having such a depth of soil they dry out very seldom. In places where they get more sunshine than in Pittsburg no doubt a mulching would be good, but we find that by watering often with manure water we get better results.

In regard to varieties, we grow Bride, Bridesmaid, Ivory, Golden Gate and Sunrise. The last named is a poor keeper when cut. The color, though, is very much liked by our people. Golden Gate and its white sport, Ivory, are our best roses. They give us good stems, and they are very free bloomers. We have given Alice Roosevelt a trial this year, but the buds do not open well.

MISTLETOE LOSING IN FAVOR.

For many years past there has been little demand among the upper classes of people for mistletoe at Yuletide, says the Gardening World in its Christmas issue, and at present the trade may be described as nil from that quarter. For some years past the mistletoe grown in this country, being in very small quantity, has been used locally. Covent Garden market has been depending upon Normandy and other parts of France for its supply in recent years. During the past summer we learned that mistletoe in the orchards of Normandy was being destroyed wholesale. The failing demand in the British market would no doubt account for this, the people in France finding that it is more profitable to grow apples rather than mistletoe upon their trees. The failing demand for mistletoe is no doubt due in a large measure to a change of custom among the people at Christmastide.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

There is little if any improvement in city trade but out of town demand is good, though rather spasmodic. The tone of the market is changed but little, weakness being the predominant feature.

Beauty crops are not increasing to any marked degree. There are enough long-stemmed to meet requirements, and on these buds are generally pretty good, but the shorter the stem the poorer the quality averages. Brides and Maids are showing an improvement in quality and an increase in cut, but the shipping trade takes up all receipts and there is frequently a shortage on the shipping grade while the small stock will not move; it is only good for funeral work.

There are a great many fancy carnations about and prices are low in comparison to quality. Fancy tulips are in all the wholesale houses and selling very slowly; $3 per 100 buys good La Reine, and white can be bought in quantity at $2. In fact, all bulb stock, except goods callas and Harrisii, are going much cheaper this year than ever before. Many of the local growers of Campbell violets are reported to have stopped picking altogether, so poor were the returns, but now and then a Tuesday sees a little sale for Campbell, for the eastern growers do not ship Sunday, and Tuesday sees no receipts from that source. The best eastern goods are now bringing 50 to 75 cents.

"Green goods" are abundant except bunches of asparagus. This green is now very popular with the storekeepers and sells out well, but it must be the tips of the shoots; the strings cannot be cut up and bunched.

Club Meetings.

The Chicago Florists' Club held its second outside meeting at 856 North California avenue last Thursday evening, with a large attendance, although Mr. Palinsky, who had the arrangements in charge, was evidently disappointed that the crowd was not greater than at the Rose Hill meeting. M. G. Holding, who is known to all the local greenhouse men, read a short paper on glass making, which was followed by a discussion in which a number participated. Mr. Holding said, in answer to a question, that he believes American glass is, in cutting and every other respect, fully as good as European glass. He also commented on the increased use of B grade for greenhouses and many other purposes and said that to him it was conclusive evidence of improvement in quality, the B glass now being equal to what was sold as A grade not so very many years ago. John Zeck brought up the matter of the color of window glass and it was stated that the objectionable green shade is caused by an unusual proportion of iron in the sand or by other influences not under good control. It was said that the better quality in the glass now made is in a large measure due to the discovery of veins of whiter sand. Following the discussion, which also touched upon putty and paint, a lunch was served to a merry crowd.

Last evening the club held its regular meeting at Handel hall, the latest improvements in greenhouse construction being up for discussion, the various builders having been invited to display models, drawings or photographs of their innovations. On Saturday evening, February 13, the third and probably the last of the outside meetings will be held at the Drexel cafe, corner of Cottage Grove avenue and Thirty-ninth street. An attractive program is being arranged and a large attendance is looked for.

On February 17 the club will hold a large exhibition of roses, carnations, violets and any other seasonable cut flowers at Handel hall. The exhibition will be open to the public in the afternoon and in the evening there will be a club meeting or supper. P. J. Hauswirth is manager of the exhibition, and requests that out-of-town exhibitors who cannot come in person send stock in care of Benthey Co., 35 Randolph street. It will be carefully staged.

Wm. A. Moak will speak at the Drexel cafe meeting, discussing club membership and its benefits to the business man.

Various Notes.

George M. Garland says that the number of inquiries received would indicate either that there are to be even more greenhouses built this year than usual or that a much larger proportion are to be put up with iron gutters.

Anton Then's father and mother celebrated their golden wedding last Sunday with appropriate ceremonies.

Martin Petersen has a well equipped store at 752 West Division street and is doing a nice trade, although he says the effects of the Iroquois disaster are still felt.

George Reinberg has placed an order with the Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. for 1,200 boxes of glass for his new range. It is all B grade, he being one of those who have found B glass nowadays better quality than the A glass was when he built his first houses. He expects to get the new range up for early planting to roses.

Mrs. George Asmus suffered a hard fall one afternoon last week and received injuries which will necessitate her keeping quiet for some time.

Reports from St. Louis chronicle the suicide there of W. R. Mannheimer, a young man who has worked in Chicago flower stores up to a short time ago.

Slow business with some of the local retailers is setting the wholesalers to thinking about collections.

A. L. Randall says he doubts if many violets will hold their quality till Easter and thinks that good violets should be pretty fair property before long.

John Zeck, formerly with J. A. Budlong, is now with E. C. Amling.

Peter Reinberg has been ill and in bed for the past few days.

George Baldwin, of Oak Park, is reported to have lost $600 through frost as the result of his boiler giving out.

Daniel Branch was called to Minneapolis last Saturday by the illness of his mother.

J. W. Lyon, of Belvidere, says that with him Norway has proved to be the best white carnation this winter.

Bassett & Washburn report that this cold weather seems just right for rose grafting. They are making about 1,000 grafts a day and practically all are successful. Their grafted Brides and Maids are just coming in crop with a splendid lot of flowers.

Those who have the Helios-Upton recording thermometers outside their greenhouses are getting some interesting records these mornings. From 10 to 20 degrees below zero is the regular thing with many a day which sees no mark above zero. January averaged 13 degrees colder than last year and in ten weeks there has been only one period when it thawed; then it rained for two days. Whether or not the ground-hog saw his shadow on Tuesday depends on the hour of his perambulations. All in the trade will welcome warmer weather.

Last Saturday there was a small fire in the basement of the Atlas block, burning through a partition and destroying a few bales of moss belonging to the E. F. Winterson Company.

E. A. Feters, Mrs. Feters and daughter, of Cleveland, were visitors this week, en route to California. Walter Bertermann, of Indianapolis, and J. W. Lyon, of Belvidere, were also in town.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market holds steady at about last week's quotations. The demand is away below last year's average and the supply of every variety of stock ample for all requirements. But with the possible exception of violets there is a tendency toward improvement. Good roses and carnations command fair values. Violets have "shot their bolt" for this season and it takes 100 selected flowers of the finest quality to touch the dollar mark. Thousands of the finest bunches last week were cleared at 50 cents per 100. Left-over stock went to the street merchants at one-half this figure and often less. The quantity of bulbous stock that comes to market increases daily. Prices are low. Even lily of the valley and orchids are dragging on the bottom.

The society balls and dinners are in full swing, and an abundance of them. The charity ball this week at the Waldorf-Astoria and the Arion next Friday at Madison Square Garden will be the events of the season. The decorations will exceed anything ever before attempted at these celebrations, and Small & Sons and Hanft Bros. will have opportunity to enhance their reputations for artistic and beautiful effects.

Club Doings.

Next Monday the carnation exhibition at the club's rooms in the Grand Opera House building gives promise of a great success. The exhibitors are numerous and include all parts of the country, from Boston to Chicago. The ladies will be entertained with refreshments. Mazetti, the caterer, has been engaged and the club will leave nothing undone to add to the enjoyment of their fair visitors. This is a happy departure under the new official leadership of the club, that gives promise of a year of surprises that will add to both interest and membership.

The business meeting will be called to order at 7:30 that evening.

The club's annual banquet will take place, as usual, at St. Denis Hotel, on Saturday evening, February 20. A fine musical program, with vaudeville dressing, will be served and, as to the dinner itself, those who have enjoyed these yearly festivities in the past need no assurance as to their excellence. Every member of the club should attend. Send check to Walter F. Sheridan, 39 West Twenty-eighth street, as soon as possible to facilitate the arrangements. Lawrence Haffner and Lyman D. Crow are the other members of the committee. Many prominent florists from other cities are expected. The banquet hall will seat 200 comfortably. The dinner will be served at 7:30.

The summer outing of the club has been set for Wednesday, June 29, at the same place as the last two years, Witzel's Point, and by boat as usual. The committee is already busy preparing for it. The athletic competitions will be the features of the day, next to the shore dinner, and many valuable prizes will be offered.

Various Notes.

The trade has suffered heavily from the prevailing winter affliction, la grippe, the changeable climate being hard to overcome. In one week we had zero, rain and a blizzard at intervals of forty-eight hours. One has to have an iron constitution to pull through. H. C. Riedel has had a week of it. Percy Richter, of Asmus', was seriously ill. Many are suffering from severe colds and ought to be secluded, by the looks of them. But this is the winter when few can afford the luxury of being sick abed.

The Easter flower show and sale, which is to be held in the exhibition hall at the top of the Macy building, promises to be quite a success, the manager, Mr. Chasseaud, already having let a large quantity of space to prominent growers around New York and to some large plantsmen within fifty miles of the city. Every facility for display and delivery is to be given the exhibitors and an enormous attendance is provided for. The admission during the day is free. Music and a small charge will make the evening popular.

William H. Keubler has opened a wholesale store at 19 Boerum place, Brooklyn, formerly A. H. Langjahr's headquarters.

The announcement of Wm. J. Elliott's departure for Bermuda on Wednesday of last week was premature. He will not leave for a week or ten days, and will be back before March 8, on which date the strenuous auction season will open.

It is announced that another auction house will make a bid for public recognition, at 62 Vesey street, this spring, and that some familiar faces will be seen there.

Hugh Nelson, of J. J. Perkins' force, has gone to Kells, Meade county, Ireland, on account of the death of his father and to complete the settlement of an estate that will place him on easy street.

Wm. Ford, of Ford Brothers, the new secretary of the Florists' Bowling Club, proves to be an expert with the balls, and will prove a valuable addition to the active staff at the St. Louis competition.

Jas. McManus is handling large quantitles of white orchids and has some fine shipments daily of Bon Silene and Liberty roses, the latter commanding from 40 cents to 50 cents.

The venerable Jas. Mallon, of Brooklyn, recounts reminiscences of the florists' business away back in 1848, which are more than interesting. That was the year he began. There were only three florists in New York in those days. Andrew Reid, at Broadway and Eleventh street; Bridgeman, at Broadway and Eighteenth street, and Buchanan, at Second avenue and Fourteenth street. Where once blocks of greenhouses occupied the ground, million-dollar establishments now exist. Mr. Mallon was with H. A. Gref, on Smith street, Brooklyn, where a whole block was devoted to the business until 1857, when he began operations for himself at the corner of Willoughby and Fulton streets, where the firm now is, only under the name of Jas. Mallon & Sons. Mr. Mallon is just reaching his three score years and ten and bids fair to round out his century. He has occupied the store on Smith street since 1873, over thirty years. One of his interesting memories is the purchase of 1,800 camellias for $1,800 and the disposal of them at $5 apiece. This was in 1870, when the camellia was the fashionable flower. Bustenbruder was the grower, and his greenhouses occupied the block at Fulton street and Portland avenue.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society's fifth annual dinner last Thursday evening was a great success, about sixty being present and an excellent menu and program provided. The late trains are always too early for the city visitors.

A box from L. E. Marquisee, of Syracuse, reached our New York office on Saturday, containing some beautiful specimens of Flamingo and Albatross carnations in perfect condition and with stems thirty to thirty-six inches long. Mr. Marquisee will display his specialties at the New York Florists' Club exhibition next Monday.

Traendly & Schenck expect to receive next week large quantities of Brunners, the second crop then being due. Their Golden Gates are superb and readily command 15 cents.

The Kurzman-Dacre Co. has gone out of business after a brief career. Mr. Dacre has been very ill for ten days, and his condition was reported critical on Monday.

Samuel R. Wiley has opened a retail store at 952 Madison avenue.

Bowling.

Next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock the New York Florists' Bowling Club will meet at the rooms on Tenth avenue and Twenty-third street and bowl until time for the carnation exhibition in the evening. This plan of bowling in the afternoon on club meeting dates will prevail during the season. A week from Monday evening will be prize night with the club and every one bowling will bring a package containing a prize in value from 50 cents upwards. The Flatbush Club, and in fact any members of florists' bowling clubs in the vicinity of New York, are cordially invited to be present. The contest will commence promptly at 8 o'clock, and the highest score will have first choice of the packages containing the mysterious prizes. The almost zero weather that prevailed

Monday evening, and the prevailing epidemic of bronchial colds, accounts for a lighter attendance than usual. J. K. Allen was present, but did not bowl. The scores follow:

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Nobody wants yesterday's paper, so I forbear giving last week's news, which proved so interesting to Chicago's postal clerks that they enjoyed it till too late for it to reach anyone else.

The market conditions are rather mixed this week. The supply is light, owing to the fierce winter weather, the demand uncertain, despite numerous entertainments, and transient trade poor. Whenever special demand arises for any special flower, prices stiffen at once. This has been especially noticeable in the case of Beauties on several occasions lately. The supply of long and medium-stemmed flowers is limited, and a good party order taxes the resources of the market. Choice tea roses are also scarce, several growers complaining that with them the percentage of medium grade flowers has increased at the expense of the fancy grade. Liberties are very fine and, while not plentiful, there are enough to meet the demand at current prices, which rival those of American Beauties. The quantity of fancy carnations coming into the city is surprisingly heavy. S. S. Pennock received 4,000 fancies alone one day lately. They were readily marketed.

The violet market is not in particularly good shape, through no fault of the stock. St. Valentine's and milder weather are the remedies. The falling off in the supply of Easter lilies has created a demand for callas, which dragged a week ago. The feature of the market is a great increase in spring flowers, which brighten up the windows wonderfully. Fine tulips, daffodils and freesias can all be had in quantities.

Leo Niessen is receiving forget-me-nots. Orchids are quite plentiful. Gardenias can now be had in two or three grades. Valley is very fine. All greens are in demand.

Choice Stock.

At S. S. Pennock's there are fancy Liberties, white orchids, white violets, Lawson, Vesper and Prosperity carnations, the second a pure white and fine form from Isaac H. Passmore; also white lilacs, gardenias, valley, etc. At Leo Niessen's one sees fancy Liberties, splendid freesias, from Lukens, of Burlington; quantities of daffodils and other spring flowers, many of them from Carl Jurgens, of Newport, also pansies, myosotis, etc. At the Flower Market there are fancy Beauties, tulips, daffodils, grand single violets from Mrs. S. I. Smith, of Secane; splendid double violets from Joseph L. Johnson, of Hightstown, also long strings of asparagus, etc. At Edward Reid's fancy Beauties are shown, very fine valley, sweet peas, a splendid assortment of carnations, etc. W. J. Baker has calla lilies and a great variety of fine carnations, also long-stemmed freesias from M. J. Brinton, of Christiana, etc. At E. Bernheimer's there is fine mignonette, a variety of good carnations, roses, etc.; at C. A. Dunn & Company's, Brides, Maids, carnations calla lilies, etc.

A Complete Wedding.

Every florist knows how trying it is to have only part of a wedding; to do the church and have someone else do the house; to have the bouquets and have someone else beautify the table or parlors when it would be so much more satisfactory to do the whole thing one's self. Yet this is very common, the rule, in fact. The exception occurred recently, when one firm, Hugh Graham, attended to the entire wedding festivities, which were very complete and elegant. Ushers, dinners, bridesmaids, lunch, church decorations, house decorations, bouquets and boutonnieres, decorations at the hotel in Washington where the happy couple went, and at the hotel in Florida where they spent the honeymoon. The effects were all in green and white.

Improvements.

The Henry F. Michell Company is preparing for a heavy seed business next spring. This week they are beginning extensive improvements at their handsome store. New, larger and balk windows will be put in and the offices removed to the second story front, their space on the first floor being filled by additional counters and display cases. The work is being done by contract to be finished in thirty days.

"We and Our Field."

The feature of the Florists' Club meeting on Tuesday evening was an able paper by Wm. J. Stewart, of Boston, entitled "We and Our Field," which was listened to by an appreciative audience.

Notes.

Pennock Brothers had a very handsome window decoration this week in pink, banks of Azalea Madame Van der Cruyssen, showers of pink ribbon and asparagus above.

Joseph Kift & Son have their windows decorated with spring flowers and fine cyclamens in pots, also Cybotium Schiedeii, which lights up beautifully.

Berger Brothers opened their new commission house at 1220 Filbert street on Monday. They are rapidly getting the place in shape and expect to carry a good stock of flowers.

Herman Schoenfeld had a large dinner decoration for ex-Governor Bunn last week.

Hugh Graham is receiving a very fine lot of Lawson, Prosperity, etc., from his place at Logan.

Phil is indebted to J. J. Beneke for a handsome picture postal of the St. Louis World's Fair.

The Colonial Flower Shop was closed last Saturday.

The Wm. Graham Company had the decorations for the midwinter ball on Friday. Many acacias were used.

Chas. P. Poryzees makes an effective display at his store in the Haseltine building.

Wm. K. Harris is calling gardenias. Edward Reid had an order for 7,500 pink carnations; Joost and Scott were used.

Robert Scott & Son have been sending Easter lilies to S. S. Pennock for several weeks.

N. D. Gachor has a very attractive stand in Broad street station. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business the past week was fairly good and there seems to be sufficient stock to fill all orders except on choice roses, which the retail trade found great difficulty in obtaining, especially good American Beauties. We had some very disagreeable weather last week, with plenty of snow and below zero part of the week, which made it hard on those who had large plant decorations, of which there were quite a few reported among the west end florists.

On Friday all florists reported big sales of pink carnations in honor of the late President McKinley, and it is estimated that 50,000 were sold by our florists at from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, with some extra fancy Lawson at $3 per dozen. During the past week there was also a good demand for bunches for the mid-winter graduating of the normal class and high school. This, with plenty of funeral work, made the last week in January quite a profitable one for both growers and retailers.

Pot plants are selling better. Among the blooming plants some fine lilacs, azaleas, Dutch hyacinths and lilies are seen. Theo. Miller is showing extra fine tulips, which are selling fast.

Of the stock that is coming in now all varieties of roses are scarce. Brides, Maids, Meteors and Golden Gates have had a good demand, with very little fancy stock to pick from, so the best stock brings from $6 to $8 per 100; others are $3 and $5. Very few Beauties are received.

Carnations seem plentiful, yet the demand is large and very few were left over the past week, with prices ranging from $2.50 to $6 per 100. All stock is of good quality. The market has a good supply in California violets, which are of extra fine quality. Very little southern stock is coming in, but more home-grown stock is in than can be disposed of at 50 and 75 cents per 100, which price prevailed all of the past week.

Romans, Paper Whites and valley are very plentiful, but Dutch hyacinths, tulips, Von Sions and Harrisii are scarce, as are callas and freesias. Prices seem about the same as quoted last week. Common ferns are scarce, in fact the market was out on Saturday. In other greens the market is well supplied.

Various Notes.

William R. Mannheim, who came here a week ago, from Chicago, with letters of introduction from Ed. Winterson and claimed he last worked for Mangel, committed suicide at Union Station by drinking carbolic acid last Tuesday night. From letters found on his person his home in Chicago was at 3812 Prairie avenue. At the time of writing his body had not been claimed by his relatives or friends.

J. F. Ammann, his foreman, Henry Plixen, and A. Jablonsky left on an inspection tour February 1. They will visit Chicago, New Castle, La Fayette, Richmond and Indianapolis before returning home.

J. H. Hadkinson, superintendent of floriculture at the World's Fair, leaves this week for a business trip through Wisconsin.

The death of Henry Weber, of Oakland, Md., as announced in the last issue, was a shock to his many friends in the trade here, who are with me in extending to the family our heartfelt sympathy.

The Riessen Floral Company has closed its branch store under the Planters' Hotel, moving all the fixtures to their Broadway store.

Fred Weber has returned from Chicago, where he spent a few pleasant days with the trade.

A. Jablonsky will build six new Dietsch houses, each 150 feet long, in April on his new place at Central, near his friend, John Steidle.

From reports our sick brother, Max Herzog, is improving every day and will soon be out among his friends. John Hudson and Carew Sanders are also showing improvement.

I have been requested by the craft here to extend our congratulations to Grandpa Phil Hauswirth.

Arnold Ringier, who travels for W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, was in town the past week calling on the trade. Mr. Ringier reports a big trade in his line. Wm. Hagemann, of New York, was also a caller.

The World's Fair flower show committee, the entertainment committee and the arrangement committee met at Weber's store Friday night. Mr. Hadkinson gave his views as to the kind of floral exhibitions that would take place during the World's Fair. Every member of the committee is to bring in a list at the next meeting of this committee, on Friday night, February 12. The entertainment committee decided to have an entertainment and hop at De Honey's hall, corner of Vandeventer and Olive streets, on Friday night, February 19. The arrangement committee, which is also the finance committee, reported that arrangements were well in hand for entertaining the members of the executive committee of the S. A. F., when they meet here in March. The blue book committee of the club also held a short meeting and will be ready to make a full report at the next meeting. Those present at this meeting were F. C. Weber, Otto Koenig, Fred Meinhardt, Theo. Miller, J. H. Hadkinson and J. J. Beneke. The other members of these committees are Emil Schray, J. F. Ammann and John Young.

Visitors in town this week are: Ralph M. Ward, of New York, and J. M. Jansen, of C. Keur & Sons, both gentlemen selling bulbs.

Club Meeting.

The members are requested to attend the meeting of the Florists' Club next Thursday afternoon, February 11, at 2 o'clock. New carnations and an exhibition by local growers for prizes will be one of the features. An essay by Frank Fillmore, on "Carnation Growing," and a discussion on "Propagating Carnations," lead by E. W. Guy, will no doubt bring out the carnation growers, as both of these gentlemen are at the top in carnation culture. The report of the arrangement committee will be of great importance to all the members who have interest in the coming meeting of the Society of American Florists.

Bowling.

Last Wednesday night a special bowling match was arranged between two well-known Chicago gentlemen, A. Ringier and Mr. O'Neil. They were assisted by the local bowlers and great excitement prevailed, as the scores were close. Mr. Ringier won out after a hard fight by the following scores: Ringier, 143, 138, 190, total 471; O'Neil, 140, 138 185, total 463.

Two four-men teams bowled a match game at Worden's alleys on Monday night, in which some good scores were made. The teams were captained by Kuehn and Beneke, with the following results:

Team No. 1—	1st.	2d.	3d.	T'l.
Beneke	191	176	157	524

MILWAUKEE.

A Carnation Show.

Owing to it being carnation night there was a well attended meeting of the Milwaukee Florists' Club, Tuesday, February 2, at Empire hall. There were prizes offered for the local growers, of which Nic. Zweifel took first on Enchantress, second on Adonis and third on Lawson. There were also large exhibits by the Chicago Carnation Co., who are showing Fiancee, Crusader and several other very promising varieties, which impressed the local growers very much. The Thompson Carnation Co. exhibited a fine vase of Nelson Fisher, also M. A. Patten, Gov. Wolcott and other choice varieties.

F. Dorner & Sons Co. exhibited the Belle and Lady Bountiful. Wm. Helwig, Heitman & Baerman, A. Tiebohl were also showing some very fine blooms. It was a very fine display of carnations and created considerable enthusiasm among the carnation growers of this section.

Jas. Hartshorne, J. D. Thompson and J. C. Vaughan were visitors at this meeting. Matters pertaining to the coming fall flower show were also taken up and committees were appointed to make arrangements for the show. INCOG.

CHESTER, PA.—David Wilson fell on the ice January 16 and broke one of the bones in the hand with which he tried to save himself.

HARTFORD, CONN.—George S. Osborn has spent a week in bed under the care of his physician, but is now able to be about again. The weather has been very severe.

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT.—G. J. Emery says that the sale for cut flowers has been excellent this winter, but the plant trade slow. What is needed is some sunny weather and a little warmer; it has been 10 to 15 degrees below zero, with a heavy wind for the past week.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The past week was promenade week at Yale and brought with it scores of handsome juniors who had their escorts and chaperones, sisters and mothers and many of their fathers, all of whom were well supplied with violets and Beauties soon after their arrival.

Simons & Fox, of Hartford, made their debut as promenade decorators this year. Mrs. C. A. Fox managed the work and with a woman's taste the beautiful decorations in the Second Regiment armory were planned and put into place. The decorations were entirely different from previous promenade decorations and proved much more effective.

The first work was to cover the ceiling with the mammoth canopy, with squares of white bunting bordered with green. Three sections were left on either side of the ceiling to form a square from which the bunting was festooned toward the center, forming a large dome which rose gracefully and gradually. The center formed the middle point of a great burst of frosted electric incandescent lights, more than 100 being used and shedding a brilliant pure white light over the interior. From this dome incandescent electric lights alternated, stretching along the iron supporters within the dome, and others ran at right angles to the lines of lights, in all about 600 incandescent lights being strung for the canopy illumination. Streamers of pink and white ran with the lines of electric lights from the great dome.

The decorations on each side of the hall had as a climax daintily constructed arches which covered the music stands. These were made of ribbons and trimmed with smilax and roses. Pink and white roses were suspended from the dome in artistic baskets. Applegreen and white were the predominant colors used in the general decorations, mural tapestries being used lavishly on the side walls.

J. N. Champion got all the decorations at the houses, some of which are as follows: The Colony, decorated with ropings of smilax and palms, tables with yellow and pink roses. The St. Anthony, palms, smilax and roping, vases of carnations and roses, also pots of azaleas. York Hall, masses of smilax and palms, with carnations, roses and azaleas scattered about in artistic profusion. S. H. Moore had the bulk of the violet business in his own hands and it is believed he had orders and filled them to the amount of 80,000. S. H. W.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The past few weeks we have been having all kinds of weather, from spring to coldest winter. Last Wednesday the mercury ranged from 6 to 10 degrees below zero, with 17 below reported by J. Lodder & Sons, of Hamilton, O. This winter has been, without a doubt, the most severe that we have had for a great many years, and the expense of running greenhouses consequently, is greater. It is to be hoped that the returns for stock produced will show enough increase to warrant the extra expense. As far as this market is concerned it is safe to say that it has.

The demand for stock of all kinds is much better than last week. The supply is about the same. The store men are beginning to hustle about more than at any time since the holidays, and they are not nearly so particular about the kind of flowers they get. The main idea is to get the stock. This has a tendency to raise the price, and all grades are now held stiff at the quoted figures.

American Beauties, which did not do very well at any time during the past month, are now in better demand, and there are not enough to go around. The same may be said of all other kinds of roses, with the Liberty and Meteor very scarce. The receipts of carnations are somewhat heavier, but still they are not enough to go around; almost anything that looks like a carnation is good for $3 per hundred now. Violets also show signs of waking up, and the wholesalers now look with more favor on shipments of these as they come in. All kinds of bulbous stock is moving well and there is not enough Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, smilax, etc., to meet the demand.

Notes.

It is with sincere regret that I read of the death of our friend and fellow florist, Henry Weber. Mr. Weber came to this city quite frequently and has always taken an active part in our society's flower shows, though he was not a member.

By act of the legislature the red carnation has been chosen as the official flower of Ohio, in honor of President McKinley. This is work in the right direction, but it was a sad mistake to have the color designated, and if such a thing is possible, it should be changed. It is highly proper to have the carnation the official flower, but it is decidedly wrong to name the color. From a florist's point of view it is unnecessary to give any arguments for this, they are too obvious.

Fred Walker, brother of Geo. Walker, superintendent of the flower market, died during the past week and was buried on Saturday.

Our rose show is scheduled for February 13, and indications point to its being a great success this year. All arrangements are now complete and schedules have been mailed. We would like to have vases of all the new roses for our boys to look at, so if you have anything new or especially fine, send it along, express prepaid, addressed to the Cincinnati Florists' Society, care of superintendent Jabez Elliott Flower Market, and your blooms will be staged by an experienced man and shown to the best advantage.

C. J. CHMER.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—George H. Campbell died January 18, aged 81 years. Up to a year ago he was actively engaged in the florist business.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.

Announcement is made of the death of Eli B. Lewis, the dean of the craft in western New York. He was 85 years of age.

CANTON, O.—Carnations were in large demand here January 29, McKinley day. Many handsome designs were sent to Mr. McKinley's tomb and carnations were used everywhere. Florist Charles Brown put a pink carnation in the buttonhole of every street car employe, which served to remind many of the significance of the flower that day.

CENTRAL ISLIP, N. Y.—William Thompson, gardener at the Manhattan State Hospital, died suddenly January 17 at the age of 68 years. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, and came to this country in 1888. He has become widely known as a gardener of much skill and his exhibits of vegetables, plants, etc., at the fairs of Riverhead, L. I., Huntington, L. I., and at the Berkeley Lyceum, New York city, were awarded the highest prizes. He was formerly gardener at the New York Experimental Station, Geneva, N. Y.

DENVER, COLO.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been rather quiet lately, more on the account of the scarcity of stock than otherwise. Quite recently carnations were so abundant that some of the growers proposed donating them to the hospitals, rather than put them on the market at a figure far below their value. Now the demand is in excess of the supply.

Roses also are very scarce, especially teas, and their scarcity is felt more than that of the carnation. All roses have been rather poor for some time; the quality as well as the quantity is something unusual in this sunny clime at this time of year. Some growers who reaped the harvest at an early stage seem to be now off crop, while a few are really off altogether, which accounts for the condition of the market.

Beauties, which always fall off in crop at this time of the year, are really more scarce than teas and are more rare than they have been for many years. Almost any grower seems capable of producing this favorite rose in abundance throughout the fall and early winter, but after the mid-winter holidays the results are either long, unproductive wood or a lot of short, scrubby flowers which no first-class retail man wishes to handle. Eastern Beauty growers, on their arrival here, are astonished to hear of such results, but have never been able to rectify this unaccountable deficiency in crop, which invariably occurs at this time of the year.

Two Good Ferns.

There are few plants that are a genuine success in the dwelling house in this arid country throughout the winter months. The dry, light air, coupled with the artificial heat, seems to absorb all the sap or vitality of both leaf and blossom. But among those grown solely for their ornamental foliage and which are most popular after the palm family, is the nephrolepis family of ferns, which flourish where many other hardier types of plants are almost a failure. I think Bostoniensis has sold better than any other plant for many years; but its new rival, Piersoni, is going to give it a hard tussle for popularity in the future. Its scarcity, and consequently high price, is the only check to its selling qualities. Its character of growth has been proven to be fully equal to the Boston, and its type of foliage will make it far more attractive. It is well named, the ostrich plume fern.

While speaking of sword ferns I would like to say a few words about Mauff's new variety which was exhibited at Milwaukee last summer. He now has several thousand on hand and is still increasing the stock. It possesses a more compact growth, more numerous fronds than Bostoniensis, and is more full in the crown, which will make it better adapted for house culture as a pot plant. When disseminated it will make a valuable acquisition to this family of plants.

Various Notes.

Begonia Lorraine is receiving special attention at the greenhouses of the Park Floral Co. just now. They are making special efforts to turn out young stock by the thousand, and so far have had commendable success. Leaf cuttings are their principal wood, and so far they have rooted them on an open sand bench in the propagating house, but they find as the season advances it is necessary to protect them with glass covering. This assists in holding sap and color in the leaf, which at this advanced season of the year becomes discolored and dry.

Ben Boldt has recently secured a lease on the Mud Lake greenhouses belonging to the Daniels & Fisher Dry Goods Co., which takes effect in August. This place has proven too much for many, but as Ben has had unprecedented success, he feels justified in his undertaking. He is now making contracts for his whole output for the coming season, and as he is noted for growing only the best, he has no trouble in placing all his product beforehand.

Another grower who has practiced this system of disposing of his stock is Benson, of South Denver. He has for many years contracted for the bulk of his crop with a prominent retail house, and the transactions have been so satisfactory to both parties that it is made already for another year. Of course reputation for growing good stock is what gives a person such a desirable position in the profession, and as Benson is considered the soul of honor in this community, commendation is frequently extended by his fraternal brotherhood.

GREAT DIVIDE.

COLUMBUS, O.—The legislature has by resolution adopted the carnation as the state flower, as a token of reverence for Mr. McKinley.

LOCKLAND, O.—W. K. Partridge says there is a big call for cuttings of Enchantress and he has booked orders for all the cuttings he can root.

HERE'S another dollar for the REVIEW, which we certainly cannot do without.—GELVEN & SON, Sedalia, Mo.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific Burpee's FORDHOOK FARMS are famous as the Largest Trial Grounds in America.

From the Atlantic

Professor Johnson of "The American Agriculturist" performed a similar office on behalf of the members of the agricultural and horticultural press present. Mr. Johnson said that the day had been one rare treat. In speaking of the immensity of the Trial Grounds at Fordhook, Professor Johnson stated that those present would take home a lesson which would be remembered for many years. There was not an experiment station in the United States, supported by State or National legislation, that had anything like the variety of tests that were conducted on the Fordhook Farms. He said this in all fairness to the splendid work of the Experiment Stations. — Extract from an Editorial account of "A FIELD DAY AT FORDHOOK," which appeared in The Florists' Exchange, New York, July 4, 1903.

From the Pacific

A careful seedsman's experiment grounds, like yours, it seems to me, are far more useful than any of the colleges or public experiment stations, as it is all practical work. Your Fordhook Trial Grounds were the best of all my Eastern object lessons, and I had many of them. I had no idea of their extent and value, not only to yourself, but to every one of your customers, and eventually to every one who cultivates the soil. — Thus wrote LUTHER BURBANK, "The Wizard of Horticulture," from Santa Rosa, California, October 20, 1900, upon his return from an extended Eastern trip.

THE WORLD'S LARGEST MAIL-ORDER SEED BUSINESS

You need not take our word for the truth of this statement (although we never knowingly exaggerate) but can read below the entirely unsolicited opinions of two leading experts. There is not money enough, even in all the territory "from the Atlantic to the Pacific" to purchase such testimony from either of these well known Horticulturists! They know whereof they speak and do not hesitate to tell freely the plain truth — as learned from their own inspection.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 23d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

THIS promises to be a banner year for the wholesaler who can deliver the goods.

THE seed business of Levings Bros., Paris, Ill., has been sold to Joseph L. Warder, of Terre Haute, Ind.; and the stock has been removed to that city.

It is reported that continued dry weather and sharp morning frosts are not helping the bulb growers and there may be a shortage in freesias and other small bulbs from southern California.

THE onion set warehouse of A. L. Jones & Son, Chicago, took fire on the morning of January 31, 6,000 bushels of red and 2,500 bushels of white onion sets being destroyed.

IN view of the present high price of eating potatoes it should not be hard to get up club orders for Michigan seed potatoes at catalogue rates. They could come forward in a refrigerator car.

H. W. BUCKBEE, Rockford, Ill., is in his new seed warehouse and has one of the most completely equipped plants in the trade. The main building is 65x184 and four stories high. There is also an engine room 39x65.

MARKET garden trade is likely to tax the best effort of those houses which cater to it this spring. Besides the shortage in many of the items that are necessary to their needs, the samples available are not quite up to the market gardeners' standard.

THINGS are still booming in beans; orders are much easier to get than stock to fill them with. All along the line there is a swift movement in all lines and by the end of the season the general depletion of stocks will make the coming season a good one for the growers.

It is stated that the present price of canned tomatoes, Maryland standard 3s being 62½ to 70 cents per dozen at the packing houses, is from 7½ to 10 cents below the cost of packing and that it is resulting in greatly increased consumption, so that the 1902 and 1903 pack, said to be 20,000,000 cases, will be largely disposed of.

ADVICES from Baltimore say that cabbage is selling at $50 a ton there and can scarcely be obtained even at that figure. Good quality cabbage appears to be worth $50 almost anywhere in the country and fancy stock is even higher. Imported stock is held firmly at $50, with an upward tendency which promises to carry it still higher.

PRIVATE mail advices from packers at Aberdeen, Md., state that offerings of future corn out of first hands continue to be made with caution, largely owing to the continued unsettled position of seed corn. High prices of the latter, together with the higher demands on the part of the grower, makes it necessary for the packer to figure on new business on a considerably higher basis than previous years' business.

ARROYO GRANDE GROWERS.

An Arroyo Grande, Cal., correspondent sends the following to a Los Angeles paper about success achieved in the seed industry in that vicinity:

Less than ten years ago L. C. Rhoutzahn, a clergyman in failing health, and with almost no capital, came to Arroyo Grande from Three Rivers, Mich., and in company with his father-in-law, J. C. McClure, started a small seed farm of two or three acres on land about two miles from town. Today a beautiful modern home stands on those acres, to which hundreds more have been added. The McClure Seed Company is an incorporated body, with $100,000 capital and over 600 acres, all planted to seeds each year. Sweet peas, in forty-acre patches, are a specialty. The crop of seeds sold for $35,000 one year and $50,000 last year.

Victor Johanson came from Denmark, and after struggling for years at general farming concluded to try seed raising near Arroyo Grande. He began with a few acres of rented land. Last year, as a result, he was able to purchase twenty or thirty acres of the old Tallyho ranch, which had been used for grain and grazing, together with the ranch house, which he remodeled into a pretty home. He also rents about 150 acres. He started with little or no capital.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Last week a change in the flower market took place; the unfavorable weather, with storms and no sun, shortened up the supply considerably, but no noticeable change in prices occurred. Roses are slightly off crop, especially Brides, the very choicest Maids and Brides selling at 18 cents. Good Beauties are decidedly off crop; plenty of short ones are in evidence, which really have no market value.

Carnations are now in much better demand but prices are still exceptionally low. The fancy bring $3 per 100 and a few sell at $4. Novelties, such as Enchantress and Prosperity, are bringing $6. The general average stock is being offered as low as $15 per 1,000. Tulips of good quality are plentiful but the demand is limited. The call for sweet peas is falling off more each week; many are left on our hands unsold. Lilies are scarce. Mignonette, freesia and daffodils are meeting with fair demand. Sufficient stock is being received to meet all requirements.

Various Notes.

John Murchie, of Sharon, Pa., has a new carnation which he has named Fred Burki. In color it is a glistening white, with a faint streak of pink that cannot be noticed two feet away. It is a fine, healthy, upright grower and every shoot makes a flower; it produces continuously. The weakest stems will hold the flowers erect. The blooms average three to three and three-quarter inches, stems from twenty to thirty inches. It is a cross between Mrs. Lawson and a seedling. Mr. Murchie claims that it will produce more good flowers than any other white carnation he has grown or seen grown, and that it will give a steady cut from November to July. Mr. Murchie further says that he could afford to give a dollar for every bursted flower. Mr. Murchie contemplates staging it at the Detroit convention.

David Geddis, who has been confined to his home the last week, is about again.

Theodore Beckert is consigning the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. some fine freesia and white tulips.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. is shipping in quantities of extra fine Maids and Brides.

Brother Langhans, you are a good worker in securing new members for the Florists' Club. Philip has the following names for proposal at the next meeting: E. J. Perry, Greensburg; Wm. Cromack, Irwin; Karl Klinke, George Marshall, Edward McConnell and Wm. Q. Potter, of Pittsburg.

The German count's song, dedicated by T. P. Langhans to the Florists' Club smoker and sung by him, was a creditable production, it was full of wit and mirth and good fellowship, and was appreciated by many.

Visitor: Martin Reukauf, representing H. B. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia. Hoo-Hoo.

RANDOM NOTES.

"Hurrah! the world looks bright to me,
The winter's slipping past;
I face the future hopefully,
My coal bids fair to last."

This may possibly be the song of some of our western fellow-craftsmen, but those I have met while making a tour through the Empire state are what is commonly termed "on the anxious seat," for the coal pile is diminishing and the predictions are for more cold weather. Today was the first bright day in two months. No wonder flowers have been scarce when most needed. Yet in conversation with several retailers, they feel, and perhaps justly so, that no conditions warrant the tremendous advance in prices around the holidays. It is forcing many into adding to plants already deemed sufficient for ordinary purposes and it means that at a no very distant date the business of the commission man so far as out-of-town shipping is concerned, will be a thing of the past. Want of confidence between the two parties is to be deplored, and will be the means of bringing about an undesirable state of things.

L. E. Marquisee, of Syracuse, N. Y., is doing his utmost to fill the pile of orders placed for Flamingo. Stock is so badly cut to pieces for cuttings that it is doubtful if a very good showing can be made at the coming convention. Even visions of the gold medal have failed to stay the knife of the propagator. Albatross is a beautiful white and has sold well.

Frank Baker wished me not to mention anything regarding the new place he has purchased just on the border of Utica, so I will not do it. J. C. Spencer may exhibit specimens of his seedling, Jubilee X Red Jacket, the same parentage from which sprang Flamingo. This seedling is more serrated in bloom, lighter in grass and stem, but very free. Flower is a shade brighter than Flamingo.

J. C. Hatcher, of Amsterdam, N. Y., was hammering away on the rafters of a new 200-foot house, when I looked in at his new place at Hoffmans, situated about five miles from the home plant. "Must rely more upon ourselves," remarked Mr. Hatcher, "we know what we can grow and can see what we grow."

J. O. Graham, of Little Falls, N. Y., reports business about as usual at this season. Being unable to enlarge his present plant, he is looking for a desirable location near by.

C. A. Dole, of Lockport, N. Y., reports business not nearly as good as usual. Thos. Mansfield speaks in a similar vein, but doubtless with a spell of bright weather, the brighter side of things will be visible.

C. H. Roney, of Jamestown, N. Y., of the Lake View Rose Gardens, says he does not remember so long an absence of sunshine at this season of the year. Carnations could not be persuaded to unfold their petals or even to burst their calyxes. Roses were much freer. Paper Whites, lilacs and lilies are forced in large quantities and have sold well right along. The growth and sale of smilax and asparagus seem as good as ever. The weekly bulletin issued by this firm makes interesting reading. Invariably optimistic, it tones up the spirits of its readers in addition to being a valuable price list to its patrons.

Dropping in on Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, N. Y., I found him preparing his weekly batch of valuable notes, and I wondered how he manages it, pausing between whiles to ask some pertinent question of his able aides or to reply to a volley of inquiries from a customer.

SCHIZANTHUS WISETONENSIS.

From seed bought from dealers it is very seldom that all the seeds germinate, perhaps out of thirty seeds one may come up, says a writer in the Gardening World, but if seeds are saved at home they will be much more easy to germinate. Out of every fifty seeds one may die if seeds are saved at home. Another way to increase stock is, when the plants are large enough, say seven inches high, pinch the top out of them, and also keep the tops. Prepare and make into cuttings by cutting clean at a joint, and placing them in small pots of leaf mold, sand and a little peat, teased fine, and place them under a handglass and keep close for a few weeks, when the glass may be lifted off altogether, and the cuttings gradually brought into a cooler temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. When the pots are nearly filled with roots give them a shift into a compost of leaf mold, sand and loam, and a few pieces of lime rubble to keep the soil open. When the plants are in bloom select the finest blooms and colors, and on bright days fertilize with a feather or something soft to be sure of a good set of seed, and it will pay for the trouble taken.

APPRECIATION.

From Massachusetts:—"Would not know how to get along without the REVIEW, as it contains much valuable information every issue."

From Ontario:—"We are much pleased with the REVIEW and would not care to do without it."

From New York:—"I am much pleased with your interesting paper; it is all anyone could wish for."

From Nebraska:—"The REVIEW has become indispensable to us."

From Kansas:—"The recent article on propagating hardy roses is worth a year's subscription to the average nurseryman."

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Frank H. Kimberly has a pure white sport of Enchantress carnation, identical with its parent in all except color. Although he is growing all the new ones, he thinks this heads the list in all respects.

The Florists' Manual

by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in Vanderbilt hall January 28, with a good attendance. The principal business was changing the dates of the monthly meetings from the last Thursday to the last Tuesday of each month. It was also decided to try and cultivate more sociability at the meetings, and with this end in view it was voted to have an open evening once every three months, when light refreshments will be served. Some of the members were in favor of having the annual fall chrysanthemum show held in White Plains or Yonkers, but after some discussion it was decided to hold it again in Tarrytown. The dates selected are November 1 to 3.

The prize for this month's exhibit was awarded to President Jas. Ballantyne for twelve roses. His exhibit consisted of excellent blooms of the new Killarney rose, Wootton, American Beauty and Bridesmaid. He also exhibited a very fine vase of Killarney roses. These were exceptionally good and very much commented on. Mr. Ballantyne said it was a first-class grower, and no doubt more of it will be seen around this vicinity next year. F. Gibson, gardener to Mrs. J. H.

THE STORRS & HARRISON CO. PAINESVILLE, OHIO.

Hall, offered a box of cigars as a prize for the best bunch of fifty double violets, to be competed for at the next meeting.

New members elected were R. Barton, gardener to L. Stern, Tarrytown, and Mr. Parker, of Irvington. Proposed for membership were A. Brown, of Tarrytown, and F. Koenig.

The business meeting over, the members adjourned in a body to the Perry House, where a very substantial collation was awaiting, otherwise known as the annual dinner. In all about sixty members and invited guests were present. The tables were very tastefully decorated with fronds of Nephrolepis Piersoni and vases of roses and carnations. The carnations, especially, were the object of much comment. John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., brought along a very fine vase of a new scarlet variety, named after himself, which was the largest carnation ever seen in Tarrytown. He also had some white and variegated seedlings. The F. R. Pierson Co. supplied well grown examples of White Lawson, Daheim and Enchantress. H. Nichols, of Yonkers, brought some very good blooms of Golden Gate roses, and President Ballantyne's prize winners were also placed upon the tables.

As soon as the cigars were passed, President Ballantyne, in a neat speech, introduced J. M. Smith, of White Plains, as toastmaster. The first to come under his eye was the Hon. C. P. McClellan, who is easily a pastmaster as an after dinner speaker. He referred to the time when he himself graduated from the spade and wheelbarrow, and kept the assemblage in good spirits with repartee and humor. The poet laureate of the profession, J. Austin Shaw, of New York, gave an example of his ability in a poem, which he named Tarrytown, and in which he managed to gather most of the gardening fraternity of the neighborhood and named the virtues and qualifications of each. The song bird of the profession, J. J. Butterfield, of New York, warbled his sweetest notes. P. E. Kessler, of New York, spoke for the gardening press. J. Dowling and J. Newman, from the Monmouth County Society, Oceanic, N. J., replied to the toast "The Visitors." Wm. Scott spoke for the gardeners, reminding those present that theirs was the oldest profession on earth, and good humoredly twitted some of the different professions present and gave some examples of why the Creator did not choose theirs as the first occupation for man. Jas. Scott gave a humorous account of his experiences as gardener at the House of Refuge on Randall's Island. Mr. McFarlane recited in his best form, and after a few more speeches the evening came to a close with votes of thanks and the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

DATE OF EASTER.

Note that Easter, 1904, falls on April 3. In 1905 Easter will be the latest in many years, falling on April 23.

HAMILTON, O.—Theo. Bock says stock is in very fair shape throughout this district. Carnations are the best sellers, better than roses.

A PARSLEY CROP LOST.

Reading the REVIEW I found the note of W. S. Croydon on the cultivation of parsley. I have grown a sash house of parsley 6x80 in this way for six years with good results, but this year we were about six weeks behind with our work in the fall, due to doing so much building and an unusual amount of business during the summer months. I thought it would be better to leave this parsley planting alone and dig up some heavy roots in the late fall and pack away. But the cold weather set in and it froze hard, not having the parsley protected, and in two weeks it thawed. We went out and dug up the frozen clumps and packed in the parsley house, as I call it, it being built for that purpose, but instead of thawing open and growing all winter, as I had expected, it began to rot and now there is nothing left of it. I have almost all the hotels and boarding houses in our town to supply with vegetables the year around and had to cut out the parsley for the past three weeks. Now I shall have to buy a quantity weekly for about three months till my seedlings make foliage.

CHAS. W. EIFLER.

TOMATOES.

I have some very nice tomato plants under glass and would like to have you tell me what you mean by pollination, also if I must remove the first flowers which set on the plants. They have been planted about six weeks and are two feet high and very healthy.

G. P. C.

Pollination is the act of transferring the pollen, a yellow floury substance, from the stamens to the pistil of the flower, where it must be placed before fertilization takes place. Tomato flowers are seldom self-pollinating. Though the pollen and the stigma (the part of the pistil adapted to receive the pollen) mature together, the pistil usually outgrows the stamens, and by the time the pollen is ripe extends so far beyond the stamens that contact is hardly possible. Under natural conditions, where the plants are grown in the open air, the pollen is disseminated by natural agencies, such as wind and insects, but under artificial conditions, as under glass, artificial means must be employed, hence the necessity of hand pollination. The stigma is provided with a sticky substance which holds the pollen whenever it comes in contact with it, and on bright days by shaking the vines the pollen is often liberated, carried around by the air and in this way brought in contact with the stigmas, thus accomplishing pollination. But during the dull, short days of winter pollen is not so freely produced nor so easily set free. Then the only certain method is to transfer the pollen by hand. We find the easiest way to accomplish this is to shake the pollen from the flowers onto a piece of glass and from there transfer it to the pistil with a camelshair brush.

Don't remove the flowers that are already set; the more you can set at an early stage the better. If the plants are healthy there is no danger of this retarding their growth to the extent of doing any harm, though it may assist in keeping the plants from becoming too gross.

PLANT NOTES.

Budded Roses.

Some years ago there were many large rose growers who advertised their roses as being grown on their own roots and made much of the fact that they did not grow nor handle grafted stock. As a consequence the general public, when it became necessary to visit any of our local nurseries in quest of roses with which to adorn their gardens, generally insisted that they be given plants that were grown on their own roots. Although in almost all cases the buyers had not the slightest idea why roses grown this way were more desirable than the grafted article, still they had that idea in their heads and as a consequence generally bought little plants with hardly enough life in them to stand transplanting.

All rose growers know that many of our finest varieties, especially among the tea family, make very few and very poor roots even under the best conditions and it takes usually at least three years before they grow as large as the same variety would grow if budded on some variety of wild stock that is suited to it. In the first place the reader will bear in mind roses are grown outside in California entirely. In the second place also make a note of the fact that we do not graft roses to any extent on this coast. I used the term grafted roses merely because roses are grown that way both in Europe and in our eastern states, but strictly speaking three-fourths of the plants handled here are budded stock.

My reasons for preferring budded roses to those grown on their own roots (except for some strong growing kinds and a majority of the climbing varieties) are that, first, they grow stronger; second, they are longer lived; third, they are easier transplanted; fourth, the roots are not subject to borers and other root pests. In our large rose growing establishments about six different varieties of wild stocks are used on which to bud the different sorts of roses. This represents the results of many years of experience, for we have found that certain varieties do well only when budded on certain varieties of wild roses and to have the most satisfaction from your plants they must mate properly. This is really the most important item in growing budded roses.

Another feature that must not be overlooked is the disbudding of the wild stock. By this I mean the cutting out of all the eyes below where the bud is inserted. This is done after the cuttings are made and before they are planted. This removes the objection that has heaped odium on roses that were grown in any other way than on their own roots. We grow Marechal Niel on this coast five feet high from the bud the first season, and Climbing Niphetos five to six feet high. Such varieties as Caroline Testout, Liberty, Belle Siebrecht, Kaiserin, Meteor and Perle des Jardins, average three feet high the first season and entirely without irrigation. This is as much if not more than any of these kinds will grow in three years under the same conditions if grown on their own roots. This accounts for the fact that our rose growers who force for cut flowers under glass are falling in line and year by year are planting less stock on its own roots and insisting on big strong plants grown without irrigation on some vigorous wild stock.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Warm weather during the past week is bringing flowers into market in somewhat larger quantity than for some time past. Freesias are now at their best and are a good selling article for the florists. They are wholesaled at 75 cents to $1 per hundred spikes and retail at about three times that price. Valley is plentiful at $4 per hundred and tulips are selling rapidly at $3 per hundred wholesale. Daffodils are not as plentiful as they should be at this season and they will not be offered in quantity for several weeks yet. The single Trumpet Major is the only variety in bloom at present. All sorts of narcissi are plentiful and cheap. Violets in abundance, the Princess of Wales variety, at 75 cents per dozen bunches are retailed by the thousands daily by the street venders and remind us that spring will be here very soon. Carnations are fairly plentiful except good whites. The best red and pink sorts are selling at $3 per hundred and just about enough to fill the demand nicely. Roses are not in over-supply, but are getting more plentiful daily. The prices rule about the same as those quoted the past two weeks. Lilium Harrisii are not up to the standard in length of stem. They wholesale at $2 to $3 per dozen. Wild maidenhair fern, owing to our continued dry weather, is very scarce and the cultivated variety is short and soft, so that green stuff is not up to the standard. Business outside of funerals is very quiet, nothing except a little wedding work at present.

Notes.

E. Gill, of West Berkeley, has just finished planting thirty-five acres of rose cuttings. Mr. Gill is the largest rose grower on the coast and his sales thus far this season foot up close to half a million plants.

Miss A. Sherling and Miss V. W. Stevens, of Oakland, have formed a partnership to engage in decorating of all kinds. Both ladies are well known on both sides of the bay and have had considerable experience in the florists' line.

Geo. A. Duhem, formerly in the florist business here, is now located in Napa, Cal.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; Vice-Pres., F. A. Weber, St. Louis; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The twenty-eighth annual convention will be held at Atlanta, Ga., June, 1904.

A REPORT shows that there are 90,000 acres of orchards in Colorado, with 780,000 acres suitable and available for orchards and small fruits.

THE Hopedale Nurseries, Monticello, Ill., recently shipped twelve bushels of acorns to an eastern nursery and 300 pounds of tree seeds to other parties.

C. W. STUART, of Newark, N. Y., says that in planting an apple orchard his company commonly seeds the tract to alfalfa after the trees are well started.

THE West Michigan Nurseries Co., Benton Harbor, Mich., has re-elected as president, J. W. Bedford; vice-president, F. M. Kelley; secretary and treasurer, H. L. Bird; other directors, Milton Preston, W. B. Moshier, A. C. Bird and John E. Bell.

THE Pennsylvania Railroad Company has lately completed the work of planting 50,000 young locust trees on land which the railroad purchased a few years ago west of Conewago Station, Pa. An official of the company says that it is the purpose of the company to plant 1,000,000 trees in the next four years. The timber is to be used for railroad ties.

ALABAMA HORTICULTURISTS.

The year-old Alabama State Horticultural Society met in convention in Mobile January 26 and 27, with President Heikes, of the Huntsville Nurseries, in the chair. Professor Mackintosh, the state horticulturist, is secretary. Some very interesting papers were read and discussed, mostly pertaining to fruit and truck farming, spraying and fertilizers. Chas. Pabst, of Ocean Springs, Miss., in his fine treatment on pecan culture, disclosed some heavy frauds in the selling of what are supposed to be grafted and budded pecan trees and put every member on the lookout for such. Professor McKay, Mississippi state horticulturist, gave some most interesting facts about what he got out of a six-acre peach orchard, utilizing the space between the trees for vegetables, which every member, until they heard how he did it, would have considered an impossibility. The meeting on the whole was in every way successful and pleasant. The society is still in its infancy, but bids fair to become a mighty factor in the fruit and vegetable industry of Alabama. It has already succeeded in getting a state law protecting fruit and truck farmers by excluding crop pests of all kinds, and furthermore got an annual appropriation of $1,500 for defraying the expenses incurred through this act. Professor Mackintosh assured us that he will leave no stone unturned to eradicate what pests there are in the state and keep out what we have not yet contracted, and we believe he is the man to do it.

H. P. L.

THE MARKET FOR COAL.

The leading coal trade journal, the Black Diamond, reports that while prices have been firm in the east and coal has been difficult to obtain in some cases, in the west the leading markets have been in the dumps. At Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City prices have been receding and there has been an accumulation of coal. Detroit has occupied a somewhat better position, but the recent reduction in prices on some Ohio coals in that market resulted in more or less cutting of prices on the part of other producers. At Cleveland the principal oversupply of coal has been in the steam grades, which have been in excess of actual demand.

In the Chicago market all grades of bituminous coal, with the single exception of smokeless, have been considerably lower. "Free" coal from western sources, which has held unusually firm for the past eight months, has participated in the decline and is fully 25 cents lower than it was the first of the year. At St. Louis prices have shaded off 15 to 25 cents and there is a plentiful supply of coal on the east side of the river. Kansas City shippers have managed to maintain prices fairly well, but there is an accumulation of coal on track.

KANSAS CITY.

Reports from all the down-town stores say it was the best January business ever recorded, with flowers scarcer and high priced. Roses are all off crop; carnations just as bad and very high priced. Bulb stock was mostly all forced in for the holidays and is now very scarce. But we are all getting in some fine violets and there are a few good callas and longiflorum lilies on the market, which have been a great help in making funeral work lately. Greenhouse men do not seem to be so busy; not having much to cut they do not get down-town as often. All of them are getting after their spring stock for bedding out in good shape, and are looking forward for a good spring business.

L. M. S.

PRIMULA POISONING.

I see the question constantly cropping up in the REVIEW as to primula poisoning. Having grown Primula obconica for the last twenty years, I feel something should be said in favor of the maligned plant, especially as cultivation and science have now brought it to such perfection. Years ago we were satisfied with a blossom about half an inch over, but now I have a bed with flowers one and a half inches in diameter and twelve and fourteen on a truss. These are from seeds imported each spring and are easy of cultivation. As to the poisoning, I take little notice of it, as moistened carbonate of soda rubbed on the part affected will allay the irritation directly, and even this could be prevented by wearing leather gloves when handling the plants.

BREITMEYERS' NEW ROSE

A SEEDLING OF TESTOUT AND BRIDESMAID
TO BE DISSEMINATED APRIL 1, 1904

COLOR—Prevailing color a beautiful shell pink, shading in the center to a soft rose pink. The reverse of the outer petal is of a creamy, flesh tint, shading to silvery toward the base, which may best be described as opalescent. The full open flower discloses a vivid richness of coloring, rare and fascinating. FRAGRANCE—Subtle, strongly tea-scented; reminds one of old Bon Silene. FORM—Large cup-shaped, heavy petal, shell-like in formation. GROWTH—Strong and healthy, with a rich, glossy foliage, rampant and vigorous, with a strong tendency to long shoots; very prolific. ALL ORDERS BOOKED FILLED IN ROTATION, BEGINNING APRIL 1.

NEW LIGHT PINK CARNATION

New Daybreak

To the commercial grower who is looking for profit

This variety is all that its name implies, and will at once commend itself as the old Daybreak reincarnated without its faults.

Color—true Daybreak shade, of Daybreak and Scott extraction, through several generations of seedlings. Inherits the vigor and freedom of both the above varieties. Blooms large, well formed and very sweet; does not have a washed out appearance at any time of the year.

A fine keeper and shipper.

Price $3.00 per dozen,
$12.00 per 100,

GRAND RAPIDS.

We are having the most severe weather experienced in the past eighteen years, the thermometer ranging from 4 to 16 degrees below zero. On January 24 a furious snow storm raged. The greenhouses are covered with snow and frost. It is poor growing weather and a harvest for the coal man. Yet we have this to be thankful for: coal can be obtained. All one has to do to keep warm is to shovel in the money.

Notwithstanding the rough weather, business continues good, shipping orders steady and large, with no apparent end to funeral work. Roses are away off crop and unobtainable, as the normal demand is far in excess of the supply. Carnations are blooming freely, but are no more than equal to the demand; except on occasional days they are almost as scarce as roses. Harrisii are equal to the local demand. Paper Whites move very slowly. Tulips and narcissi appear in the downtown stores, but as yet of poor quality. Romans are fine and sell well. Violets are selling fairly well. On a whole business is in a good, healthy state.

Recent visitors: Harry Bunyard, A. L. Vaughan, C. Wayne Ward, F. Meyers and a representative of the Ionia Pottery Co. G. F. C.

NEW BRIGHTON, PA.

August Meyer's greenhouses are now a total ruin. He was visited by the flood that swept the Ohio valley. The water flooded his boiler room and drowned the fire out and very nearly all his plants were frozen. Mr. Meyer, with a force of men, tried to get the water out of the boiler room in order to start the fire, but it was too late. His loss will reach over $2,000. Thousands of geraniums, coleus, heliotropes, ageratum, etc., were lost. His carnation houses and asparagus and calla beds were a total ruin. Mr. Meyer is an industrious man in business and having had such bad luck it would be in order for some of our brother florists to send him some plants to help him start in business again.

DAYTON, O.—C. M. Schaefer is handling pot plants only for the present, with one house 14x40.

BELLAIRE, O.—George W. Kiger has a house all ready for glazing as soon as the weather will permit.

RADIATION.

We wish to ascertain how best to heat three rose houses, one 25x60, the others 20x60. All are even span, with glass sides and ends. We need 65 degrees indoors when the outside temperature is 20 below zero. The source of heat is a fifty horse-power tubular boiler set about a foot below the level of the return. It is also used to heat a house 20x67, one 20x50, one 20x125 and a dwelling and office with about 125 feet of radiation in each. The fuel is steam coal. What size of pipe is best for radiation in all the houses? W. F. C.

The rose house, 25x60, will require about 375 feet of radiation, equal to 862.5 lineal feet of 1 1/4-inch pipe when the boiler is working under ten pounds' pressure. Each of the houses, 20x60 feet, will require 300 feet of radiation, equal to 690 feet of 1 1/4-inch pipe. The house, 20x67 feet, will require 325 feet of radiation, or about 750 feet of 1 1/4-inch pipe, while the house, 20x50 feet, requires 240 feet of radiation, or about 552 feet of 1 1/4-inch pipe. The house 20x125 feet takes 600 feet of radiation, or 1,380 lineal feet of 1 1/4-inch pipe. In addition to the above each of the houses should be provided with a 2-inch riser or supply pipe running from the boiler to the far end of the house, then divide into coils under the benches which shall contain not less than the number of lineal feet of pipe specified for each house. I judge that one of the chief difficulties with this plant lies in the fact that the boiler is not far enough below the level of the returns. If the returns can be raised or the boiler lowered, results will be much better. If neither of these is possible a steam trap or siphon pump will overcome the difficulty. L. C. C.

Great Fuel Saver

GALENA, ILL., Jan. 28, 1902.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The boiler I bought of you is giving perfect satisfaction. When the thermometer stood at 30 below zero this morning I could hold the temperature at 60 very easily with a saving of at least 25 per cent of coal. It is without a doubt the finest hot water boiler in the land, as it will heat about double the amount of glass that other boilers do with the same amount of coal. It has proved so satisfactory that I must express my feelings.

B. F. VANDERVATE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The two No. 4 boilers you installed in my greenhouses at Hartland, Wis., did very satisfactory work last winter. I had been using cast iron boilers previously, but threw them out to put in your steel boilers. Your boilers have done better than I had expected: they require less coal, and much less attention than did the cast iron boilers. I estimate the saving in coal with your boilers was about 15 per cent. To anyone desiring a perfect greenhouse boiler, I would certainly recommend yours.

JAMES A. KIRK.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—We wish to tell you how much we are pleased with your boiler we put in last fall. It replaced two cast iron boilers, has done the work very much better, requires much less attention, and besides as near as we can judge, will use about 20 per cent less coal than we have been using. This coal item is not compared with only one season, but with at least 20 years' experience with several different kinds of cast iron boilers. We are more than satisfied and have taken pleasure in showing and recommending your boiler to a number of growers.

Skinner's Patent System of IRRIGATION.

NOW INTRODUCED FOR THE FIRST TIME.

Entirely new and incomparably superior to hose or circular spray systems of watering. Is equally adapted to a flower bed or a 1000-acre field. The only system that never has to be taken down and is always ready for use. It is an improvement on the natural rainfall in that it is never applied too fast. The easiest and cheapest to put up and the easiest and cheapest to operate. Has been in use in the inventor's garden for the past 6 years and so has been thoroughly tested. Is endorsed by all who have tried it.

We shall be pleased to send our illustrated circular to all interested and will quote special prices to introduce. Address for further information.....

Novelties In Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bratt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Adiantum Croweanum.

The new introduction in the Maldenhair Fern family.

Will be ready to distribute among the trade about July 1st, 1904. 3-inch pots, also large stock plants. Write for prices and place your order in time.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

Geraniums of the zonale type that were shifted from 2-inch pots soon after New Year's, should now give you a cutting, which, if potted into a 2-inch, will make a good bedding plant by June 1, and you are sure to need them after the 4-inch plants are gone. These cuttings, the tops of the 3-inch plants, are much better put into soil, potted firmly, than propagated in sand. After one good watering, keep them rather on the dry side until they have started roots. A light bench at about 55 degrees at night is the place for them.

Although this is a very simple subject, I must repeat once more, that for the sake of a cutting don't murder the 3-inch pot plant. If you can leave at least two good eyes, all right, if not, don't look for a cutting but just pinch out the top of the plant and you will have a fine, bushy geranium. It should be needless to say that after you have cut away half of the stem and two-thirds of the leaves of these geraniums they need little water until the eyes break and new growth begins. We seldom have room to give the fall propagated zonale geraniums their final shift, a 4-inch, until after Easter. Fortunately for the geraniums, perhaps unfortunately for other important crops, Easter is very early this year, April 3. So that will give you an abundance of time to shift them after Easter and have them in good flower at the bedding out time, with us from May 20 till June 1.

Cyclamen.

I have received very recently a terrible specimen of a cyclamen. The leaves were not apparently diseased, but the flowers had all the ills that a cyclamen is heir to. This is no stranger around here and it has stricken several growers who are acknowledged careful, good gardeners. The plant may be and often is most vigorous during the summer and up to October, when the flowers begin to rise from the corm, and when they appear above the foliage and later make the abortive attempt to expand their lovely petals and beautiful shades of coloring, they have only the mottled shades of liver sausage and the form of flower that could be imagined after passing through a sickness of St. Vitus' dance and general debility.

It may not be out of place just here to say that two of our local florists had, in September last, as fine a lot of cyclamen plants as the writer has ever seen: a most vigorous leaf growth and very large plants, but not a perfect flower. I understand it is neither aphid, thrips or red spider, but a minute mite. I wish I could prescribe a remedy, but I cannot. Let us hear from someone who has overcome this pest.

We have escaped so far, and this leads me to say that as the little seedling plants are now, or soon will be in 2-inch pots, or transplanted from the seed pans into other pans or small flats, it is most desirable to surround them with tobacco stems, and renew the stems whenever they begin to decay. This is not enough, although a great help. Fumigation, either by burning stems or dust, or vaporizing nicotine, must be faithfully done. Perfectly light position, where they can get the benefit of ventilation, when possible, and a fine spraying on bright mornings, is the place for these little plants for the next two months, with about 55 degrees at night.

Salvia Splendens.

In answer to a correspondent, I have something to say about Salvia splendens. This brilliant, late summer and fall-flowering plant has been growing in favor at a rapid rate for the past few years. Where ten years ago we grew dozens, we now want hundreds.

I can recall a delightful ride a few years ago, through and about the lovely home of Germantown, Lansdowne and other suburbs of Philadelphia, and everywhere as a margin to shrubbery or a border beneath a veranda were masses of the scarlet sage. I can scarcely think of any flowering plant that would have settles spider, and greenfly in the house is one of the unpardonable sins. You may think this is a good deal of talk for so common a plant, but its growing popularity warrants it.

Lemon Verbena.

Lemon verbena is another favorite plant that is often difficult to procure if you have missed growing it. However modest may be the little garden, this sweet scented plant is sure to be one of those wanted. Plants that grew in 4-inch pots plunged outside last summer and which have been resting beneath the bench since November, should now be started up. Shake off the old soil and repot. Trim back the unripened ends of the shoots and put them into a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, with a daily spraying, and you will get all the cuttings you need. If kept daily watered in the sand they will root as easily as a chrysanthemum. The lemon verbena will make more growth in a mild hotbed in three or four weeks of April or May than it will in three months in the greenhouse.

Primula Obconica.

Primula obconica is likely to be a useful Easter plant this year, as Easter is so early. It took years for this beautiful plant to become widely popular. Pretty as the Chinese primulas are, obconica eclipses them in every way as a commercial plant. There is a note in last week's REVIEW regarding its poisonous properties, and a remedy where it does poison. The writer has always con-the same cheerful and seasonable effect. Have plenty of them. Shift and grow on the cuttings you have now struck and from them you will get plenty more.

There are some decided improvements over the old type. A rather dwarfer growth and early flowering are what is sought. St. Louis has these qualities and is a great improvement over the old type. Red spider and greenfly are the enemies of this very free growing plant. It delights in being syringed and that sidered the poisoning qualities of this plant as largely a ghost story, yet there must be something in it. On inquiry I find that of at least ten men and boys, only two have complained that their epidermis was irritated by it. One of our lady florists on Main street is so affected by it that she can't endure an obconica in her store, but then we have known ladies to have a dread of harmless creatures. We well remember a most amiable spinster of mature years who ran screaming into the house if she saw a butterfly in the garden.

This primula has been so marvelously improved that we now have from white through shades of lavender and blue to rosy pink, and "florets one and one-half inches in diameter and twelve to fourteen on a truss," is no exaggeration. So procure the best strain of seed that is to be bought and sow early in March. Sown early, they have time to make good stout plants before the dark days set in.

Boston Ferns.

There seems to be constant demand for Boston ferns of every size, and frequently for plants that have a spread of fronds four or five feet across. This sounds like a very large plant, but it really is not so very large, as you will discover if you measure a plant. When there is a graceful droop to the older fronds they are also much preferred. You may not have such plants, but you can manufacture a few dozen and have them ready for a later date. Few ferns or plants of any kind so well endure the disturbance of their roots as this nephrolepis, yet it is not quite right to make up a pot or pan of these ferns and sell it the same day, or the same week. Three good 5-inch pot plants put into a 9 or 10-inch azalea pot now and raised up so that the fronds can spread and droop, will make grand plants in two or three months. There is always something you can grow beneath these "pedestal" plants. Small plants of the same thing would be all right there.

A Few Brief Reminders.

Look out for the young growths on azaleas, which, if not kept pulled off, will take all the strength from the flower bud and it will perish.

Sow verbena seed now. They will be more healthy and vigorous than plants from cuttings and a bed of mixed verbenas is quite as pretty as one of all one color.

houses are in the vicinity of extensive limestone quarries, where the stone is ground up for some purposes as fine as coarse sand, has for the past two years used this material for propagating with the most unqualified success. It is absolutely clear of all earthy substances, which sand, either pit or lake shore, seldom is. He thinks it far superior for all kinds of cuttings to sand of any quality. He adds that directly after cuttings are rooted they should be potted off, for growth is very rapid in this limestone. This may be no news to some of your readers, but knowing that in some localities sand of any kind is difficult to procure and you may be next door to a limestone quarry, I thought I would mention the fact. This material can be bought of the firm by the carload.

Feeding Again.

As stated in my last notes, there are a few things in connection with feeding about which it may be well to add a few words. There are various mixtures which might be recommended as beneficial and profitable to use in the operation of feeding, but it is impossible, not knowing the nature and mechanical condition of the different soils in which carnations are grown, to give minute directions as to what is most suitable to use; however, it is hoped in these remarks that I may furnish food for thought.

In studying the behavior of different varieties in soil that is practically uniform in every quality, it will be noticed that while some give good returns others are behind in productiveness, size of bloom and general appearance of health, or perhaps there is a disposition to be grassy. This point I wish to bring to your direct attention as demanding intelligent thought when the matter of feeding is being considered, and I may received repeated applications of liquid food does not by any means justify a grower in saying his plants have not suffered from lack of nourishment. It may be true that plenty of nourishment was given but the vital question is, have the different fertilizing elements been supplied in proportion to maintain conditions conducive to the production of bloom in paying quantities? I might say in answer that the chances are too much of one certain element has been used, particularly at a time when something else should have been more in evidence.

To illustrate, let us suppose a variety to have given good returns up to this time but indications point to an off crop period ahead. If the plants are healthy and show plenty of shoots coming along for future development of bloom, one would naturally decide that nitrogen was most needed, but if the variety is naturally grassy you would be careful that it was not supplied in maximum doses or at frequent intervals. As the shoots advance and signs of stem appear, potash will be wanted. Later phosphorus is needed to properly develop the flower.

This is only one case, but every grower can learn the elements most in evidence in each manure or fertilizer and by observation during daily association with his plants, be reasonably sure of making a variation in the composition of his liquid manure to fit his particular case, remembering that stiff soils retain fertilizing elements much better than those of light texture.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Late Cuttings.

If you for some reason fail to take as many carnation cuttings out of the propagating bench as you need for next season's planting it is not too late to take good cuttings of most varieties, with a good chance of making good plants by housing time. In fact, many growers prefer cuttings taken between January 15 and February 15 and some varieties that naturally grow very rank and rather soft will do better when propagated a little late. Such varieties will take hold better if the plants are only medium in size. Norway is a good example. The first year we had fine large plants, but they suffered severely and it was late in winter before they were really what they should have been. At the carnation convention Messrs. H. Weber & Sons showed a vase of blooms that beat everything else in the 100 white class and Mr. Weber told me they were grown from March cuttings. There are not many of these varieties, however, and as a rule I favor the earlier cuttings if I can get them.

Every grower knows full well that he should plant out about twice as many plants as he wishes to house in the fall if he wants to fill his benches with good, healthy plants. That means at least twice as many cuttings as you want plants to house.

We are sometimes asked as to the advisability of using the propagating sand twice. If there is any sign of fungus you would better not risk using the sand again. Take it all out, wash the boards off and give a heavy coat of hot lime wash and use fresh sand. If the cuttings rooted well, with no sign of damping off, we take off about one-half to two-thirds of the sand and put that much fresh

House of John Murchie's New White Carnation, Fred Burki.

As the season advances the tulips and daffodils will want less heat and less shade to produce a good stem and better flower.

In a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees Azalea mollis and Pyrus japonica will want four weeks to be right for Easter. Lilacs and Prunus triloba about five weeks. Dutzia gracilis seven weeks.

Propagating Bench Material.

A neighbor of mine, C. E. Foss, whose include soil preparation, too, for although the term feeding is generally understood to mean the use of liquid manure, it must be admitted that growing plants require and are feeding constantly.

It is only by close observation that one can decide what a variety is most partial to and at what time the different fertilizing elements in the soil are likely to become lacking or out of proportion. The fact that the beds have sand on the top of the old. We never use it the third time, though.

The cuttings from now on will need closer watching than during the last two months. The sun is getting stronger and on bright days the houses get quite warm and wilting is more apt to follow. When the ventilators are up be careful of draughts.

PETER FISHER ON STEM-ROT.

[The following are the remarks of Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., before the New York Florists' Club, February 8.]

In looking up a subject for a short paper on the carnation, I thought nothing could be more appropriate at this season of the year than a discussion of extremely early propagation, as related to stem-rot, and its probable causes. And I offer a few suggestions as a means of preventing or minimizing the ravages of this, the deadliest of all carnation diseases.

During the last summer stem-rot has been most prevalent in the east, especially through Long Island, central New York and Pennsylvania. Many of the largest growers have lost their stock by the thousands, both in the field and after being planted indoors and the financial loss has been extremely heavy. That climatic conditions had much to do with this there is no doubt and with outdoor culture we, in future years, are just as liable to a recurrence of the disastrous results of the past season. This suggests to me the question, wherein lies the remedy?

During the past five years or so you have doubtless observed the growing tendency toward earlier propagation and planting. Six or eight years ago early August to September 20 was considered about the right time to bench carnations from the field. The method as adopted at present is July planting from the field, finishing as early as possible in August. In some cases indoor culture is almost exclusively adopted, usually benching in May and June, and where space is available I have known some cases where the plants were benching in February with splendid results.

I was much interested on looking over an old trade price list of Fred Dorner, that veteran carnationist, to whom we owe so much, to find him offering his novelties with distribution commencing April 1. Think of it! What do we find today? Nearly every buyer wants early January delivery. Some will gladly accept their cuttings in December and should orders remain unfilled until March 15 they are liable to cancellation.

The points I want to bring up are these. Is this increasing tendency towards extremely early propagation and planting for or against the best development and longevity of the carnation, and is there not in this a probable cause for so much stem-rot, especially where field culture is practiced?

Where the intention is to adopt indoor culture entirely, I believe in early propagation, potting off the cuttings in January or early February, commencing with 2 and 2½-inch pots and re-potting into 3, 3½ and 4-inch as the case requires, but never allowing the plants to get stunted or pot-bound. Such early stock ought to be benching not later than May and, if space permits, April would give better results, insuring strong root action before the extremely hot weather sets in. Cuttings taken a month later can be benching during May and June.

The New Adiantum Croweanum.

This method has many advantages over planting January stock in the field during April or early May and then lifting and benching it in July, because those early cuttings often get pot-bound and stunted before being planted out. The balls, being full of roots, become hard and should the weather be warm and dry for some weeks after planting they dry out and wilt and this condition, followed by heavy rains, is the first step toward a severe loss from stem-rot, as the plants are in no condition to absorb the surplus of moisture. A later batch of the same variety, that has not been pot-bound and abused before being planted out, will pull through often with little loss, while cuttings of the same sort potted off, say in April and set in the field, will often make better stock than either of the earlier lots, with little or no loss from stem-rot.

This proves to me that much of the trouble is caused from the stock being allowed to become stunted, pot-bound and abused before being planted out, and herein lies one of the greatest dangers in extremely early propagation. If you do not intend this stock for early planting, indoor culture, it is much safer to use a later lot of cuttings for planting out and benching during July or early August.

My experience has been that if a batch of cuttings once gets extremely dry and wilted, either in the sand or after being potted or put in flats, better throw them away. They never recover from the check and are sure to be a source of trouble and disappointment later. Avoid extremes. I believe, for field culture, February and March cuttings preferable to December or January stock and if you cannot house your stock before August, cuttings taken from sand early in April will give grand results. Of course this refers to good, free-growing sorts. Some that develop more slowly need earlier propagation and planting.

The one great drawback to indoor culture with the average florist is that he cannot afford to throw out plants that are giving abundance of bloom at a minimum cost of production during the early summer months. Yet I believe the time is not far distant when, with properly constructed houses, the carnation, like the chrysanthemum, will be grown indoors exclusively. There is too much risk attached to planting out in the field, new and valuable stock to be at the mercy of our variable climate. The experiences of the past will only tend to spur us on to devise means by which we shall yet overcome the difficulties and uncertainties of our present mode of culture.

I believe, for all indoor culture, in wide carnation houses, running north and south, even span, thirty-three feet wide, with five benches, each four feet wide. This admits of a better circulation of air than can be obtained on a 5-foot bench. Height of side walls five feet, three feet being glass; ridge fifteen feet high, with continuous top ventilation on each side, thirty inches in width, also side ventilators to be used judiciously. You will find a house running north and south much cooler and better during the hot summer months than one running east and west and, all things taken into consideration the loss from this aspect during winter is scarcely noticeable in a large, light structure.

NOT FEASIBLE.

Will carnations planted in solid beds three inches each way the first of April and replanted ten inches each way early in July, do as well as if they were planted ten inches each way in the first place?

C. W.

I would say decidedly, no. I would not think of planting carnations on a bench and lifting them in July. I would far rather plant them in the field until that time, but if you want to grow them indoors all summer I would advise you to keep them in pots and shift as they need it until you can clear the benches or beds for them. You would find that when planted on the bed the plants would make a strong, soft growth and would suffer severely if transplanted in the heat of summer. When grown in pots they grow harder, and for this reason and the fact that the roots need not be torn in transplanting they take hold more readily and suffer less when planted from pots.

The best way of all, if you can get the room, is to plant in April or early May right where the plants are to remain the next winter. This does away with that midsummer transplanting which is always a trying ordeal for the plants, but it cannot always be done except in newly built houses, as very few growers are willing to throw out their blooming plants by May 1. WE AND OUR FIELD.*

BY WILLIAM J. STEWART, of Boston, Mass.
Secretary Society of American Florists.

Our Right by Usage.

A transposition in the title of this dissertation might betoken a commendable modesty. The typical gardener or florist has, however, always been a somewhat aggressive and self-complacent individual. Like the Ayrshire farmer and his wife, one is "Aye richt" and the other "Never wrang." Even before that memorable uprising which resulted in the establishment of our powerful national society—when our interests in all horticultural activities were usually subordinated to those of the farmer and the fruit nurseryman—even then the shibboleth of the craft was "Wha's like us?" "Naeboddy!" And the less a man knew the more emphatic, oftentimes, his declaration. I once read of an encounter on the Delaware between a magnificent steamer and a grimy coal lighter.

Officer—"Clear out of the way with that barge."

Lighterman—"Are ye the captain av that vessel?"

Officer—"No."

Lighterman—"Then spake to yer equals; I'm the captain of this."

The gorgeous self-sufficiency of some of our oldtime champions overshadows that lighterman's inflation as completely as Philadelphia's bowling record eclipses that of some of her chesty rivals, and since the race is yet far from extinct we shall, in conformity to usage, talk first of ourselves, and then of our field and how we may cultivate it.

Basis for Our Pretensions.

That we have some basis for our pretensions, the vastly enhanced prominence which our art and its literature (not to mention our sporting prowess) have attained during the last two decades, stands in evidence. The deduction that we are destined to become of yet greater consequence will doubtless pass undisputed, but mere theoretical conclusions have little value and these boasts of future ascendancy which we have a habit of making are often little more than hollow generalities in support of which, if pressed for a specific forecast, we might find it difficult to put up a convincing argument.

Recognizing in ourselves the connecting link between the past which we know and the future which we know not, it is healthy to ask ourselves often how well we are filling the places of the sturdy pioneers whose heritage we enjoy, and to make it our constant aim to so shape our course that posterity shall see in us a pattern to imitate and not an example to deter. If we are to prove worthy successors of a distinguished ancestry, the masterly proficiency of Harris, the sagacity of Henderson, the noble simplicity of Cartledge, the intensity of Menand, the tenacity of Wood, and the sunny kindness of Halliday must find their counterpart in the leaders of today, and we should strive that nothing be lost, either in amplitude or potentiality, of the eminent qualities so well exemplified in the character and lives of these honored men.

A Pause to Reverence.

Our reverence for old age should, however, cease at the door of the rose cellar and, while we should emulate the example and recognize the genius of the old masters, there are problems arising daily, as new elements intrude themselves within our sphere, which bring us to a realization that while the principles actuating them were of the sterling kind, success today may demand a somewhat different application of them. We have with us now the Greek who cares not whether plants are fed on water or on carbohic acid, but who, after six months in our country, knows the cut flower market better than do many of our craftsmen who have spent a lifetime in the business, and, on the other hand, we find the man who can grow violets or carnations of a quality hitherto undreamt of, but who, somehow, cannot understand why blooms with whiskers on them can't be sold at Christmas for three times what they were worth three weeks earlier, before their whiskers started out.

Where shall we strike the balance between the dear soul who loves his profession more than its emoluments, who can say in all truth—

Thou source of all my bliss and all my woe,
Thou foundst me poor at first and keepst me so, and the latter-day flower-factory man in whose transactions sentiment has no place, to whom a blossom is handsome only when going out of the door on the order of a cash customer and who would not hesitate to accelerate with a brisk movement of his boot the exit of any flower, however beautiful in itself, the moment it should transpire that there was no pecuniary profit in it?

"Birds of a Feather."

I am persuaded that a goodly portion of the comfort and joy of a horticulturist's existence comes from his gregarious instincts. One of the most forlorn creatures in the world is the gardener so isolated that he is prevented from associating with his fellow gardeners, and almost pathetic is the keen delight evinced by one long shut out, when circumstances bring him in contact with old friends in the profession, "drinking it all in and life never seemed so full before." Study this marked characteristic of the craft and you will discover that the most contented as well as most progressive florists are usually found in those communities where ample facilities are afforded for flocking together. Thus the cohesive influence of our fraternal institutions is a boon which we should, in this era of specialization, prize most highly. Its value as an offset to the disintegrating forces now at work can hardly be overestimated. It begins to dawn upon us that the S. A. F., with its stimulus to the fraternal sentiments, came upon the scene at a most opportune time, and we applaud the rare discernment shown by her Philadelphia offspring in respect to providing abundant inducement for comradeship which has its timely reward in the unparalleled prosperity which this club enjoys, and is sure to continue to enjoy, at least so long as John Westcott's buffet keeps on/doing business.

Our Field.

It is a big field and a fertile one, as wide as vegetation extends, as broad as human sympathy, as deep as roots can penetrate the earth or love the heart, as lofty as the tallest trees can grow or noble sentiment aspire, a field in which to cultivate the intellectual faculties as well as material vegetation. Ours a calling more ancient and honorable than any other pursued by mankind, whose mission it is to soften the asperities of life, to develop the best in humanity and clothe the world in beauty, whose adherents are fellow-workers with nature herself. "God the first garden made; the first city, Cain."

Are we occupying this fair field to fullest advantage? To do so we must be wideawake to its broader possibilities and take care that narrow vision and trivial controversies are not permitted to limit and monopolize our attention. The great expansion of our business and the influx of capital in certain branches have brought about changed conditions and evolved new problems. How shall we meet them? How successfully elude perils that seem to threaten and which especially concern those working hitherto on a small scale and subject to that most uncomfortable disease, lack of money? Our development has been so many-sided and on such varied lines that our aggregate interests, at first simple and closely akin, now rapidly grow complex and diverse. Thus disintegrating forces lead us into divergent paths, the circles widening as our diversified branches multiply. We see the situation through dissimilar eyes, until

'Tis with our judgments as our watches—none Go just alike, yet each believes his own.

Admitting that no two of us are likely to quite agree in what direction the greatest measure of well-being presents itself, it seems to me that those who have cultivated broad habits of vision, who have perceived their business not so much in its essence as through its effects, will agree that the time has gone forever when things can be successfully run as the foolhardy skipper sailed his schooner, "By luck, by God and the moonlight," and that insight, economy and foresight are three cardinal virtues to be henceforth zealously cultivated by the florist, whatever his particular line may be.

The Christmas Story.

Without trespassing too far in the direction of special questions, which I have purposely avoided in this paper, let us for a moment turn to that most vital problem of the cut flower industry, the distribution of the produce. At the recent holiday time we learned from sundry suburban and country papers that the scarcity of flowers for Christmas was unprecedented. "On Christmas eve there was not a rose or carnation of any kind to be purchased in the city," was a sort of stock item all along the line. Why is it that we find florists reporting a holiday famine in towns within an hour's ride of New York city, while growers' cellars and wholesalers' refrigerators are bulging with unsold stock and, perchance, the curbstone stands in the city heaping with flowers of varying ages at a few cents a bunch?

In reply to that question we shall avail ourselves of the Yankee's birth-right and answer by asking another: "Why a higher price on flowers at Christmas?"

If Jostled, Move Up.

I take it that, in a profession so comprehensive in scope, no necessity exists for long-continued overproduction on any special line. If fortune be unstable our will is free. When you find yourself overcrowded and jostled in your specialty, just watch your opportunity and move up. There is always room at the top. No place is so well conducted that some material increase in efficiency is impossible; no plant or flower now popular is so universally well grown that somebody cannot do it still better. The list of good subjects as yet in obscurity, that may be made popular, is practically unlimited and there is abundant latitude for talent and industry in the establishment of improved strains of scores of things that have thus far scarcely been touched.

As wealth and refinement increase, the demand for conservatories grows apace; well grown stock for the filling of such places, in the hands of a well managed concern, is as good as government bonds. So rapidly has this fever for beautiful home grounds and gardens spread in this country that the call for choice planting material far exceeds the stock available here and even foreign sources are being rapidly denuded. Only a few days ago a friend, desirous of constructing a rose garden, complained to me of inability to procure the stock he required. Choice lilacs on their own roots, well grown conifers in reliably hardy varieties, nursery-grown kalmias, and similar things are wanted. Where are they? Where can the stock for one substantial plantation of hardy rhododendrons, or for a house of foreign grapes, or good plants of the finer peonies, in a business way, be found?

The Need of Brains.

Every sign points to a glorious opening for the immediate future for the intelligent gardener with high aspirations and a determination to excel. There is scarcely a line, no matter how unpromising it looks, that will not respond in a profitable way when you put brains into it. While it is true that the worst bowler on the alley may sometimes make the first ten-strike in the game, and that the chance hybridizer may turn up a carnation or a chrysanthemum that will sweep the field, yet it is a safe proposition always that in the long run the expert will distance the common throng. The young man who takes up horticulture as a calling today, if endowed with common sense and zeal, will not be content to settle into any branch, however lucrative for the moment, which offers the novice an even chance to locate at his elbow and become a dangerous rival. Think you that Peter Fisher lies awake nights fretting over the possibility of somebody showing up to skim the cream off his carnation milk? Tom Roland can sell ten times as many Lorraine begonias as he can produce, year after year. M. H. Walsh hasn't seen rose hybridization run into the ground just yet, and Tom Butterworth will be a centenarian before he sees a flower-factory able to compete in his specialty of orchid growing. Numerous similar illustrations of my point might be cited and will no doubt come to the minds of all.

BALTIMORE FLORISTS SAFE.

On Sunday and Monday, February 7 and 8, the city of Baltimore was visited by the most disastrous conflagration which has visited any city of the world since the great Chicago fire. Two square miles of the city were destroyed, entailing a loss of $125,000,000. The territory burned was principally the wholesale district and a telegram from W. B. Sands, dated February 10, says, "No florist even damaged."

CALANTHES.

We are always much interested in Mr. Scott's "Seasonable Hints," which are ever practical and helpful, just what the busy gardener and florist needs. We read with special interest his orchid notes in the last issue of January. In speaking of calanthes, Mr. Scott makes some statements which would lead us to suppose that his method of culture for these beautiful and popular winter blooming orchids is decidedly out of the common. His remarks refer, we presume, to Calanthe Veitchii, for he states this to be the most popular species.

Mr. Scott says: "They are, or soon will be, out of flower. When started the latter part of September or October they begin to make the growth, which will form the bulb for another year." Does Mr. Scott make a habit of starting his calanthes as late as September and still get flowers for Christmas? We read further, "after the flower is cut, growth must be encouraged and continued until the bulb is fully developed, which may be the middle of April." May we ask Mr. Scott what growth is to be encouraged, seeing that Calanthe Veitchii is deciduous at its flowering season and that the bulbs are also fully matured? What good object is to be attained by giving liquid manure "from now on for the next few months" to flowerless and leafless bulbs?

We would like Mr. Scott to more fully describe the culture of calanthes. We have always found it necessary to start them about the end of March in flats and pot as soon as growths were about two inches long. We have found, in addition, that it took some seven or eight months to flower our bulbs, for we rarely have any open before Thanksgiving and still have some spikes to cut. Now, if Mr. Scott can assure us that by giving liquid manure for a few months longer and then resting our bulbs "in any warm corner until September and kept absolutely dry" we may still achieve good results, what a saving in time and worry can be made.

New discoveries of startling moment are being frequently made in this strenuous age. Having taught us how to grow and flower calanthes in three months, cannot you wave the wizard's wand, Brother Scott, and induce the fractious cattleyas, lœlias, odontoglossums, phalænopsis, and kindred spirits to yield to your magic touch? The orchid cultivators will then place you on a far higher pinnacle of fame than the discoverers of wireless telegraphy and radium.

W. N. CRAIG.

ROSES.Feeding.

The soil in the benches being limited in quantity and the plants having been giving crops during the winter, the heavy growth must have extracted from the soil the main constituent parts which go to form the plant and left it more or less exhausted and in no condition to supply the elements necessary to a good spring growth, which will shortly commence.

As we cannot renew the soil at this season we must have recourse to some other method of supplying the plants with the necessary food and in such proportions as the needs of the plants demand. And in order that the plants may derive the full benefit of this new supply it should be presented to them in a form which is easily assimilated, at the proper season and in suitable quantities.

These foods, to be easily and quickly assimilated, must be reduced to a state of fluidity, or in the form of gas or air. The main object, therefore, to be attained should be to afford as much soluble matter to the roots of the plants as possible, and in a slow and gradual manner, so that it may be entirely consumed in forming the soft and organic parts, leaving no residue to sour the rest of the soil.

This can be accomplished by using decomposed cow manure, which contains the essential elements in nearly the right proportions, and can be applied either in the form of a mulch, which the necessary waterings will convert into the fluid form, or by applying direct as a liquid.

If applied as a mulch in a pure state it is apt to dry during the bright sunshine and this makes it so light that subsequent waterings serve to displace it. Mixing it with one-third of its bulk of good fresh loam gives it more solidity. The whole should be rather finely pulverized, as it is more usable in that form than if laid on in big chunks. A sprinkling of bone flour added to this compost is also beneficial.

This mulch also serves a double purpose by protecting the feeding roots, which approach the surface, and keeping them from sudden variations of temperature. It also prevents the soil from cracking when warm weather sets in.

Liquid manure, being ready for immediate absorption, is most effectually employed when the roots are in an active state and in want of a stimulant to assist in the development of a crop. The best stage to begin with this is when the young growths are from four to six inches in length and it can be applied once a week till the buds show color.

Wood ashes being usually rich in potash, is also a very desirable manure, giving wiriness to the stem and adding brilliancy to the coloring of the petals, but being of a strong nature requires caution in its use. It is always safer to use these concentrated foods in small quantities, even though it must be done more frequently.

Liquor of ammonia has also a very beneficial effect as a stimulant, but should not be used frequently, as it has a very softening effect on the foliage. Its strength should never exceed one ounce to four gallons of water.

For soils deficient in lime a little should be used occasionally, but we should be quite certain that it is needed before applying it, as an excess is often very injurious.

RIBES.

TROUBLE WITH YOUNG STOCK.

We are having trouble to keep our young roses growing. They have fine roots and start nicely. The roots turn brown. We have them on the north bench in a rose house. The temperature has been as low as 52 degrees. There are two pipes under the bench and the pots are plunged in coal ashes.

M. B. L.

Even though the temperature does get down occasionally as low as 52 degrees, this would not account for the failure. If the cuttings are well rooted and not allowed to stand in the sand to become too large and over-ripe, and potted into 2-inch standards, they ought to do well. Potting in soil containing too much manure or other fertilizer would have the effect of sickening and rotting the roots. Young rose stock does not require plunging; in fact, they rarely do well if treated in this way. Smooth down the ashes and place the pots on top, water carefully and shade during very bright sunshine for the first five days after potting, and while they may not grow quite so rapidly at 52 as they would at 56 degrees, they will, all other conditions being right, certainly retain their health and start into growth as the weather gets warmer.

RIBES.

TROUBLE WITH VIOLETS.

Under separate cover we send two violet plants, can you tell us what is the matter with them? About half of one of our houses has gone like this since Christmas. The plants are growing in solid beds twenty-four inches from the ground, with good drainage. Note the color of the tips of the buds; they look as though they had been burned with smoke, but we have not fumigated in six weeks. We give them 42 to 45 degrees at night and 55 to 58 degrees in day time with air on. Will they grow out of it by Easter?

A. B. C.

Unfortunately, I was away from home when the plants came to hand, making it hard to determine just what is their trouble, but in our experience there are several things conducive to the condition described. Are you certain that the temperatures mentioned have been maintained all the time, or have there been one or two occasions that the house has been overlooked and the temperature allowed to run up and then the ventilators thrown open wide, with a consequent very sudden lowering of the temperature, and a strong draught of very cold air falling directly on the plants affected? And, again, while the beds are raised twenty-four inches, this does not always insure good drainage, even though it would naturally seem as if it should, for I have known beds as high as three feet, in a sandy soil and only about two and one-half feet wide, where they caught some drip, to become so soggy that this, coupled with heavy airing, would cause the plants to look as described. Then, again, A. B. C. says they have not fumigated in six weeks, but he does not say how soon the buds looked like this after fumigating. The injury is not always apparent at once.

Still another thing will cause plants to look forlorn and the buds white at the tips and spotted, and that is black aphid. Of course, I take it that A. B. C. knows if he has this pest in the house, and, if so, my advice would be to pull and burn the plants at this time of the year and put in some spring crop, as they would never recover, even with severe measures, to be at all profitable for Easter; in fact, unless they pick up very soon I should consider this the better way, whatever the trouble, as a plant that is out of health as late in the season as this is a very questionable article for profit, and especially so in violet plants, as they do not as readily respond to doctoring as do some other plants.

THE CARNATION SCHEDULE.

The program and schedule has been issued for the thirteenth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, to be held at Harmonia hall, Wilcox and Center streets, Detroit, March 2 to 4.

The program includes papers on "The Management of Exhibitions," by W. N. Rudd, of Mount Greenwood, Ill.; "The Exhibition of Carnations on Lines Similar to Those of the Chrysanthemum Society," by Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, and "The Maintenance of Health and Vigor in Carnations," by Robert Craig, of Philadelphia. Discussions will be opened: On Mr. Rudd's paper, by Adam Graham and J. F. Sullivan; on Mr. Scott's paper, by H. M. Altick, J. C. Rennison and F. H. Beard; on Mr. Craig's paper, by E. G. Hill, Geo. S. Osborn and George Bayer.

There are premiums of $10 and $6 for 100 blooms of the several colors, $5 and $3 for vases of fifty blooms, open to all varieties disseminated prior to July 1, 1903; $3 and $1.50 for twenty-five blooms, open to all varieties disseminated prior to July 1, 1902. In each of these classes the color divisions are as follows: White, Daybreak shade of pink, Lawson shade of pink, Scott shade of pink, scarlet, crimson, yellow variegated, white variegated and "any other color."

John Breitmeyer's Sons offer $50 and $30 for the best collection of carnations, not less than ten or more than fifteen varieties and not less than fifty nor more than 100 blooms to a vase. The W. J. & M. S. Vesey premiums of $25 and $10 are offered for collections of not less than six or more than ten varieties, not less than fifty or more than seventy-five blooms to a vase, open to all growers with no more than 25,000 feet of glass in carnations. The Sullivan-Rackham premiums of $25 and $15 are offered for collections of not less than five or more than eight varieties, not less than twenty-five blooms or more than fifty of each variety, open to all growers with no more than 15,000 feet of glass in carnations.

A silver cup is offered for the best exhibit of 200 blooms one variety, open to all. Premiums of $10 and $5 are offered for collections of single blooms, not less than twenty-five varieties to be shown. The Lord & Burnham premiums of $30 and $20 are offered for the best collections of commercial varieties introduced prior to 1903, not more than ten varieties and fifty blooms of each to be shown.

A silver cup will be given to the best vase of 100 blooms of Enchantress, the introducers not to compete. The Chicago

Carnation Co. offers $15 for the best vase of 100 Higginbotham and $10 for the best fifty blooms, donors' exhibit not to be judged for these premiums. J. A. Valentine offers $25 for the best undis-seminated seedling, all varieties excluded which are shown in classes requiring more than twelve blooms.

The Foley Mfg. Co. offers three silver cups, for the best vase of Michigan seedlings, for the best vase of 100 yellow, and for the best vase of 150 blooms, not less than three or more than five varieties arranged for effect.

The Lawson gold medal goes to the best 100 blooms, any variety; the Lawson silver medal goes to the second best vase, and the Lawson bronze medal to the third best vase.

The S. A. F. silver medal will be given to the best vase of fifty blooms of an undis-seminated variety, and the S. A. F. bronze medal to the second best vase.

A sweepstake premium of $15 is offered for the best vase in the class for 100 blooms and $10 for the best vase in the class for fifty blooms. The society's certificate of merit will be awarded meritorious seedlings.

J. F. Sullivan is superintendent of the exhibition.

THE CARNATION SOCIETY.

Davis Bros., Bloomsburg, Pa., registers Mary Albert, color pure white, stem twenty-four to thirty-six inches long, stiff and wiry; early and continuous bloomer; does not burst at any time of the year; blooms measure from two and one-half to three inches; an extra good keeper; cross Crane by Flora Hill and it might be termed an improved Flora Hill.

Rates to Detroit.

Everyone interested in carnations should attend the Detroit meeting of the American Carnation Society. The rate of one and one-third fares has been secured from the Trunk Line Association, and the Central Passenger Association, these two associations covering the greater part of the territory from which attendance will be forthcoming for this meeting.

Everyone who has something to exhibit and is not a member of the society can get a premium list giving full particulars by applying to the Secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa. The premium list has been sent to each member of the society and anyone not getting theirs should apply at once for a second copy.

ALBERT M. HERR, Secretary.

PROPAGATING THE DAHLIA.

A correspondent raises the question of the propagation of dahlias, asking if dahlia roots produced from cuttings are equal to those produced from a division of the roots? We believe the former is the method practiced in most commercial establishments. Possibly some reader would like to express his opinion on the merits of the two methods?

BUTTE, MONT.—The Montana Florists' Club held its semi-annual meeting January 15, electing the following officers: President, Elmer Law; vice-president, Edward Willoughby; secretary, Sylvester Hansen; treasurer, V. Siegel. The club has now been in existence about a year and the membership is steadily increasing.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market has held remarkably steady for a week, with a tendency to improvement. This encouraging condition may be fairly depended upon until Lent begins, and anyway Lent is gradually ceasing to be a factor in determining the value of flowers and there is no good reason why business should not be as good as it is at present until after Easter, which it would be wise to bear in mind is only seven weeks away.

The past week was crowded with dinners and receptions and the charity ball and the Arion used great quantities of cut flowers. Business with some of the Broadway florists on these occasions lasted well into the early morning. The funeral of William C. Whitney was an occasion for floral tributes, the quantity and like of which have seldom been equaled. Over twenty wagon loads of the choicest flowers were used at this funeral and nearly every first class florist had his share of the work. The church was decorated with immense palms, by the Rosery Company, and the floral tributes from all sources were also arranged in the chancel. The pall of valley and violets was the work of Arthur Merritt. An enormous wreath of white orchids and an immense cross of violets were the most striking and beautiful of the set pieces. The demand for orchids of all kinds was enormous and the market was depleted.

Special Beauties held steadily all the week at 50 cents and occasionally a few of the finest Maids and Brides touched 20 cents, although 15 cents was top price with the majority. The best Liberties sold at 40 cents to 50 cents and some superb stock of this variety is in the market. Violets failed, even in special lots, to go above the dollar mark; 50 to 75 cents is the prevailing price for the best stock and thousands of flowers cannot command over 25 cents per 100. Carnations barely hold their own at last week's quotations. The exhibit at the club may awaken greater interest and possibly boom the specialties, some grand stock of which is seen. Bulbous stock is very abundant. Valley goes slowly at reduced prices. Lilies seem to be more in demand and good values prevail.

Club Meeting.

Carnation night at the New York Florists' Club brought an attendance of over 200, including about fifty ladies. The attendance of visitors from a distance was especially encouraging. Rose night, a month hence, will find the rooms too small for the attendance, judging by the grand success of Monday evening. Patrick Welch, of Boston; T. J. Johnston and wife, of Providence; Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass.; M. A. Patten, of Tewksbury, Mass.; E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa.; Peter Duff, of Orange, and E. W. Newbrand, of Tarrytown, were among the visitors. A lunch was served to the ladies, the canteen was well patronized and there was enough and to spare for all. The vaudeville entertainment was good and every lady was handsomely decorated by the liberal exhibitors when the general distribution of the exhibits was made at the close of the entertainment.

Over 2,000 flowers were staged. The Cottage Gardens had over 100 varieties, all Mr. Ward's own seedlings, except Prosperity and Enchantress. No. 144, a white seedling shown by Dailedouze Bros., to be sent out in 1906, received special commendation. Scott's nephrolepis, in 7, 8 and 14-inch pots, were grand specimens of the new fern and attracted much attention, as did also six splendid pots of Adiantum Farleyense from A. N. Pierson. The exhibits from Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, and the Thompson Company were unfortunately frozen in transit.

The carnation exhibits included Adonis and Vesper, from Craig & Son; Helen Reid, from William Didden, Philadelphia; Mrs. Patten, from Patten & Co., Tewksbury; a red seedling from C. J. Thorp, of Bedford Station; Albatross and Flamingo, from L. E. Marquisee; Gov. Odell, from A. & L. Pathey, Bay Shore; Amaze and some seedlings from J. A. Suydam; J. E. Haines, Star of Bethlehem, Juno and No. 77, from J. E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa.; Gomez, Lawson and some seedlings from John Reimels, Woodhaven; Alpine Glow, Octoroon, Ethel Ward, Enchantress, No. 303, Sensation, No. 622, Judge Hinsdale, Mackinac, Prosperity, White Roosevelt, Mrs. J. A. Thayer and a large collection of seedlings from the Cottage Gardens; the Cardinal from R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati; a white seedling from L. E. Small, Tewksbury; Nelson Fisher and Mrs. Patten, from Peter Fisher; Yorkston, from J. E. Krayner, Villa Nova, Pa.; Mrs. Patten, from M. A. Patten; Bride, from J. N. May; No. 144, from Dailedouze Bros.; Daheim, Adonis, White Lawson and Enchantress, from F. R. Pierson Company, Tarrytown. There were freesias from J. A. Shellem and Rudolph Fisher, ferns from A. N. Pierson and John Scott.

Peter Fisher's paper on stem-rot, the deadliest of all carnation diseases, was of great interest and held the attention of all. Mr. Fisher paid his respects to Messrs. Ward, Craig and Scott and introduced his subject in his usual happy vein. He was followed by Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, in one of his delightful addresses. He complimented the club on the attractive display and the value of the exhibition. It was one of his most polished efforts and stamps him as the Demosthenes of the profession. Mr. Ward followed in a practical address of much value and interest, with interesting criticisms and elaboration on the subject of Mr. Fisher's paper. Mr. Dailedouze, Mr. Haines, Mr. Patten, C. H. Allen, Harry May and Mr. O'Mara followed in brief addresses.

The report of the advisory committee indicated the decision to confine exhibitions for 1904 to the rooms of the club. Walter Sheridan, for the dinner committee, reported every arrangement made for the annual festivity at the St. Denis February 20, at 7:30, and a large number of tickets already sold for the occasion. All the best features of former dinners may be depended on. Mr. Haffner reported, for the bowling committee, a warm invitation for all florists to participate in the annual prize contest next Monday evening. The outing committee has secured the grove and boat for the annual outing June 29. The committee of awards reported a visit to the Cottage Gardens to see the seedling No. 303 and recommended the awarding of the club's certificate of merit. Six new members were elected and one proposed. Letters of resignation from Julius Roehrs, J. H. Troy and Rudolph Asmus were read and accepted with regret.

Deaths in the Trade.

Joseph Magill, treasurer of the A. T. De La Mare Printing and Publishing Company, whose death from pneumonia on Friday was universally regretted, was buried on Sunday, February 7, from the Presbyterian church, Jersey City, N. J., many of his associates and friends in the trade attending. Mr. Magill was a gentleman of rare optimism and possessed of a sunny, cheerful nature that endeared him to all whose privilege it was to know him intimately. No higher tribute to his sterling worth can be given than that of his business associates of the Florists' Exchange, who knew him best.

One of the oldest of the eastern florists, William Burgess, died Sunday, January 31, at the ripe age of 82. He was an especial friend of Samuel Henshaw, who attended the funeral and to whom we are indebted for particulars of his career. His daughter has continued the business since his retirement and has a handsome store on Bedford avenue, Brooklyn. His father was the originator of the Beeswing dahlia, in 1844, and he himself was the introducer of the Marechal Neil rose in this country. He has been a resident of Glencove for thirty years, where he conducted an extensive florists' establishment, his reputation as a grower, especially of roses and dahlias being widely known. His later years were spent in connection with the Brooklyn park department. A widow and nine children survive him.

Jas. Northcote, the well-known landscape artist, died at his residence in Brooklyn, on Friday last. A widow, two sons and a daughter survive him. Mr. Northcote was born in England in 1822 and has lived in this country since 1858.

Jackson Reid, of Brooklyn, for many years a faithful employe of Siebrecht & Wadley, and later of Siebrecht & Son, died last week of pneumonia. He was a brother-in-law of Henry Siebrecht, Sr., and a man of rare faithfulness and integrity.

Various Notes.

It is rumored that one of the old established firms on Fifth avenue will shortly dissolve partnership.

The new Park Commissioner Pallas reduced the salaries of 300 employes of the park department last week.

Alex. Guttman is rapidly developing an out-of-town shipping trade that makes his headquarters a lively center daily. A splendid stock of sweet peas, Meteors, Maids, Enchantress, Lawson and Prosperity attracted special attention last week.

Saturday evening Wm. H. Gunther celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of his wedding with a banquet to his friends and a theater party at Daly's.

Bowe reports a fine trade and has added to his force the well-known floral artist, Peter V. Downing, formerly of Thorley's and The Rosery.

The partnership between Geo. E. Bradshaw and John R. Hartman has been dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Bradshaw continues the business at the old stand and assumes all liabilities. He expects to merit the continued support of all his old friends and customers of the past thirteen years.

H. H. Berger & Company attribute the early shipments from Japan to that nations knowledge of the fact that war was inevitable.

Mr. Dacre, of the disbanded Kurzman,

Dacre Co., has nearly recovered from his severe illness. The report of his dangerous condition was unwarranted.

Victor Dorval, of Woodside, has purchased property at Manhasset, L. I., and will erect greenhouses there shortly.

Mr. Hanft, of Thos. Young, Jr.'s Sixth avenue store, has the trade's sympathy in the loss of his mother, who died on Monday, February 1.

Bowling.

The following are the scores made by the bowlers on Monday afternoon:

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There is great activity in this, the last week of the social season. Flowers are not very plentiful and yet there are enough of most varieties to answer all purposes. Beauties with long stems are scarce and in active demand. Myers & Samtman are producing more of these at present than any other growers. Beauties with medium stems are still scarcer, but shorts are plentiful. The supply of Liberty is excellent and fills the place of the medium grade of Beauty nicely. Carnations are a little scarcer, but equal to the demand. Many choice Lawsons and some Prosperity and Enchantress may be seen. Single and double daffodils, tulips in variety and freesias are very fine; they are sold in large numbers at moderate prices. Violets are going better; valley is splendid. Sweet peas seem to be a little over done; they are more popular toward Easter. Orchids are hard to obtain. Lilacs are more abundant. W. K. Harris is sending some splendid sprays to the Flower Market. Gardenias are coming in quite freely; the problem certainly appears to be solved as to producing them in winter.

Death of C. A. Dunn.

Clarence A. Dunn, head of the wholesale commission house that bears his name, died Wednesday morning of pneumonia after a short illness.

Germantown Horticultural Society.

The February meeting was held in Association hall last Monday evening. Albert Woltemate gave some ideas on the culture of orchids. George Redles read an interesting paper on mignonette. The society is in a flourishing condition, with an active membership of about seventy. This is largely due to the work of Secretary Redles, who has developed the interest for horticulture among the amateurs and gardeners of Germantown by his interest in the efforts of each one and by his splendid talks on every branch of floral life. Not since the days of Thomas Meehan has there been such a series of interesting talks.

Answers to Correspondents.

REVIEW readers are invited to send any questions relating to the culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

1.—What varieties of fancy carnations have been most in demand this season? Lawson and Enchantress. Prosperity sells well but seems rather a shy bloomer.

2.—Who presided at the Institute meeting at Horticultural Hall, January 19? David Rust in the absence of Edwin Lonsdale, who was confined to the house with a cold. A local paper published a picture of a fierce looking gentleman wielding the gavel, with the name, E. Lonsdale, underneath. The fierceness and the name were creatures of reportorial fancy.

3.—Why was G. C. Watson asked to speak on holiday trade before the Chicago Florists' Club? Mr. Watson is one of our ablest speakers; he is well-read, interested in all branches of horticulture, and combines an excellent delivery with a happy faculty of clearly expressing his ideas. It is probable that an exponent of the possibilities of plant development was also desired.

4.—I carry my flowers from store to store, but sometimes have to sell out to the fakirs. Would the Flower Market benefit me? You would get office, telephone and delivery privileges at less than you could secure them for by yourself, besides selling privileges.

5.—Please recommend a good commission man in your city to me. All the Philadelphia commission men who advertise in the REVIEW are reliable.

Notes.

J. F. Krayner, Villa Nova, Pa., exhibited a handsome carnation of Daybreak shade, Lawson blood, before the Florists' Club last week. John A. Shellem also staged a vase of his fine freesias.

Johnson & Stokes report seed business opening auspiciously. The shortage in beans is more serious than at first anticipated; not only wax, but green beans are affected and the prices are advancing sharply.

Berger Bros. are receiving some good shipments of roses, violets, etc.; they feel encouraged by the outlook.

Adolph Farenwald will tell his fellow members of the Florists' Club something about the Liberty rose at the March meeting. He is cutting a great many special blooms from his two-year-old plants, borne on stout stems four to five feet long. This grade is a decided novelty, demanding a high premium in the New York market.

Walter P. Stokes has improved his lily of the valley until it has reached at present a high standard of perfection due to careful selection and skillful culture. He now devotes one of his houses at Moorestown especially to forcing valley pips, securing long stems and perfect bells evenly developed. Spring flowering plants are making their appearance in the shop windows. Azaleas have been reinforced by primroses, cinerarias, as well as daffodils and tulips.

Philadelphia sympathizes deeply with Baltimore in her severe loss by conflagration.

WE like the REVIEW better than ever and would not want to do without it—WM. DYER, Three Rivers, Mich.

CHICAGO.The Market.

The market has been more active this week than for some time past, the demand, however, being almost entirely from out of town. City trade improves very slowly, if at all, but the southern buyers have been calling for large quantities of stock this week and have kept the wholesale houses completely cleaned out on shipping roses. Receipts in this department are very light, indeed, there being very few good Beauties and not enough Brides or Maids to meet the requirements. Red roses have been very scarce and what few Liberties have been available have brought close to Beauty prices. Meteor is almost an unknown quantity, although now and then a pot of this variety is seen. Several of the commission men agree on the proposition that the carnation growers are not cutting to within twenty or twenty-five per cent as many flowers from a given space as they were at this time last year, but the receipts are ample to the requirements. In general the stock grades very high and prices are low by comparison. As a matter of fact the fancy stock is selling so cheaply that it makes the low grades hard to sell at any price.

Bulbous stock continues to be in large supply, but the better grades are selling out fairly well. There is a good demand for first-class red tulips and good yellow tulips find ready buyers. Paper Whites and freesias go slowly. Callas have been in demand this week. The receipts of Harrisii lilies are increasing steadily and of late the stock has shown considerable improvement in quality, very fair flowers being obtainable at from $2 to $2.50 per dozen. It is noted that a good many of the bulbs are producing only one or two flowers for some of the growers and there is not much money in that.

Violets are not so abundant as a few weeks ago and are affording little concern in the market. Smilax has become one of the few scarce items and the first of the week was selling higher than the light strings of asparagus, something probably never before known in this market. Orchids are in good demand.

Mardi Gras at New Orleans next week should keep things going for a few days more and St. Valentine's day, February 14, ought to help the violets a bit.

Club Meetings.

There was a very good attendance at the regular club meeting, February 3, the growers being interested in hearing what the building material men had to say on the latest wrinkles in greenhouse construction. Several of the local firms made exhibits and Lord & Burnham Co., Irvington-on-Hudson, N. Y., sent some excellent photographs, illustrating their methods of construction. R. W. King, of Toronto, was present and spoke like one who knows his subject. He is to have charge of the erection of the million feet of glass to be put up at Elmira, N. Y., by the United States Cut Flower Co. Stollery Bros. showed some fine tulips at this meeting.

On Saturday evening the last of the revival meetings will be held, this time at the Drexel Cafe, which is very accessibly located, at the corner of Cottage Grove avenue and Thirty-ninth street. A good program has been prepared and everybody should be on hand to help give the ball another shove. It is rolling well now.

Club members have received tickets for distribution to their friends for the exhibition to be held in Handel hall next Wednesday, February 17. It is to be open to the public from 2 to 4 in the afternoon. It seems certain that there will be a good show of carnations and bulbous stock. P. J. Hauswirth has the arrangements in charge.

The club has placed all bowling affairs in the hands of a committee, consisting of P. J. Hauswirth, George Asmus and George Stollery. There is a meeting for practice at the Gereaux alleys on Madison street every Tuesday evening. There is a good attendance, two alleys being placed at the disposal of the members' wives.

The Carnation Meeting.

Chicago will be well represented at the Detroit carnation convention. It is expected that the delegation will go down on the Wabash on the afternoon of March 1, reaching Detroit the evening before the convention. In the party will be W. N. Rudd, Jas. Hartshorne, C. L. Washburn, Peter Reinberg, N. J. Wietor, Leonard Kill, L. Coatsworth, Anton Then, Fritz Bahr, E. F. Winterson, P. J. Hauswirth, P. J. and J. P. Foley, Wm. Kroeschell and several others, including a number of ladies.

Various Notes.

C. M. Dickinson, manager of E. H. Hunt's, has been elected secretary of the National Oil Refining and Manufacturing Co., a million dollar corporation, which is developing a big tract of oil land in the Kern river district in California. The concern has its general offices at 79 Dearborn street, Chicago.

Those who have visited Poehlmann Bros.' establishment recently say their Beauties are coming on finely. They had the misfortune to get the stock in several houses frosted last fall and have not had much out of them, but they are now in good shape.

A. H. Budlong is now in personal charge of affairs at J. A. Budlong's wholesale store.

Frank Garland has leased a room on the second floor of the Atlas block, adjoining Peter Reinberg's, to which he will remove May 1.

E. F. Winterson Co. reports the call for fancy baskets much below last season's demand and says the retailers are not using them as much as formerly.

Last Saturday a water pipe burst in the Atlas block and flooded Deamud and Garland. Little damage was done.

Henry Muno has left C. W. McKellar and may start a retail store or go into some other line.

Henry Hansen, son of H. Hansen, the North Clark street carnation grower, and Miss Mary Smith were married yesterday. Mr. Hansen sells his father's stock at the Growers' Market.

John Hoeft has sold his retail store on North Campbell avenue to Kuehne & Pearson and will devote his attention to his greenhouses at Park Ridge. He is planning a trip to California for his health.

A. L. Randall Co. is getting quantities of white lilac and very fine valley from Buettner.

Bassett & Washburn have a fair cut of Liberty, and red roses are at a premium.

Wietor Bros. are cutting good Beauties.

Kennicott's are getting in Klehm's Novelty tulip in quantity and it is selling fairly well.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of E. C. Amling's, is ill this week.

Among recent visitors were E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Mr. Smith, of Smith & Fetters, Cleveland; Mr. Hill, of the Grand Rapids Violet Co., Grand Rapids.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

We are having most beautiful weather in spite of Mr. Ground Hog, who returned to his winter quarters after seeing his shadow last Tuesday. Business during the last few days of the past week dropped off greatly. The fine, clear, warm weather has brought out an abundance of cut flowers of all kinds and of the best quality. Prices, of course, have dropped and on Saturday good carnations were selling at $15 per 1,000 and $2 and $2.50 per 100 in small lots. Among them were seen Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Nelson, Enchantress, Prosperity, Queen Louise, Wolcott and other good stock. Brides and Maids are again plentiful; so are Meteors, Gates and Perles. About the only scarce rose now is fancy American Beauty. Some good flowers are seen but very short stemmed. Prices on roses run from $4 to $10 per 100.

Bulbous stock is moving slowly; plenty of it in the market for all demands, especially Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites. Very few Dutch hyacinths are in as yet. Harrisii are in and are selling well at $12.50 and $15 per 100. Callas, too, are plentiful at 10 cents. Lily of the valley is very slow at 4 cents. Tulips are coming in fine, but not moving as they should at 4 cents. The Novelty tulips at Keuhm's are fine, going at 5 cents. A big supply of California violets is in the market at 50 cents per 100 and about 35 cents in 1,000 lots. Street fakirs are peddling them out at 10 cents a bunch. The green market is healthy and there is plenty of everything and especially fine asparagus and smilax, which has quite a demand.

Various Notes.

I paid a visit Sunday to two of our well-known florists in South St. Louis, Messrs. Fillmore and Schray. At Fillmore's I found Frank just awakening from his afternoon nap. Everything is moving well at this place. A fine crop of callas was seen, also a large number of deep wooden boxes filled with Asparagus Sprengeri, from which thousands of sprays can be cut. A fine bench of Mrs. Nelson carnations was seen in the next house, of which Frank is very proud. For white he backs his money on the Hoosier P'rid, which is by Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind. The flowers are large, well formed, good stem and calyx never bursts. A few Enchantress also looked well. Roses have been off crop for some time but from the looks of the houses his big four, Brides, Maids, Perles and Woottons, will yield him a big crop soon. They also report plenty of funeral work of late. Their faithful dog, Monkey, which is a terror to drummers and which saved the place from destruction by fire some time ago, is still on watch.

At Schray's place everything is looking well. Mr. Schray is forcing a lot of lilacs, which will be blooming this week. We were also shown a lot of white poinsettias in the carnation houses. Glacier looked very fancy. The decorative stock and orchids are in excellent shape. A fine crop of roses will soon be on.

The Civic Improvement League has prepared an ordinance, which will be laid before the Board of Public Improvements, creating the position of city forester. This official is to be under the direction of the street commissioner, to make the city beautiful by planting trees throughout the residence district. This is considered a good thing, providing they give the position to an experienced man and not to a politician.

George Waldbart is showing some exceptionally fine roses and carnations. Blooming plants are having quite a run at this place.

Mr. Perry, who has charge of the greenhouses and landscape work at the World's Fair, and George E. Kessler, chief landscape architect, say that the work of setting out the big stock of plants will begin about March 15 and continue until the fair opens April 30. Everything promises to be in good shape for the opening.

J. F. Ammann, Henry Blixen and A. Jablonsky have returned from their inspection trip and are much pleased with their treatment in the hands of those they visited and claim they saw and learned a great deal.

The club meeting this week Thursday promises to be the largest of the year, especially well attended by the carnation growers, who are very much interested in new varieties and carnation talk from experienced growers.

Bowling.

On Monday evening team No. 1 again suffered defeat at the hands of team No. 2. During the evening Fred Worden, owner of the alleys, called the boys together and invited them to have something at the expense of an old friend of his in Chicago, who proved to also be an old friend of ours, Walter Kreitling. The scores of the evening were as follows:

Team No. 1—	1st.	2d.	3d.	T'l.

ALLIANCE, O.—A. H. Gehman says business is good with everybody in the florists' line in this section of the country. McKinley day cleaned up everything in the way of a carnation flower.

THE New York Herald prints a column article descriptive of the wonders of the private greenhouses of Wm. A. Proctor, at Glendale, near Cincinnati. The article is headed "Chrysanthemums Three Feet Broad."

BOSTON, MASS.—The U. S. General Appraisers have sustained the protest of N. F. McCarthy & Co., who took exception to the assessment of duty on certain importations of florists' baskets. The Boston collector classed them as manufactures of willow instead of chip.

THE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Radishes 20 to 40 cents dozen bunches; lettuce, leaf, 20 to 22½ cents per case, heads, $1 to $3.75 barrel; cucumbers, 50 cents to $1 dozen.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Cucumbers, 25 cents to $1.25 dozen; lettuce, 20 to 50 cents dozen; radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches; mushrooms, 10 to 40 cents pound; tomatoes, 10 to 20 cents pound; asparagus, $3 to $6 dozen bunches; rhubarb, 50 to 75 cents dozen.

WORK IN THE HOUSES.

Watering and Feeding.

As the days begin to lengthen and the strength of the sun's rays increase, the benches will dry out faster and require watering more frequently. There will also be less danger from overwatering, as growth will be more rapid and the plants will absorb moisture faster.

Liquid manure can also be applied more frequently to assist in maturing such crops as cauliflower and tomatoes with less danger of running them into soft growth. A little may also be applied to lettuce should the soil they are in be of rather poor quality.

As a good general liquid fertilizer we do not find anything better than that made from sheep manure. We procure the pulverized article and use about half a bag to a large barrel of water. After tying up the bag, we put bag and all in the barrel. All the substance of the manure will soak through the bag and give a liquid free from sediment. Soaked thus over night, the liquid ought to be ready to use the next day and will require to be diluted to the proper strength. Of this the operator will have to judge, as no hard and fast rule can be laid down. So much depends on the quality of the manure procured, but it is better to be on the safe side and make it weak rather than too strong. A strong dose is never advisable. It is better to apply weak and often, as the plants can only take up a limited quantity at a time. Just what they can take can only be decided by careful observation, as by this alone can the operator tell when they are getting enough or when they are getting too much.

Airing.

This is one of the most important parts of greenhouse work, and here again careful study and observation is the only teacher. It is all very well to say "keep the house at a certain temperature," but cold draughts must be avoided, and when the air is cold and the sun bright it is often better to let the temperature of the house run up over the desired degree rather than run the risk of getting a dose of mildew through having a cold draught beating down on the plants. On such days the house should be shut down early to conserve all the sun heat possible. There will be little condensation on account of the coldness of the atmosphere. Again, when the day may be rather dull and cloudy, if the air be warm, it won't do any harm if the house is kept below the desired figure. On such days we like to get air on the house as early in the morning as possible to help dry up the condensation, which is usually pretty heavy on such mornings, and on account of the mildness of the atmosphere little heat can be used. On such days the taking off of the air can be delayed much longer, and if the night is likely to be mild, a little night air on the lettuce houses will do no harm.

Cleaning Up.

Keep all decaying and yellow leaves picked off the plants, as they appear; if left around to decay fungus may be generated, which is liable to spread and may result in considerable trouble. Cleanliness is one of the best agencies in combating fungous diseases when the plants are affected, as well as one of the best preventives when the plants are free from disease.

Stirring the surface of the beds should be attended to as frequently as time will allow. This not only keeps the surface clean and free from mosses and weeds, but the keeping of the surface open is of great assistance in preserving the health of the plants, besides assisting the beds to dry out by the freer admission of air. Stirring should not be done when the soil is wet, or more harm than good may result, as then it would close, rather than open the surface. The best time for the operation is when the soil is rather on the dry side, or just before water is to be applied. With a loose surface, water soaks into the bed more evenly than when the surface is hard, as it is apt to run off the drier parts of the bed and soak through in patches, thus making watering very unsatisfactory and ineffective.

W. S. CROYDON.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have a horizontal boiler forty-two inches in diameter and ten feet long, with sixty-eight 3-inch tubes. Used for hot water, how many square feet of glass will it heat? What will be the necessary length of grate, supposing it to be forty-two inches wide? What the size of the outlet and inlet pipe holes? What should be the size and height of the stack?

W. R. G.

The boiler has a capacity for about 5,000 feet of radiation, 5,400 to be exact. It should have a fire box forty-two inches long, if soft coal is to be used and the boiler set to work as a return tubular, which I assume to be the plan. If hard coal is to be used the grates should be four feet long instead of three and one-half, as for soft coal. The smoke pipe should be fourteen or fifteen inches in diameter and twenty feet or more in height, depending upon surrounding objects. Size of opening for both riser and return for hot water should not be less than four inches.

L. C. C.

WARWICK, R. I.—A fire starting in the ventilator and fanned by a fierce wind totally destroyed the barn and greenhouses of J. A. Foster, February 2, entailing a loss of over $20,000.

ENCLOSED you will find the best invested dollar in my business; continue the REVIEW.—H. P. LODING, Mobile, Ala.

WESTERN FLORISTS MEET.

The midwinter gathering of the Perry Florists' Association was held February 4-5, at Albert Lea, Minn., entertained by P. Clawson & Son. The places that were represented were Austin, Cresco, Decorah, Charles City and Osage. Everything at Clawson's was looking its best. Carnations are their specialty and here are growing many new varieties. Enchantress and Adonis were much admired. These varieties will have quite a space in their houses next season. Each one went home carrying samples of the two, as well as stock of same. Dorothy Whitney was also looking fine and pronounced a good yellow.

These meetings are very helpful and always enjoyed. Subjects of all kinds are brought up for discussion and in that way one gets lots of new ideas, which they could not get in any other way. A good story told now and then by Mr. Clawson and responded to by Mr. Symonds kept all in good humor. The inner-man was well provided for, for which the ladies have our thanks. W. T. Symonds, of Decorah, was elected president for the next year and W. S. Hall, of Osage, secretary and treasurer. The next meeting will be at Osage, Ia., with W. S. Hall, the latter part of July.

A. N. Kinsman, of Austin, Minn., says that his roses were never finer than this winter, especially those growing in the same soil for the third season. He will add to his plant about one-third this season, planting grafted roses.

W. B. Perry, of Cresco, Ia., says business is good and stock looks well. Here may be seen Glacier carnations growing to perfection.

W. T. Symonds, of Decorah, keeps his place up to date with a good business. His display of carnations at the convention showed that he knows how to grow good ones.

M. H. Wetherbee, of Charles City, reports everything prosperous. He has had lots of design work this season, which is his specialty.

E. M. Sherman, of The Sherman Nursery Co., of Charles City, reports a good cut of roses, with prospects of a fine crop from now on. American Beauties are their specialty and we think their foreman knows how to grow them.

W. S. Hall, of Osage, says business is fair, with prospects of a good spring. His houses are filled with young stock, such as is grown for catalogue trade, which is his specialty. W. S. H.

BOSTON, MASS.—John Washek, an Austrian, dealing in florists' supplies in a small way at 12 Hawley street, shot himself January 28. He leaves a widow and seven children.

THE REVIEW is as necessary to the successful florist, as air and water to his plants.—W. W. NASH, Montrose, Pa.

BUFFALO

Current Comment.

Business has been improving slowly for the past two weeks, no flowers going to waste. Bulbous stuff is rather slow, good roses rather scarce and first-class carnations are never over plentiful. Freesia is beginning to be plentiful and the flower buyers like it. When the sun shines brighter and the temperature is higher it will help business all around.

W. F. Kasting is now preparing to move into his new quarters, Turn Hall, on Ellicott street. Talk about evolution from the tadpole to the finished article. Think of the little 4x6 store in which he first did business, then of the commodious store which is now his headquarters, then of the large overflow warehouse for his heavier goods and wire work manufactory, and now he has rented this old German theater, large enough for a national convention of the prohibition party. Surely this will hold him for a time, but he needs lots of room. It's not so much the business that is done, but when there is a full meeting of the Buffalo florists the hot air that escapes needs a lofty building to be healthy.

A few visitors have braved the arctic weather of late, but the few drummers who have arrived are merely the advance guard. The leonine Arnold Ringier, of W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, made his usual two days' stay. He is a great favorite among the boys, who eagerly listen to his philosophy and profit by his example. Walter Mott gave us his usual tri-annual call. He reports the Walter Mott Seed Co., of Jamestown, largely increasing its business, especially locally. In the pastoral regions of the beautiful counties of Alleghany, Cattaraugus and Chautauqua there should be an immense demand for timothy, red top clover, rutabaga, not to mention brussels sprouts and other epicurian green stuff. We had a call this morning from Nashville, in the shape of Mr. Joy, who had been taking a trip through the north. Very sorry I did not see him personally. T. Knight, in the interest of Julius Roehrs, also favored us with a call.

This has been a winter of records. In neighboring country towns they have had up to date over eighty-five days of continuous sleighing and the fridity has been away below all weather bureau statistics, but that is not all, the first Dutchman arrived on January 29. Although from Holland, he had more the appearance of an English sparrow, small, chipper and persistent. The interview lasted but three minutes, while fifteen years ago, just for politeness, it would have lasted an hour and so he passed on to give someone else the boon of his bargains.

Now by long odds the important part of these notes is to come, serious and important as the above are. On Wednesday, February 17, the Buffalo Florists' Club will have a carnation meeting. Many, in fact nearly all the leading firms who are sending out novelties, have promised to send exhibits and there will be a large display of the leading standard varieties. A competent committee will pass on the merits of the latest introductions and, although a certificate from this committee may not be of the same importance as that granted at the great Detroit convention in March, it will have some weight. Local florists, as well as those of western New York

Support the officers of the club who are getting up this exhibit more for your benefit than their own and, come one, come all. We will conclude by saying that if any local or nearby florist has any well grown flowers of any variety new or old, it is his duty to make an exhibit and help along the good cause. You are getting a view of the new varieties extremely cheap. W. S.

STEAM AND HOT WATER.

Having had very poor results from my heating apparatus, I have decided to change from water to combination steam and water. My houses, two in number, are each 24x123, thirteen feet to ridge, joined together with glass partition. The south wall is five feet high, with two feet of glass; the north wall six feet and double boarded. The east gables are glass to within two feet of the ground. The boiler room and shed across the west end are two feet higher than the houses, breaking the coldest winds. We use solid beds. The piping consists of fourteen runs of 2-inch pipe in the south house, used for roses, and twelve runs in the carnation house. It is piped on the gravity system, with high point and expansion tank over the boiler. To use steam in cold weather, how does the piping need to be changed? The connections to the boiler, both flow and return, are 3-inch. Some of the coils are one flow and three returns, and some two returns. I heat my dwelling from the same system, with radiators, taking water in at the top. I suppose it will be necessary to take in at the bottom with the new arrangement? W. L. F.

The piping system described for both greenhouses and dwelling will work well with steam. It will only be necessary to place check valves in the returns near the end of each coil and to place a globe valve and a check at each end of a sufficient number of the pipes in each coil

Fine Mid-Winter Exhibition.

The first of the regular Saturday exhibitions at Horticultural Hall under the new management of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held on January 30 and brought out a remarkably fine show. Orchids were the star feature, being shown in large quantities, some 600 bottles of cut blooms being staged in over 300 varieties and species. In the class for best display of cut orchids W. N. Craig, of the F. L. Ames estate, won the Appleton silver gilt medal with 200 bottles, mostly distinct. Emil Johansson, gardener to J. E. Rothwell, took the silver medal and William Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, the bronze medal. George Melvin, gardener to Colonel Charles Pfaff, also had a fine collection. There was never a finer showing of cut orchids at any previous Boston show.

Carnations, owing to McKinley day occurring on the previous day, were not largely shown. Rockland Greenhouses showed a plant and vase of cut blooms of a beautiful variegated sport of Mrs. Lawson, which received a certificate of merit. This will push Mrs. M. A. Patten close, if it does not eclipse it. S. J. Goddard's new seedling yellow attracted favorable notice. For collection of violets N. F. Comley won, showing seven varieties. Mrs. E. M. Gill had the best freesias.

Primula sinensis, P. obconica and P. stellata were well shown by William Thatcher, who won two first and one third prizes; E. J. Mitton, J. Lawson, gardener, and E. W. Breed. Robert Cameron, of Harvard Botanic Gardens, was awarded a cultural certificate for two grand specimens of Chorizema ilicifolium, also a certificate of merit for the new Acacia Baileyana. George Melvin secured cultural commendation for a large well flowered basket of Cœlogyne cristata. W. N. Craig showed well flowered pans of the Chatsworth variety of cœlogyne.

Lager & Hurrell had a nice little table of orchid plants. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. put up a beautifully arranged table of splendidly grown Begonia Gloire de Lorraine edged with primulas and Isoplepis gracilis. J. Montgomery Sears, Alexander Ogg, gardener, also had a beautiful lot of this begonia, which secured a cultural certificate for Mr. Ogg.

PITTOSPORUM.

Enclosed please find a spray of a tree that grows about the size and shape of an azalea. Please tell me the proper name.

J. F. B.

The little spray inclosed is a pittosporum. I could not be positive as to the species, but believe it is P. coriaceum. It is a greenhouse shrub. The flower is conspicuous and sweet scented. While they are desirable for a private conservatory they are by no means a commercial plant.

WHOSE LOSS IS IT?

A florist takes plants to keep through the winter and charges storage for them. His greenhouses, through accident, are destroyed by fire and the plants are all killed. In the absence of any agreement whatever who stands the loss, the florist or the owners of the plants?

THE very high prices at which onions are now selling will make a great difference in the sale of the seed. Already there is a shortage in sight of seed of the Southport Red Globe. Other varieties seem to be fairly plentiful.

THE continued cold weather has a depressing effect on mail orders. It also lessens the volume of business from what is termed the small trade by the jobbers. This will entail no permanent loss, as later on a break in the weather will soon make it up.

NEWS from Baltimore is awaited with interest. It is understood that Bolgiano & Co. were in the fire zone and C. A. Robinson is reported cleaned out. Quantities of seeds are understood to have been lost in the warehouse of the Martin Wagner Co., canners. Griffith & Turner Co. are thought to have been outside the devastated district.

APPARENTLY sweet corn prices have reached a steady basis. Current quotations by those who have a supply of stock range uniformly at $6 to $8 per bushel for Crosby and similar medium early sorts, and at $7 to $9 per bushel for Hickox, Evergreen, Old Colony and Mammoth. Country Gentleman leads at $10 to $11 per bushel for samples of good germination.

THE U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals has decided that canary seed, which is botanically a grass seed, but is used principally as a bird food, and which is not known commercially as grass seed, is not free of duty under the provision in paragraph 656, tariff act of July 24, 1897, for "grass seeds not specially provided for," but is dutiable under paragraph 254 of said act, covering "seeds of all kinds not specially enumerated."

WE esteem the REVIEW very highly for its Seed Trade news.—BINGHAMTON SEED Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is very good and very much the same as reported last week. The supply keeps up just about equal to the demand in most lines, but some articles are short. Good red roses are very scarce and American Beauties of first quality are few and far between. There is a heavy demand for all kinds of flowers suitable for funeral work and consequently short-stemmed roses are scarce, Brides especially so.

Carnations are increasing in supply daily, but still they sell well and none go to waste. Valley is selling rather slowly, but other bulbous flowers are doing fairly well. Calla lilies are in especially good demand and more first-class blooms could easily be sold. There is a good demand for Harrisii. Sprengerii has been selling exceedingly well of late and the supply is scarcely a drop in the bucket. Smilax is going better.

Notes.

A severe storm visited this city last Saturday night. Heavy wind accompanied by hail did considerable damage to the various greenhouse plants, but nothing that could not be repaired before any more serious loss resulted.

Theo. Bock will be in the city Saturday and act as judge for our rose show. Breitmeyer's Sons will send a vase of their new rose, La Detroit, and it is expected that all of the late introductions will be represented.

Visitors were: B. Eschner and Martin Reukauf, both of Philadelphia.

C. J. OHMER.

ST. PAUL.

The intense cold which has prevailed for two weeks has frozen up trade in nearly every line except the fuel business. Stock is not abundant, although there is plenty to meet demands. Violets are more plentiful than they were. Bulk stock is becoming quite plentiful. Henry Puvogel is handing out cigars over the arrival of a daughter.

Miss Seeger, who is the genial clerk at R. C. Seeger's store, is seriously ill with typhoid fever.

ORANGE, N. J.

The first competitive exhibition for 1904 was held by the New Jersey Flori-cultural Society on Friday, February 5, at their rooms in Orange. There were fifteen exhibits covering the usual range of flowers. Of special merit were the orchids of William Barr, of Llewellyn Park, grown by Arthur Bodwell, and some cyclamens in pots, from the greenhouses of William Runkle, grown by D.
Kindsgrab. John N. May contributed exhibits not for competition. The topics discussed were all bearing upon the show.
One new member was nominated. The judges for the evening were Harry O.
May and Jos. B. Davis. A neatly printed set of rules governing the exhibitions was presented to each member. J. B. D.

CORTLAND, N. Y.

Le Roy Hopkins died of heart failure while at work in his greenhouse, February 1. Mr. Hopkins had been subject to heart trouble for some time. That morning he complained of not feeling well and did not return to work until 2 o'clock, feeling better, and was filling an order for some flowers for a funeral when he suddenly reeled and fell to the floor. Dr. Dana was summoned, but life had departed. Coroner Moore was notified and pronounced death due to heart failure. Mr. Hopkins was about 36 years of age and is survived by his father, L. C. D. Hopkins; his wife, one son. Mr. Hopkins was one of Cortland's most progressive and successful business men, his greenhouses being the largest and having the best business of any in this section of the state.

BARABOO, WIS.—Wm. A. Toole has been elected corresponding secretary of the Wisconsin Horticultural Society.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL

by
WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CAXTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE Leedham Bulb Co., Santa Cruz, Cal., has sent us a remarkable daffodil flower. It came from a bulb among their lot of Ard Righ and the trumpet is similar to that of this variety, but it has ten sepals instead of the usual six. The sepals are all perfect in form and regularly placed. It is a very handsome flower. The bulb has been marked and should it and its increase retain the peculiarity of producing flowers with ten sepals there will be a very notable addition to the daffodil family.

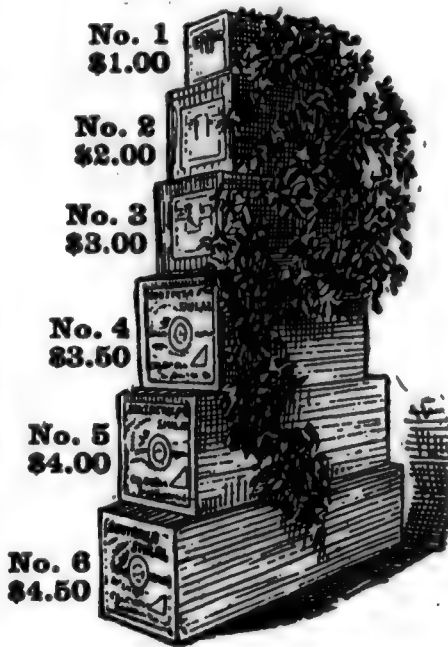

PLANT NOTES.

Hedge Trees.

Some years ago no landscape gardener thought a garden complete unless it had an evergreen hedge surrounding it. From the earliest plantings in California until a short time ago the native Monterey cypress was used almost exclusively. This idea was borrowed from the old missions, where the close-cropped hedges of the Cupressus macrocarpa were as much of a feature as the crumbling buildings themselves. This tree grows easily and very quickly from seed, which is planted in flats from April until July. The seeds sprout readily in the open air and are transplanted late in the fall into boxes containing about 100 trees each. They are easily handled and are from ten inches to one foot high by the following spring, when they sell usually for about $15 per thousand. If they are kept another season in the same box they grow to about one and a half to two feet high, when they bring about $25 per thousand. There has been a big demand for this tree for several years and many of our nurserymen have devoted almost their entire time to their propagation and sale. The tree attains its greatest size when planted not too far from the ocean, and is one of our most characteristic trees when used for hedge planting, or as individual specimens.

The Monterey pine, when a large wind-break or hedge is desired, can be used equally as well as the cypress, with the exception that it cannot be trimmed as closely, and does not grow as readily from seed. When planted in the open, however, the Pinus insignis takes hold readily and makes a magnificent tree.

In smaller places where a hedge or screen is desired I find that Pittosporum eugenioides and Pittosporum tenuifolium seem to be in most demand. They grow readily from seed and attain a height of about six inches in about the same number of months, when they can be readily transplanted from flats into 2-inch pots or in the open. They attain a height of two feet the next season, when they are ready for sale. They are easy to transplant and can be kept at almost any size by judicious pruning, although the tree when allowed to grow naturally attains considerable size. The Laurus tinus also makes a very desirable hedge. It is grown from soft wooded cuttings, struck in sand in the early spring. It makes a bushy shrub when about two years old and although it is not of such rapid growth as the pittosporum family it makes a splendid flowering hedge and stands trimming well. The California privet, although in much favor throughout the eastern states, is not planted here to any extent.

Regarding the trimming of trees used in hedges, I have found that almost any variety that is adapted to that purpose can be kept at any height by frequent and judicious pruning. I have a Monterey cypress hedge on my grounds that has been planted thirty-five years and is at the present time only four feet high and thirty inches through, although the natural growth of the cypress is about ten feet per year when it gets well established in the ground. The Market.

The dark days and southeasterly winds tell of the long looked for rain of which California is much in need, but the showers have not visited us yet. As a consequence of the dark weather we are having, flowers, especially roses and carnations, are not quite as plentiful as they were a few days ago and prices are stiffening somewhat. American Beauty roses are offered only in very limited quantity. Brides and Maids that were plentiful two weeks ago are being cut closely and are hardly enough to supply the demand, which is only fair for all kinds of stock. The last roses I have named are selling wholesale today at from 50 cents to $1 per dozen, which is really a very good price for this season of the year. Testout and Kaiserin are selling at 75 cents to $1 per dozen and very few really good ones are seen. With carnations good whites are still scarce and Estelle seems to be off crop with almost all the growers. Lawson, Cressbrook and several other pink sorts are making the best showing at present and some good fancy varieties are selling at 60 cents per dozen wholesale. Flora Hill is the variety we depend on principally for white, but a few of our larger growers have planted considerable stock of White Cloud and Queen Louise, both of which have several good points, but I do not think will supersede Hill as an all around good white. Valley is plentiful. Paper White narcissi are on the wane and the various yellow varieties are very abundant. Daffodils are coming in slowly and the majority of them with very poor stems, owing to the cold weather we have had. A few days' rain and followed by a day or two of sunshine would bring thousands of them into market. I visited one of the largest daffodil farms in this locality a few days ago and was told by the proprietor that the flower stems had not grown to any appreciable extent for the past two weeks, but as there were many thousands of buds in sight there will be an avalanche of blossoms as soon as weather conditions are favorable. Tulips of the Keizerskroon and Rembrandt varieties are in full swing and a few La Reine have made their appearance. I do not think the tulips are in as much demand as they were last season. They are selling at about $3 per hundred. Freesias are plentiful and in good demand. They are one of the most satisfactory flowers a florist can handle, good keepers, easily arranged into tasty bunches, have a delicious perfume and can be handled at a good profit. Violets are plentiful and cheap but some of them show the effects of our recent frosty weather.

Adiantum Croweanum

By far the best Adiantum fern that has been introduced to the florists' trade, is a free grower, the darkest green of the Adiantum family and longest stemmed, has the most graceful foliage, the average length of fronds measuring 30 inches, is by far the best keeper — cut fronds can be kept fresh several weeks in a cool place, and it is also one of the best ferns for a dwelling house.

I have given presents of this fern to several Utica friends and from my own observation note it grows better than the Boston fern.

And as I have given up rose cultivation some ten months ago. In order to give all my attention to the fern cultivation, for cut fronds, I find it pays me $1.50 to $1.60 in roses from the same amount of bench room. I will be delighted to give the history, also cultivation of this fern to any purchasers who may desire it. The plants, which will be ready for sale by the 1st of July next, will be from benches and large enough for 4-inch pots, as it is a rapid grower and no easy matter to confine it to a 3-inch pot. The illustration of the small fern shows size of plants when ready to be shipped the 1st of July. The prices will be as follows — $35 per 100; $250 per 1000. 250 at 1000 rate.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. Peter Crowe.

Dear Sir—I consider your Adiantum Croweanum a very valuable acquisition to this line of Ferns. It is an excellent commercial variety, good keeper, and has given the best satisfaction wherever we have sold it. Our customers much prefer paying an extra price for it than buying the commoner varieties. The great trouble we find is, we cannot get enough to meet our customers' wants. Yours very truly,

SAMUEL S. PENNOCK.

Detroit, Mich.

Mr. Peter Crowe.

Dear Friend—I am very happy to hear that another good thing is about to be launched, and that is, the fern line. I am satisfied Croweanum is by far the best Adiantum in existence, every frond being perfect. It is certainly an easy grower and money maker. You are deserving of a great success and know you will have it. Hoping for the visit at Carnation meeting, I am,

Yours very truly,

PHILIP BREITMEYER.

Peter Crowe, Esq.

Dear Sir—As compared with any other Adiantum, we have found it more graceful and a much more rapid grower, giving a much taller growth than we have ever been able to secure from Cuneatum. Our store men prefer it to any other cut fern. I certainly think it ought to be a winner, not only for you, but for those who buy it. Yours truly,

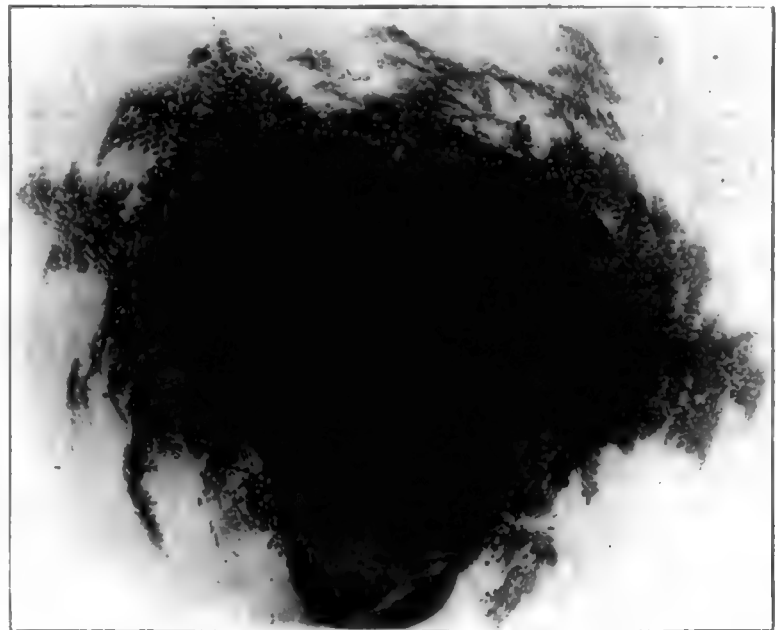

J. A. VALENTINE,
Pres. Park Floral Co.

Utica, N. Y.

Mr. Peter Crowe.

Dear Sir—Regarding your fern, Croweanum, would say that I have had the variety under observation since your stock appeared. Also that I have used many thousands of the cut fronds, believe it to be positively the best Fern of any family for Florists' use and welcome the chance to buy a stock at what I believe to be a very low rate. Very truly,

C. F. BAKER & SON.

Natick, Mass.

Mr. Peter Crowe.

Dear Sir—I am very pleased to hear that you have decided to put plants of your fern, Adiantum Croweanum, on the market. I have always been more or less interested, as I understand it originated from some plants of Adiantum Cuneatum that I sold you at the Waban Conservatories in the early eighties. I remember the circumstances very well, as I sold the balance of our stock to Robert Craig in 1890. Wishing you every success with it, I remain,

Yours truly,

Carnation Convention Plans.

All preparations are now complete for the meeting of the Carnation Society on March 2 and it is hoped that a good attendance, together with a large exhibit of blooms will repay the club for its labors. In reading the reports from the different cities I notice in several that some new varieties are to be shown from that section. It is hoped that everyone having something new will enter it, as this is the best method to show and introduce it to the growers. We look for a large representation of our Canadian brethren and some of our members of the local club are promising themselves a treat by way of retaliation for courtesies extended them some time ago on their visit to Toronto.

It will be a wise precaution for all coming to the convention to come prepared to stay over till Saturday, at least, as there will be something doing on Friday that no one can afford to miss, the details of which I shall give in my next. On Friday evening there will be bowling for those who wish, as the club has arranged for the use of seven alleys for the evening and is ready to challenge any five men for a match game. Every indication points to this meeting of the society as the most successful one in its history.

DEVILS LAKE, N. D.—P. J. Kersten is planning to build a house, 22x80, in the spring. He will use hot water for heating and will require first-class construction, for the thermometer sometimes registers 45 to 50 degrees below zero.

DAVENPORT, IA.—By a deal recently consummated the Allison-Littig Co. sold to Charles Dannacher their property on Brady street, excepting their greenhouses, and bought of Mr. Dannacher his Brady street greenhouse property, except his home. This gives the Allison-Littig Co. a fine double plant which will be consolidated on the former Dannacher property. They will also conduct the down-town store recently opened by Mr. and Mrs. Dannacher.

 CARNATION

NEW DAYBREAK

To the commercial grower who is looking for profit this variety is all that its name implies, and will at once commend itself as the old Daybreak reincarnated without its faults.

Color—true Daybreak shade, of Daybreak and Scott extraction, through several generations of seedlings. Inherits the vigor and freedom of both the above varieties. Blooms large, well formed and very sweet; does not have a washed out appearance at any time of the year.

A FINE KEEPER AND SHIPPER.

Price $3 per doz.; $12 per 100; $100 per 1000. Other new and standard varieties.

Chrysanthemums. The best new American and foreign varieties and best standard sorts.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There is a decided shortening up in the cut of all flowers at this writing, but it is most noticeable in white roses and white carnations, for which the demand exceeds the supply. Beauties of the highest grade are scarce and are held at 50 cents each; best Brides and Maids are 12 cents; occasionally some specials bring 18 cents. Carnations are in only limited demand, and prices are under those of last year at this date, $1.50 to $3 per 100, with some good Enchantress and Prosperity selling at 6 cents. Paper White narcissi, Roman hyacinths, daffodils and tulips are better sale, no accumulations now. Single and double violets of good quality are plentiful and meet with very fair demand. Fine long-stemmed sweet peas are being received, which are sold very low in order to clean up, the price being 30 to 50 cents per 100 in quantities. Mignonne, pansies, daisies, primulas and lilacs meet with a steady call. The wholesalers report shipping business steady.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is receiving quantities of fine Enchantress carnations, Maids and Brides from Mr. Burki's Bakerstown plant.

Patrick Maier and M. C. Dunlevy are among the largest forcers of bulbs this season, and they are cutting some very fine tulips and daffodils at present.

The window displays at Mrs. E. A. Williams' Penn avenue store are attracting lovers of the artistic to something new every day.

A. W. Smith was busy last week with several good sized wedding decorations.

E. C. Ludwig was busy with funeral work last Saturday.

Gardenias and cattleyas abounded at T. M. Ulam's last week. He used over 200 cattleyas in one centerpiece.

J. F. Gibbs has sold his Allegheny Market stands to E. C. Ludwig.

B. Eschner, of Rice & Co., Philadelphia, reports a heavy spring business. Some very pretty and new Easter novelties are shown by this firm.

INDIANAPOLIS.

On February 2 the State Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting, with President E. A. Nelson in the chair. On account of the severe cold weather the attendance was very small, but if the stay-at-homes had known what was in store for them in the shape of an interesting paper by J. A. E. Haugh, of Anderson, on the subject "Our Customers," there undoubtedly would have been a larger attendance. Mr. Haugh's paper was brim full of practical suggestions to the retailer and especially to those having greenhouses in connection with their store. They have an order sheet that is just about perfection and Mr. Haugh says that they never have any trouble if the blanks are filled out properly. Mr. Haugh was the only out-of-town member in attendance.

At the next meeting J. A. Rieman will read a paper on "Cutting and Handling Flowers." All the members are urged to come and be prepared to help in the discussion following the reading.

On February 8, A. Wiegand started south with a train load of business men from this city. They are to visit New Orleans and many other points in the south and are to be away about two weeks. A. B.

NEEDHAM, MASS.—Denys Zirngiebel says that with him Lawson, Enchantress, Boston Market and Fair Maid are the leading carnations. He thinks hybridizers have made no mistake in infusing Lawson blood in their seedlings.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.—The Oklahoma Floral Co., having gone into the seed and nursery business so extensively, has changed its name to The Stiles Co. They have rented a store and basement in the new Opera House building and are getting ready for spring business. Ralph M. Ward, of New York, was a caller last week.

CACTUS CINERARIAS.

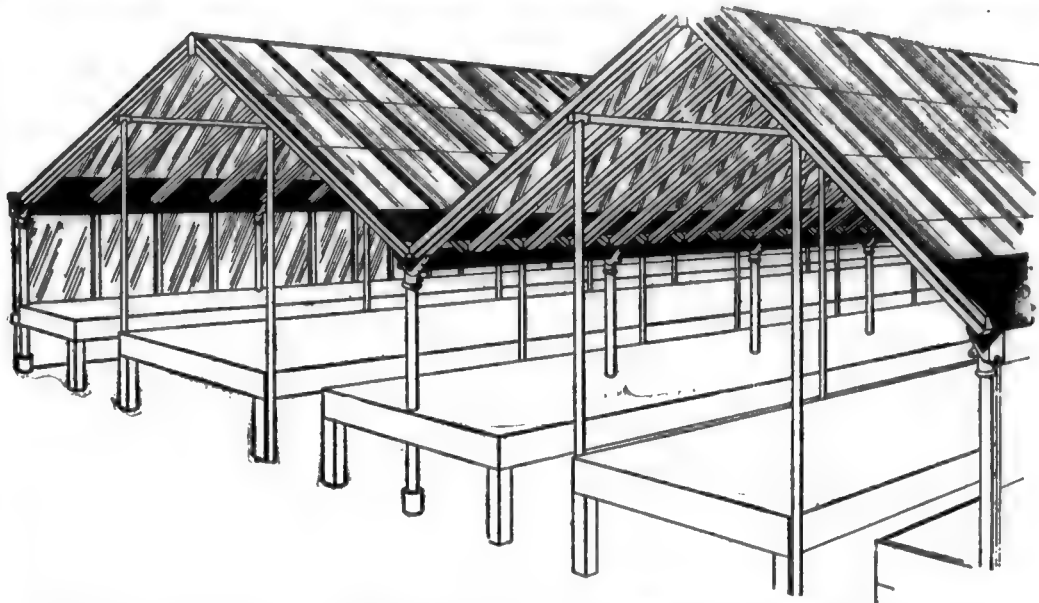

Although the flowers of the several species of cactus known to cultivators have not revolute and twisted petals, they are for the most part less formal than the flowers of the plants on which past generations of florists lavished so freely their love and care. Hence the term "cactus" has in the case of florists' flowers come to be regarded as synonymous with lightness and elegance. The first of the flowers to which the term was applied was the dahlia, and this as first used in connection with Dahlia Juarezi was more truly descriptive of that brilliantly colored form than it is of its more recent descendants. That, however, is a small matter; the designation is perfectly well understood by all who take an interest in the flowers, and it is perhaps as well suited as any name that could have been selected for popular use.

We have now "cactus" cinerarias, and, judging from the rapidity with which they have been developed and the attention the varieties have received from flower lovers generally, it is reasonable to infer that they will enjoy a large measure of popularity. Let us hope that this will be so, for while we have no wish that the varieties of the old type, with their large circular flowers and broad over-lapping florets should be superseded, it is most desirable that there should be a considerable degree of diversity in these as in other flowers under the gardener's care. Differences in color and form of the flowers and in the style of growth in the several classes of plants are important factors in the maintenance of interest in them, a fact which the past generations of florists unfortunately failed to recognize.—Exchange.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held February 5, President Turner presiding. The meeting was a very interesting one and well attended. The cut flower display was grand. H. A. Kettel, gardener to James Loeb, had some fine lily of the valley, roses, Lili-um Harrisii and narcissi, scoring in all 220 points. James Dowlen, gardener to H. L. Terrell, had a well flowered plant of Cœlogyne cristata, a vase of good roses and a vase of carnations, scoring in all 235 points. Mr. Dowlen also exhibited several carnation seedlings, a crimson scoring 90, a red 90, a scarlet 85 and several whites scoring 70 points. Geo. H. Hale, gardener to E. D. Adams, had some well grown freesias, Princess of Wales violets and imantophyl-lum, scoring in all 250 points. The judges of the evening were W. W. Ken-nedy, A. G. Williams and Wm. Turner.

The members who visited Tarrytown, N. Y., to attend the annual dinner of the Horticultural Society, arrived home in pretty good condition, notwithstanding the hardships they went through. As I understand, the snow was a little too deep for them in some places, the elevated too crowded and the ferry boats frozen in their slips. They reviewed their trip in detail, stating they enjoyed it very much, especially the dinner at Tarrytown. J. Yomans, our Oceanic Chauncey Depew, made a speech which won't be forgotten for a long time at Tarrytown.

The discussion of the evening was on experiment stations, San Jose scale and its treatment in winter and summer. Most of the members present took part in the discussion. Mr. Hale asked a question to find the view of the mem-bers, "if they thought it essential for a person learning the gardening profes-sion to study botany to become a good gardener?" Most of those present gave their views, some stating that if a gar-dener could combine and carry the two he would be the stronger, but the gen-eral trend of their views was against it, stating it was not necessary, as botany is a study of itself and from their ex-perience and observation botanists as a rule made very poor gardeners. Mr. Kettel asked the craft a few conundrums, which were not easily solved, but he soon enlightened them on the difference of things and also explained what some people called patience, which was en-joyed by all.

Great Fuel Saver

GALENA, ILL., Jan. 28, 1902.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The boiler I bought of you is giving perfect satisfaction. When the thermometer stood at 30 below zero this morning I could hold the temperature at 60 very easily with a saving of at least 25 per cent of coal. It is without a doubt the finest hot water boiler in the land, as it will heat about double the amount of glass that other boilers do with the same amount of coal. It has proved so satisfactory that I must express my feelings.

B. F. VANDERVATE.

CHICAGO, Dec. 1, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—The two No. 4 boilers you installed in my greenhouses at Hartland, Wis., did very satisfactory work last winter. I had been using cast iron boilers previously, but threw them out to put in your steel boilers. Your boilers have done better than I had expected; they require less coal, and much less attention than did the cast iron boilers. I estimate the saving in coal with your boilers was about 15 per cent. To anyone desiring a perfect greenhouse boiler, I would certainly recommend yours.

JAMES A. KIRK.

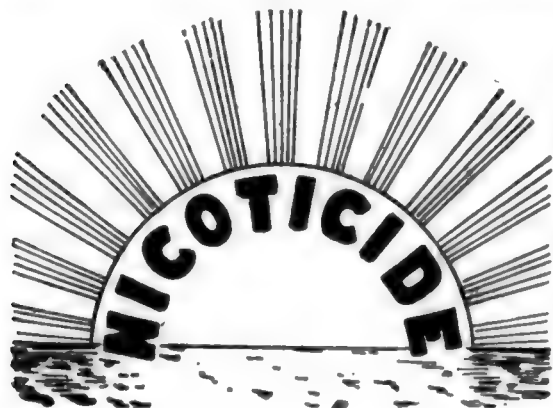

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27, 1903.

KROESCHELL BROS. CO.:—We wish to tell you how much we are pleased with your boiler we put in last fall. It replaced two cast iron boilers, has done the work very much better, requires much less attention, and besides as near as we can judge, will use about 20 per cent less coal than we have been using. This coal item is not compared with only one season, but with at least 20 years' experience with several different kinds of cast iron boilers. We are more than satisfied and have taken pleasure in showing and recommending your boiler to a number of growers.

Novelties In Carnations.

We desire to call particular attention to the following novelties, each of which the most critical growers agree is a great advance over older varieties of the same color:

FLAMINGO. Finest brilliant scarlet yet introduced. Large flower, grand stem, early and continuous bloomer.

MRS. M. A. PATTEN. Finest variegated, will supersede Bratt, which it will out-bloom two to one. Better in stem and more pleasing variegation.

WHITE LAWSON. True sport of Lawson and like it in every respect except that it is pure white.

DAHEIM. Extra fine crimson variety, fully as large as Lawson. Grand stem, brilliant color, ideal habit, early bloomer. Will supersede other crimsons.

Price of above Big Four, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. There is sure to be a large demand; orders filled in rotation; it will pay you to book orders without delay.

F. R. PIERSON CO., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Adiantum Croweanum.

The new introduction in the Maidenhair Fern family.

Will be ready to distribute among the trade about July 1st, 1904: Out of 3-inch pots.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Early Shading.

As the sun gains strength you will begin to see the need of a little shade over some of the bright pink and the Daybreak shade varieties. Nearly all the varieties in the Daybreak class fade quickly in the strong sun and unless they are shaded some they take on that dirty white appearance, which makes them unfit to sell. Especially is this true with those that open slowly and consequently fade most around the edges. A bloom that has an even color all over, though it be faded somewhat, does not look nearly so bad as a bloom that is faded only in parts. The fading is not so noticeable.

Among the bright pink varieties Mrs. Lawson is the worst to fade and needs a little shade a few weeks before most of the others. A bright, clear day's sun will bleach the half opened bloom on the side that is fully exposed to the sun so that when the bloom is opened it will be blotched all over with light spots that make it unfit to sell. If the bloom would merely fade a shade or two lighter it would not be so bad, but it bleaches into such an unsightly dirty color that nobody wants it at any price. You can take the buds that show color after a bright day and see distinctly which side was exposed to the sun.

Such varieties as Mrs. Nelson, Mrs. Joost, Floriana and Crocker will not need any shade for several weeks to protect the color and as the plants will enjoy all the sun they can get for quite a while you should not be in a hurry to put any shading material over them. A great deal of judgment must be used in putting on shade this early and especially is it quite dangerous to put on a permanent shade, such as we use in summer. For another month we are likely to have as much cloudy weather as clear and a heavy shade on the glass during a prolonged cloudy spell will do as much damage as the same amount of bright weather without any shade. The darkness will soften the blooms and render them more susceptible to the sun's bleaching effects than if the light at all times were stronger. The growth, also, will become softer and will succumb all the sooner to the summer heat a little later.

Another thing that will aggravate the bleaching is to let the plants suffer for water at the roots. By this time the soil is pretty well filled with roots and dries out rapidly where the sun can strike it along the edges and you will need to water along the edges every bright day. A light mulch of some loose material spread along wherever the sun strikes the soil will help to retard evaporation.

If you have only a bench or two that need a little shading it will pay you to buy enough cheese cloth to hang over them in such a manner that they will be protected from the bright sun and yet have a good strong light. Arrange it so that you can remove it or tie it up at night and on cloudy days, as it is not wanted then. The cheese cloth will not cost much and you can use it several seasons. If you have a whole house or several houses to shade you will, of course, have to put some kind of a shade on the glass. For this I would use whitewash made of air slaked lime, and quite thin at that. Whitewash made of air-slaked lime will wash off much easier than that made from hot lime and for several weeks you want a shade that will wash off with the first good shower. You can put on another as soon as it is needed again much easier than you can get rid of one that will stick like white lead and oil. You can't put this on with a brush with any satisfaction as it will be too thin, but you can put it on to perfection and very quickly with an ordinary greenhouse syringe. Don't shoot the liquid straight at the glass, but shoot it up high and let the wind break it up into countless little drops, which will fall onto the glass like rain, covering the glass with little spots and yet not shutting out the light as much as if the glass were painted solid all over. We use this method all summer, making the lime wash thicker and putting more of it on the glass as the weather gets hotter. One man can shade 10,000 feet of glass in an hour this way, while with a brush it would take him at least a day. Of course you will want this shade only on the south side of the house for at least six weeks or two months, as the sun does not rise above the ridges of any of the houses yet, and for some time after it does it will strike the glass at such an angle that it will have little strength after passing through.

The blooms should be cut early in the morning before the sun gets very high. They are fresh and full of sap and will draw water better than if they are picked while the sun is beating down quite strongly, and, of course, naturally, they will keep longer. You will also notice that after a bloom is opened to the stage when we consider it ready to be cut it will begin to bleach much quicker than while it is opening. Developed blooms should not be allowed to remain on the plants through a bright day from now on, of those varieties that are inclined to bleach. Better cut them a little close and hold them in water until they are developed enough to send in or to sell. During December, January and February many growers pick their blooms only as they sell them, but from now on it will pay you to pick what are ready to pick each morning and depend on your cut flower room to hold them until you can dispose of them.

A. F. J. BAUR.

VARIETIES FOR SMALL GROWERS.

I have just one house, 30x155, planted to carnations, and I wish to give my opinion on the varieties for small growers to handle for profit. I will commence with whites. I find Peru much ahead of any for production, a good, clear white flower on a good stem and never bursts and will pick a third more flowers from it on my place than any other white. Of reds, Crane is much ahead of any I have tried, as my plants are still in the best of health without any signs of stem-rot. I would not part with it for any of the new ones I have seen. I have given up Adonis. Palmer bursts. In pink, Joost does fairly well here, especially in the fall and spring, but in the winter is a little slow. In light pink I have Morning Glory and Enchantress. Morning Glory is a fairly free bloomer but does not produce a good enough flower. I shall strike it off the list after this season, as Enchantress will pick more flowers and of much higher grade. I have averaged from this variety about four and one-half blooms since November 1, which I consider a good average and there are from 3,000 to 4,000 buds in sight at the present time. I have about 600 plants of this variety and they stand over three feet six on the bench, stems like canes. I also have a sport from that variety, which I consider promising. It is not quite a clear color but is something the shade of Joost tinted with light spots, but is larger than Enchantress and much stiffer, as it seems to stand without any support.

GROWING CARNATIONS.

[A paper by F. J. Fillmore, read before the St. Louis Florists' Club at its meeting February 11, 1904.]

I am not an expert at growing the divine flower, but aim at growing the best I can, as I am certainly handicapped by being situated almost within range of our city's smoke. There is no doubt that a grower situated far out has a great many advantages over those who are not so fortunate. Pure air and pure soil are the main requisites in growing any plant, coupled with experience and lots of common sense.

Propagation.

We always have good, sound boards in the bed, with a small crack between them and a few auger holes in the boards, also a hot coat of thick whitewash is applied every season. We procure good, coarse river sand, which is thoroughly washed. This is used the whole season and after being spread and pressed firmly to the depth of three and a half to four inches, is thoroughly soaked. We are now ready for the cuttings, taken chiefly from the base of the flowering shoots. When short of stock, I take some shoots that would bloom later on. As soon as cuttings are taken, I put them in a bucket of water for about fifteen minutes, no longer. Take them out and if not ready to make at once, cover them from the air. In making them, trim off the ends if they are uneven, if not uneven do not cut them at all. Trim off a few lower leaves and shorten back the upper ones and insert them in the sand about one inch deep, three-quarters of an inch apart and about two inches between the rows. Then soak them thoroughly and sprinkle lightly almost every day, except in very cloudy, damp weather. Water the bed about every three days.

It is hard to lay down any given rules on this point, as so much depends on the weather and temperature. I find that with the greatest care I have, at times, a good deal of loss, and there is such a difference in varieties, also. I have rooted them in different temperatures, but I think the ideal is 60 degrees bottom and 50 degrees top, no higher if possible. I have sometimes rooted them very cool, with scarcely any heat, and very successfully, but it is a very slow process. Air is given to the house whenever possible, or nearly every day, and the cuttings are shaded from all sunshine until they begin to root; then sun is admitted gradually until when rooted they are fully exposed. I have used papers in shading ever since I was initiated in our profession, and that is quite a few years, but this season am using as shades frames made a convenient width, cut of half-inch strips, and covered with white muslin. These rest on a board back of the bed and are suspended in front by wire fastened on the sash bar. This shade keeps the direct air from striking the cuttings and at the same time gives them sufficient, as it is about four inches above the bed. Outside shade is given with lath shades as the weather gets warm, to keep down the temperature. When the cuttings are rooted, say roots about a half-inch long, they are potted into 2-inch pots in soil four parts well rotted sod to one part thoroughly decomposed stable manure, with a liberal sprinkling of lime and some sand. This is sifted through a half-inch sieve.

Care of Young Stock.

Cuttings are potted moderately firm, watered thoroughly, treated the same as the cuttings for about a week and at about the same temperature, when they are gradually given more air and kept 45 to 50 degrees at night and 60 degrees in the day, with air. Propagating is done from November on. The early cuttings for summer blooming, when needed, are shifted into 3-inch pots. The later ones I am going to pot this season into 2½-inch pots and plant from them. When weather permits they are removed to cold frames and gradually hardened off, avoiding all extremes of temperature as far as possible and pinched back when about three or four inches high.

Field Planting.

As soon as weather permits, planting out is proceeded with, from about April 15 on in our section of the country, of course according to the weather. The plants are thoroughly watered. The ground is thoroughly manured about every two years, about two inches deep, half rotten, and well spaded. A coat of lime once in a few years is also given. My garden, as I always term it, is only 40x125 feet and I have grown plants here for eighteen years. Now almost every grower believes in growing carnations on different ground every two or three years at least and there is no doubt it is a great advantage in growing good stock. I plant firmly, 8x10 inches apart, covering the ball thoroughly but avoid covering the foliage. If we do not have rain about every two or three weeks, I give the plants a good watering with an automatic sprinkler. I find this does it more thoroughly than when done with the hose. This is repeated throughout the season of growing. I know opinions differ greatly as to watering stock while in the field, but the more experience I have the more I advocate it. If the summer is continually dry I water at least once a week. It is not much use to water unless started in good time.

Plants are kept free of weeds and hoed quite often, gone over every week and those needing it are pinched back until housing time, about August 1. Now methods of culture have changed. The first essay that I wrote was on the growing of the divine flower about ten years ago. I then advocated September 20 as the date for housing. Now it seems we can hardly house them soon enough. I have always maintained of late years that the time will come when we will plant them the same as roses, as some are really doing on a small scale.

Filling the Benches.

We prepare the benches by repairing, sweeping off the boards thoroughly, turning them over and giving a good coat of hot whitewash. Space the boards off with about half an inch to three-fourths of an inch between them. While we prepare the soil all parts of the benches get a good sun bath. Soil is composted of about three-quarters well rotted sod to one-quarter well decomposed hotbed manure. All is thoroughly mixed, the soil being chopped as fine as possible. About a shovelful of air-slaked lime is added to each barrow-load of soil. For drainage on the spaces in the benches we use straw. We formerly used sod but it is very hard to obtain, especially in dry weather. Straw is cheap and much quicker handled than sod. The soil is wheeled right on to the benches and spread to the depth of about five inches. This gives about four inches after the plants are in and watered. The plants are lifted with a small ball of soil whenever possible. Varieties differ in this respect, as some retain soil easily while others do not. They are taken into the house or potting shed.

The Lyre

(By Wm. H. McDougall, Chicago.)

House Planting.

I usually lift a good number early in the morning and again late in the afternoon. They are heavily sprinkled at once, all dead foliage is removed, the house being previously shaded with old soil run through a quarter-inch sieve, mixed with water to a convenient thickness and applied with an old broom. I now proceed to plant, just covering the ball thoroughly and firmly pressed with the hands. Strong growing varieties are planted about 10x12 and some 12x12, others about 8x10. I have some planted closer, but I think we really ought to give more space to our plants than we do, to permit a freer circulation of air. As planting is proceeded with, I water several times until the soil is good and damp but not soaking wet. We syringe about three times a day, moistening the walks at the same time. The house is kept a little close during the day, with all air possible at night. I think that if the plants are good and sturdy they really do not need to be kept very close. I do not intend to do so in the future, as plants very seldom wilt with me and I really think this keeping close and damp is the main cause of stem-rot. At least I have almost come to that conclusion, after close observation.

House Culture.

After the planting is done we clean all the rubbish from under the benches and sometimes scatter air-slaked lime after all is cleaned up. If we have no rain in about ten days, the shading is washed off with the hose. The soil is kept in good moist condition, not soaking wet. These conditions are reversed to a certain extent in the short days of winter. We were late in planting this season, so were delayed all around. We usually clean the plants again before staking, but this was not done this season. The plants have thrived fairly well, but I am a great believer in cleanliness and we usually clean them again about this time. We stake them with the Kuehn support, which to my idea is all O. K., giving a free circulation and always convenient to clean and apply mulch.

After staking this season we applied mulch one-half inch thick, the same as we used on our roses, composed of one-third rotted sod or soil and two-thirds well rotted hotbed manure run through a one-half inch screen, to which was added bone meal, an ordinary-sized coal bucket to about fifteen medium-sized barrow loads of the compost. We scatter lime occasionally over the surface of the benches and tobacco ashes which I save from fumigating, also wood ashes when procurable. Liquid manure is used after the mulch has been on some time, weak at first, increasing in strength as the season advances. As I use the Kinney pump for this purpose, a double quantity of manure is placed in sacks, as pressure is obtained from city water which dilutes the liquid to one-half the strength. About half a bushel of sheep manure, or a bushel of cow manure, or one and one-half of horse manure is used to each sack. One sack to a barrel makes the liquid of medium strength. About this season of the year, or a little later, about one-half inch of mulch of rotten manure is put on and later in the season one inch.

Daily syringing is stopped as soon as short days start in, except at the extreme warm ends, where the main steam pipe is. These are syringed every day and the walks dampened down. I generally syringe about twice a week in other parts of the houses. As the season advances daily syringing is gradually given on all bright days, and twice a day in hot weather, with plenty of water at the roots. I should have stated before that the houses are left wide open day and night except in stormy weather until cold weather approaches, then a pipe is turned on, with enough air to maintain the right temperature. There are very few days in the season but what some ventilation is given, if only for a couple of hours.

The temperature for those varieties that do best in a cool house is about 50 degrees. A variation of a degree or so either way is allowed. In the warmer house about 54 degrees is kept, the variation the same. This, of course, is the night temperature, the day being from 10 to 15 degrees higher, with abundant ventilation. I never force carnations for any occasion except to allow the houses to run about 3 degrees higher than the normal. This is not forcing. It stands to reason that it must weaken the stock to a certain extent.

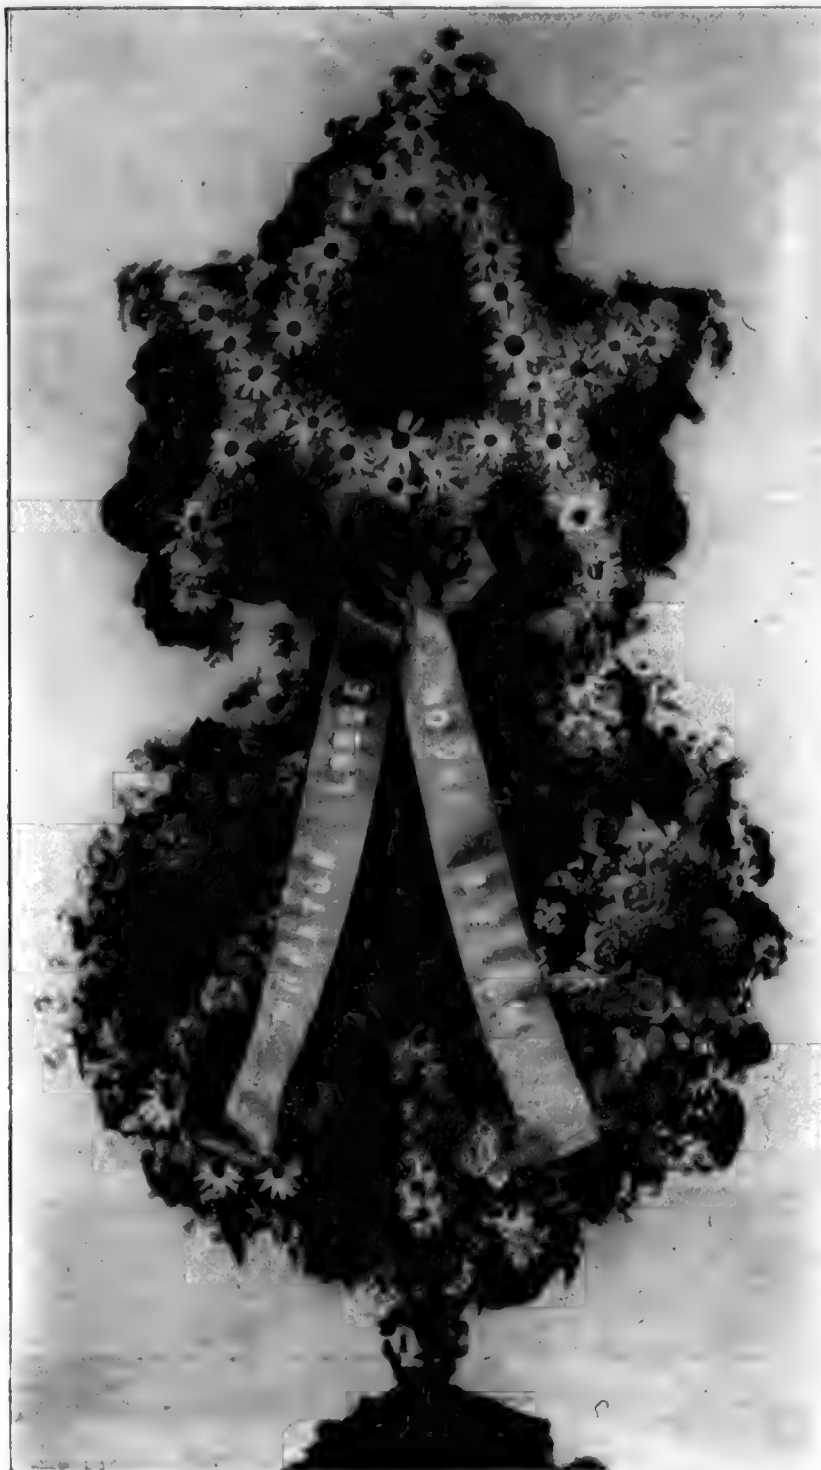

As soon as possible, even if the weather is warm, I fumigate in the old fashioned way, just closing the house for an hour or two and then opening up again for the night. Fumigation is kept up throughout the season, lightly, about once a week, and I have never seen any bad effects on blooms, though some experts differ on this, and as far as odor from tobacco is concerned, I have never noticed it on the blooms after being in the cellar in water a couple of hours.

I have never shaded carnations after being established, but have no doubt where large quantities are grown it is beneficial to do so with some varieties that are inclined to fade as the weather gets warm in the spring. During the chrysanthemum season I only allow about a quarter of the plants to bloom. When the buds get a fair size we cut them back as you would a bloom. Disbudding is attended to throughout the season. Sometimes when very busy this is neglected; if so I always look after the colored ones first, as the white varieties can be used in design work for our retail trade.

Blooms are picked early every morning. They are allowed to develop fairly well, as I think when they are picked too closely it causes them to go to sleep much quicker. At least this is our experience, as we never have complaints from our customers. On the contrary, we often have compliments as to the keeping qualities. After being picked they are placed at once in cool water and set on a cemented cellar floor, never in the ice box. We always maintain a fair price, no bargain days, but in periods of glut give our customers the benefit by giving them liberal count. This we have found to be very satisfactory and it pays much better than selling at cut rates.

As to Varieties.

Mrs. E. A. Nelson is the best with me this season in quality and quantity of good flowers. Flora Hill is next in productiveness. It is about the same as when I first grew it, but the quality is not so good; a grand summer bloomer, however. For red we have Crane. I have Murphy's White and Lillian Pond in small quantity and am inclined to think they will take the place of old Flora for winter bloomers. These varieties are in the warmest house.

In the cooler house we have old Daybreak. This will be the last season we shall grow it, as it has deteriorated too much. The Marquis is a grand variety, we think, for retailing, but it is always late in coming into bloom and after the heavy spring crop is of no further use, therefore not being profitable for wholesaling. Hoosier Maid is really a white Daybreak, only a medium-sized bloom but very productive; takes the place of Flora Hill in midwinter; it blooms from early to late. Mrs. Higinbotham and Gaiety are failures with me.

Enchantress is a very fine variety but I have lost about one-half of the hundred which I had, with stem-rot. When I planted them in they were the finest plants that I ever had, about twelve inches in diameter. I only gave them about eleven inches of room each way and I think probably that was the main cause of losing them, by not having sufficient space to allow free circulation of air. We live and learn and if we wish to improve we must try some new varieties each year and if we only find one or two better than we had, it certainly pays. I have not room enough to plant many new ones, as I only grow about 3,000 plants.

In closing, I hope I have not wearied you with this long essay. All the points covered are founded on practical experience, not theory, and I think we should all strive to raise the best blooms that are possible. By this way of doing them there would be less danger of gluts and certainly more credit and pleasure to the grower. I know I am never satisfied, but you all know my situation. If I had the same advantages as some of my friends here I think I might be able to raise as good blooms as they do, which I am not able to do in my present location.

A Reverie.

Just at this time I fell into a reverie and saw that gay though antiquated William Scott with that aged but good old spinster, Lizzie McGowan. But being full of Gaiety he became enamored with Flora Hill and exclaimed, "You are my Enchantress." About this time that noble Marquis came on the scene with the modest Hoosier Maid, not even noticing the beautiful Lady Bountiful, who very quickly made the acquaintance of Apollo, though he was admiring the popular favorite, Mrs. Lawson. About this time also appeared Mrs. Nelson, the pink of Perfection, but they thought they were all small Bradts, when the Crusader landed Adonis with his Fiancee. When the White Cloud passed away they were all seen crane-ing their necks to see the Daybreak over Alaska and, after wishing Prosperity to all, Flamingo departed to see his affianced Bride in Indianapolis. About this time I awoke and found all were being Marshalled in the Field by President McKinley.

FRANK J. FILLMORE.

The portrait herewith reproduced is from a photograph of one of the most valued members of the St. Louis Florists' Club, a member who has a record for never missing a meeting. Mr. Fillmore has also been a member of the S. A. F. for thirteen years. This is the first time his portrait has ever appeared in print. If all the members would follow the example set by Mr. Fillmore, what grand meetings we would hold every month.

Seasonable Hints.

With the advent of spring we may look for a rapid increase of greenfly and special efforts should be made to exterminate them before they become too numerous. It is almost impossible to fumigate with tobacco as frequently as is necessary without injuring the flower ous injury has been done to the surface of the leaves and requiring a longer time to dry than if no fumigation had occurred.

This method of keeping greenfly in subjection is that most commonly used but is far from being perfect, nor have we as yet found a good substitute. It is claimed that the cyanide of potassium is more effective and less injurious to flower and foliage but to this method there are also objections, particularly on account of its dangerous character, and some growers of long experience hold that it is even more injurious to the plants than tobacco fumes.

Where plenty of tobacco stems can be had it is a very safe and effective way to keep these under the benches, on the pipes, or in fact anywhere in the house where they will not be in the way. By renewing these periodically greenfly can make no headway; with a little care they need not present an untidy appearance.

Whatever means is employed in the extermination of this pest must be accompanied by patient persistency, as during the spring months the rate of reproduction of these insects is something appalling. Not only do they reproduce their kind by laying eggs like most other insects, but as if that were not rapid enough they also for eleven months of the year bring forth their young alive and in a perfect state, ready to feed and in an incredibly short time to reproduce like the parent, and without even the presence of a male.

Charles Bonnet, a Swiss naturalist possessed the same power. He carried the experiment to the fifth generation, when they showed no sign of diminution of the reproductive faculty. He calculated that at the end of the fifth generation, if left undisturbed, this fatherless progeny would amount to the enormous total of 590,490,000, a nice little family to house and feed.

These young flies are easily destroyed during their infancy and never attain maturity where plenty of fresh stems are strewn under the benches. RIBES.

THE SUCCESSOR TO LIBERTY?

The E. G. Hill Company, Richmond, Ind., has a number of very promising seedling roses and in a red seedling of Lady Battersea crossed with Liberty Mr. Hill considers he has the most promising novelty it has ever been his good fortune to possess. The flower is much like Liberty in form and color, but a little more on the scarlet order and is more double. But it is in growth that the variety is expected to prove itself superior to any red rose now in sight. It is as easily handled as Bride or Maid, keeps going all winter and Mr. Hill says that, if such a comparison can be made, this seedling grows half again as strongly as Liberty. His stock now consists of eighty-five plants, for which he is reported to have declined an offer of $5,000. So strong a grower is it that there will be no strain on these plants to increase the stock to from 8,000 to 10,000 plants for next season, which will permit of its dissemination in the trade in 1905.

THE CHICAGO SHOW.

The Chicago Florists' Club held another of its periodical shows at Handel hall on Wednesday afternoon and evening and scored the success of the season. The exhibits gathered by the efforts of P. J. Hauswirth, the manager, filled the hall so completely that little room was left for visitors and the place was thronged from opening to close. The general effect of the show was excellent.

On entering the hall, the center of the view was occupied by a splendid display of roses from Peter Reinberg. Uncle John and Chatenay were the leading features of the exhibit, but there were also vases of Beauty, Ivory, Liberty, Golden Gate, Bride, Bridesmaid, Perle and Sunrise, equally well grown. Considering the state of the rose market this display represented a tidy sum.

Bentley & Co. showed a splendid vase of Bridesmaid and another of Bride. George Hopp, of Grand Rapids, sent some good blooms of a pink seedling but they were found slightly frosted when the box was opened.

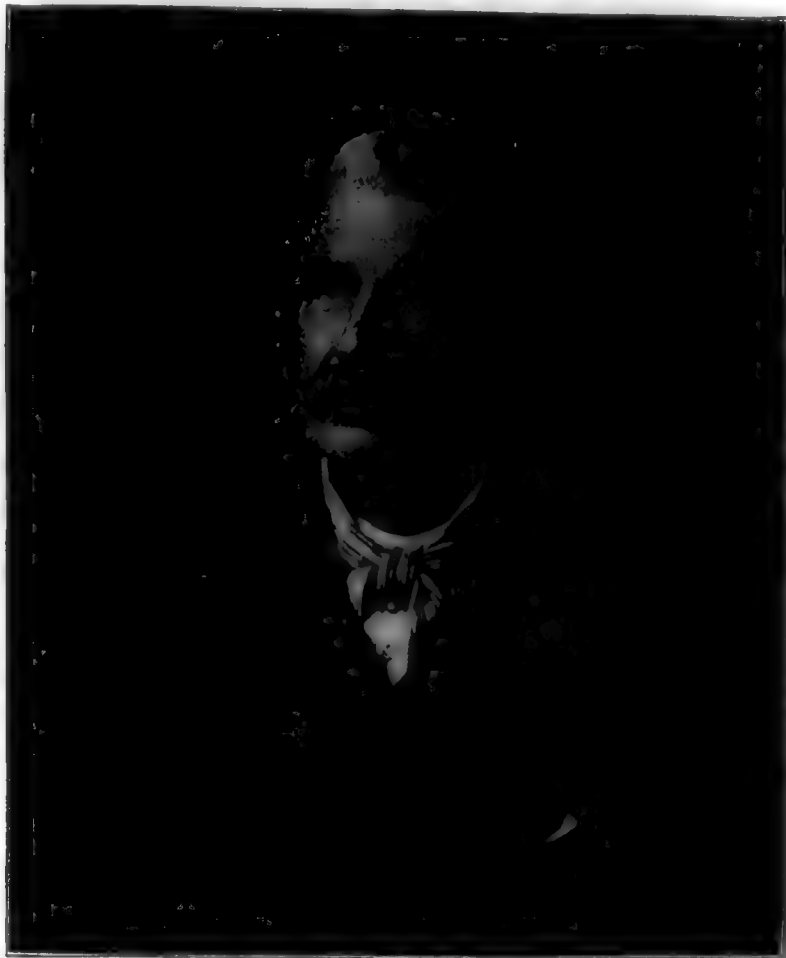

Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, sent a very fine vase of their pink carnation, Indianapolis. Local growers like it better every time they see it.

The Chicago Carnation Co. showed a fine vase of Crusader, another of Harlowarden and a smaller vase of Alba, the latter probably the largest white flowers ever staged in this city. Mr. Hartshorne states that its one fault is its slowness.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, sent Lady Bountiful, which everyone likes.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., was represented by a vase of Adonis which was a pleasure to every visitor. It left little to be desired.

W. N. Rudd put up a vase of Phyllis, with the merits of which this market and foliage to some extent. The petals of the pink varieties are often so bleached that they are unsalable, especially after a heavy fumigation, and although the injury to the foliage is not quite so apparent, it is there nevertheless, as a microscopic examination will show. The first syringing after fumigating leaves the foliage in a wet and bedraggled condition, showing that a serious injury has been done to the surface of the leaves and requiring a longer time to dry than if no fumigation had occurred. This method of keeping greenfly in subjection is that most commonly used but is far from being perfect, nor have we as yet found a good substitute. It is claimed that the cyanide of potassium is more effective and less injurious to flower and foliage but to this method there are also objections, particularly on account of its dangerous character, and some growers of long experience hold that it is even more injurious to the plants than tobacco fumes. Charles Bonnet, a Swiss naturalist has become thoroughly familiar, also a vase of his good white, which he has christened Chicago White.

Wietor Bros. staged Enchantress, Morning Glory, Guardian Angel, Lawson, Harlowarden and Chicago, blooms from regular stock but up to exhibition standard.

Sinner Bros. showed America and Lawson in good shape and also a white seedling, from Norway crossed White Cloud which looked pretty good.

Anton Then had a vase of No. 122, a good variegated.

John Reardon put up two fine vases of Mrs. Lawson.

From F. R. Thornton, of Gesler & Drury, Galesburg, Ill., came a pink seedling christened Illinois.

The Thompson Co. also made an exhibit of carnations.

The George Wittbold Co. put up a very fine lot of bulbous stock and a couple of rhododendrons in handsomely decorated pots. The public liked this exhibit rather better than anything else.

G. Swenson, of Elmhurst, was represented by good California violets.

Oechslein Bros. put up a large group of the well grown decorative and flowering plants on which their place in becoming so well known.

H. N. Bruns had a good vase of valley.

W. L. Palinsky brought well grown cinerarias and Primula obconica.

Last but not least was the exhibit of Klehm's nurseries. This was valley from home grown pips labeled "the true Berlin variety." Certainly no finer valley was ever seen in this market. They also had La Reine tulips in splendid shape.

The sum of $100 in gratuities was divided among the exhibitors.

FOR SHADY SITUATION.

Can you suggest any plants suitable for beds in front of a residence facing east and shaded at a distance on the south by tall trees? They get nearly all the morning sun. My customer says geraniums seem to run to leaves and they get very few flowers from any plants used. Can the trouble be that they are in too rich a soil and get too much water? Would scarlet Phlox Drummondii or scarlet verbena do for an early show of bloom among Nutt geraniums if the bed is not watered too much? I think they wish a red flower display rather than tropical foliage effect. Or would salvia be a good blooming plant if grown somewhat dry in such a location?

G. F. H.

The conditions described, "shade at a distance," and the "sun up to noon" are by no means unfavorable and we think that a rich soil and the curse of the senseless use of the hose is the main cause of the failure of the geraniums. It's true that the zonale geraniums do best in the broad sun without any shade whatever, but we have all seen them go to leaf with little flower in a very wet season or when kept soaked with water. Scarlet Phlox Drummondii would make a brilliant bed if the flowers were kept picked off and if, in a long dry spell, an occasional soaking was given the bed. Verbenas would make a pretty bed, but I would not mix them with geraniums.

The taste for coleus, achyranthes and that class of foliage plants is very much on the wane and flowering plants are correspondingly on the increase in favor. The objection to the scarlet salvia for such a position is that it's rather late flowering. Yet from August on till hard frost, what is more cheering and beautiful than the scarlet salvia? It seems to blend with tints of the foliage and the ripening fruits and berries of our woods and orchards. It gives us a feeling of warmth.

However, the flowering plant that the writer would advise for such a bed would be a good, dwarf, free-flowering canna. Tarrytown is a grand variety, and a brighter scarlet and very dwarf, with plain green foliage is The Express. The latter is not very common yet, but it is a jewel where a pure scarlet dwarf canna is needed. The canna has another advantage: neither the owner or the hired "John Thomas" could injure them with the profuse or careless use of the hose.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

DAHLIA PROPAGATION.

Being interested in your notes on propagating the dahlia, it might not be out of the way for me to state that commercially the general method pursued has been by cuttings, as a new variety can be increased very much faster in that way, but it is at the expense of vitality. The clumps grown from cuttings are smaller and need a second year's growth to make full sized, strong clumps. When the regular clump is divided and one, two or three tubers are planted together, the stalk allowed to grow has a good foundation to live on while the roots are forming in the soil. A stronger plant and the consequent stronger clump is bound to be the result.

Time and care are the two main factors in the result, understanding, of course, that we have good soil in either course pursued. When the cutting is taken off it is of necessity a weak thing. Properly cared for, it soon strikes root, but must get all its nourishment from the soil. The growth is necessarily slow, because everything is formative, but with good care throughout the season, close, small clumps are formed that will bring excellent results the second season.

On the side of the divided root you have a reserve force in the tubers that sends the shoot upwards regardless of the soil, and as roots are formed the stalk is nicely growing and ready to assimilate all the vitality both clump and root can give. Consequently, as far as the single plant is concerned, the divided root is greatly preferred. However, when a large number of plants is desired to disseminate a new variety, the system of propagating by cuttings is the one to be employed and vitality brought up by the second year's growth.

E. S. THOMPSON.

Dahlia specialists in Europe propagate during summer from cuttings in small pots. The small tubers thus produced are kept in the pots or, which is still better, packed in dry sand in boxes away from frost or heat. The small tubers give better satisfaction than either divided clumps or spring cuttings.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS

Executive Board to Meet.

The annual meeting of the executive board has been called by President Breitmeyer to convene at St. Louis on Saturday, March 5. Members of the society, or others having in mind matters which should be brought to the attention of the committee for the benefit of the profession, or the interests of the society, are requested to send same in writing to the secretary at an early date. All such communications will be gladly welcomed by the officers of the society and will be given all due attention. The sessions of the board will be held at the Southern Hotel and will probably continue for three days.

THE READERS' CORNER.

The White Fly.

ED. REVIEW:—I have been much interested in the recent articles on the white fly, which is indeed a tough proposition. He "holds the fort" and laughs at our efforts to dislodge him. He thrives on smoke and as for shower baths of whale oil soap, kerosene or nicotine, they are all the same to him. Let us do justice to the aphid, mealy bug and red spider; they "take their medicine" and die like true Americans. Not so the white fly. We may make our decoctions ever so deadly and with steady aim and murderous intent discharge them at his innumerable army. And what happens? He ducks, dodges and on triumphant wing disports himself at a safe altitude until the exercises are over. Then he at once returns to business at the old stand.

I am indebted to the white fly; he has given me something to think of. It was a case of conquer or be conquered, and I was about resigned to surrender when I found his one vulnerable point. I grow only plants for spring sales, so a very moderate temperature suits my purpose. A temperature below 50 degrees discourages the white fly and makes him sulky and not disposed to aerial flights.

Take due notice, therefore, and govern yourself accordingly. Attack him with your favorite "hell broth" early on a cold morning and victory will be yours. I simply used a fine syringe and water at a temperature of 120 degrees and cleaned out the entire swarm except a few stragglers. When I think of the myriads that threatened to overwhelm me, and now of my clean plants, I know something of the joys of victory.

That Perpendicular Drop.

In your issue of January 28 Mr. Scott's answer to Mr. Wallace, on the heating question, interested me very much, particularly where he says: "I must admit that Mr. Wallace is correct in stating that according to the laws of hydrostatics it makes no difference whether the drop in the return pipe is six feet in 100 feet or a perpendicular drop of six feet. The pressure where the return water enters the boiler would be the same. Yet in practice the perpendicular drop has been proved to be the better method." Mr. Wallace and Mr. Scott have evidently both overlooked the fact that they are dealing with water of varying temperature, and therefore varying density.

In Avery's Elements of Natural Philosophy you will find: "The pressure on the bottom of a vessel containing a liquid is independent of the quantity of the liquid or the shape of the vessel, but depends upon the depth and density of the fluid and the area of the bottom." Now when there is a vertical drop in the return near the boiler and the pipes in the houses are nearly level, the vertical height of the water is almost entirely made up of the portion of the liquid which is the coolest and therefore of the greatest density and does exert a greater pressure at the boiler than if it descended gradually, and the average temperature throughout the vertical height were greater.

Again, the vertical rise in the flow near the boiler, where the water is least dense, exerts the least pressure possible in the system. As this arrangement tends to increase the pressure in the return and decrease that of the flow and the circulation is directly dependent on the difference, it can readily be seen that there is a very good reason for this method of piping, where it can be had, having been "proved to be the better method."

If Mr. Wallace's contention that the vertical height from one end of the system to the other was the only thing that gave pressure, and if the temperature did not have to be taken into account at the particular place where the water took its rise, the pressure in both flow and return, having the same vertical height, would be the same; the system would balance and there would be very little chance of circulation.

A TOUR OF INSPECTION.

Two well known growers for the St. Louis market, A. Jablonsky, of Wellston, and J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, the latter accompanied by his foreman, Henry Blixen, recently made a trip to Chicago and other cut flower growing points. Mr. Ammann told the St. Louis Florists' Club what they saw at its meeting February 11. Here are some of the things he said:

On arrival at Chicago our first call was on A. Dietsch, the short-roof material man. There we were taken through the mill and shown how the material for these successful houses is manufactured. Thence we journeyed to Peter Reinberg's wonderful establishment. We were a little late but still in time to see the Sunrise in all its glory. After getting lost in these immense greenhouses a few times, we finally met the genial foreman, Mr. Collins. He took us around and introduced us to his honor, Uncle John, and Madam Chatenay. Both were in fine form and regardless of the inclemency of the weather (I hate to speak of it, for it makes me shudder) were in full dress ready for any reception. Uncle John, the bolder of the two, although the younger, impressed us very much and we predict a great future for this rose and will add that if it fills a place in floriculture as has its namesake, we say, well done.

Next we went to the Budlong greenhouses and found an immense lot of stock, both roses and carnations looking well. Then we went to what they call in Chicago a small place, that of Weber Brothers. This, gentlemen, was a sight. It was almost dusk on arrival there, but those Brides and Maids caused our eyes to open so large we could have seen even were it pitch dark. Four-year-old plants, and to see these two grand old stand-bys done that way one forgets ever wanting anything else. Simply wonderful! Here we also saw the finest house of Lilium longiflorum either of us had ever seen. These men certainly know their business.

The next morning we were out bright and early, ready for another day's journey. We made a short call at a few wholesale houses and took the train for La Fayette, Ind., where we called at F. Dorner & Sons' store. There we met the genial son-in-law and his estimable wife, who has charge of the store. They at once ordered a carriage and had us taken to the greenhouses. I suppose they could tell by our looks where we wanted to go. There we met the old carnation veteran, F. Dorner, Sr., and his sons, and the old gentleman himself took us in charge. We were first shown the many thousands of cuttings in the sand, all as clean as could be. Next we were introduced to Lady Bountiful and The Belle. Now there are a pair of beauties, the Lady Bountiful with her dress of luxurious foliage, stiff stem and beautifully fringed flowers and the Belle, so graceful and a flower as white as white can be. They certainly impressed us as being a pair well worthy of their names and all that has been said of them. Next we were taken to a house of seedlings, and such a sight we never could even imagine. It was here Mr. Dorner realized he had too much of a job to watch all of us, so he delegated his son, a fine young man, to keep an eagle eye on Mr. Jablonsky. He being from Missouri was, of course, considered the most desperate and had the old gentleman known what I did, namely that Jablonsky was a grower of seedlings himself, I am satisfied he would have barred him altogether. Mr. Blixen and I being rose growers (I am not afraid to say that in St. Louis) were not watched so closely. This place is indeed a wonder in carnationdom and the hospitality shown there is unbounded.

We arrived at Indianapolis late in the evening and after getting lost a few times finally found a hotel. After supper Mr. Jablonsky, seeing everything looked so different from Missouri, suggested a stroll around, but we had not gone very far before we missed our friend. On retracing our steps for several blocks, we found him taking notes of a well grown cyclamen plant in a store window. Next morning, bright and early, we were on our way to Baur & Smith's. Here Mr. Baur took us in charge and introduced us first to Indianapolis. The city itself is noted for its cleanliness, but it's simply not in it with the carnation that bears its name. It is certainly a clean grower, a good producer and we believe has all the qualifications claimed for it. We were next shown the cuttings in the sand, all in fine, healthy condition. Next we went to the seedling house. Here I made it my especial business to watch Mr. Jablonsky, while he watched the seedlings, and as soon as I discovered that he was getting nervous I suggested it was train time and with a vote of thanks to Mr. Baur we departed for New Castle to see roses.

Our first stop was at Heller Brothers', of the South Park Floral Co., and right here is where Jablonsky got the laugh on us, for the looks of their roses I must admit did not exactly agree with me. But I felt much relieved on looking around at my foreman, Mr. Blixen. You ought to have seen him. I was afraid Mr. Heller would notice it and at once suggested that the smell of natural gas did not seem to agree with him, as he had never been near any before. When I say that all the stock here is as good as usual, I think it is enough said. We stopped at the Benthey greenhouses just long enough to inspect one of the best equipped heating plants either of us had ever seen. A peep at the stock showed it looking very well, and now for home.

LONDON AUCTIONS.

A. Hemsley writes that on January 20 there was a very large consignment of Japanese lilies at the auction rooms. There have been several sales previously, but they continue to attract large numbers of buyers. Among the buyers on the above date were several from long distances. Some of the bulbs offered were the largest I and others have seen. In the catalogue they were aptly described as "mammoth bulbs." No exceptionally high prices were made, unless it was for L. speciosum album; for bulbs of this there was lively competition, the largest being particularly in demand. In all other varieties it was the largest bulbs that attracted most attention. The medium-sized bulbs were bought in large quantities by market growers. Judging from these sales, it would appear that though the trade may be dull just now, growers anticipate a better time later on. American Pearl tuberoses were sold in large quantities. In all there were upwards of 200,000 sold. These fetched about 26s. per 1,000. Palm seeds sold well, especially Cocos Weddeliana and Kentia Belmoreana, but Kentia Forsteriana did not make quite such high prices, although the samples were very good. Lily of the valley Fortin's Giant sold well at about double the prices made by the ordinary Berlin crowns.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

DETROIT.

Carnation Convention.

The time is fast approaching when the meeting of the American Carnation Society in Detroit will be a thing of the past and the anxiety of the members of the club to make it a success will have been either realized or attended by failure. But we have every reason to believe, from the thought and hard work given the matter, both as to staging the stock and the entertainment, that success will crown our efforts, provided we are given the support of the members of the society in attendance and discussion of papers and matters of interest to the society.

An invitation will be extended by John Breitmeyer's Sons, through Philip Breitmeyer, president of the S. A. F., to visit their plant at Mt. Clemens on Friday morning to see the new rose, La Detroit, and it is hoped that everyone interested in roses will accept. Special cars will carry the party and I will say that the special brand of rose juice kept in the Breitmeyer cellars at Mt. Clemens is of the purest, for they make it themselves.

Through some oversight the name of the donor of the prize in the sweepstakes class was omitted from the premium lists. This should have read "given by Michigan Cut Flower Exchange." If this omission was caused by the president he humbly apologizes to the donor.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

This has been a week like old times. Business was steadily on the increase, until last Saturday proved to be the best day of the year to date. Local demand has again shown some signs of life and shipping trade is fine. The feature of the situation is the shortage in the rose crops. Beauties are hard to get in any good grade and tea roses are not equal to the demand by quite a little. Some of the country buyers have protested at what they called "Christmas prices" when charged 10 and 12 cents for Brides and Maids, but that has been the market rate for the select stock. Qualities in the rose department are unusually good but the unfavorable weather we have had keeps the plants standing still.

Carnations are also of very good quality and in large supply, but the daily receipts are being cleaned up in good style and at fair prices. Valley has come to be a good item; it has been going slowly for a long time. Violets had a couple of good days, Saturday and Sunday, for St. Valentine's. While large quantities were sold it was not possible to advance the price to any considerable degree. Callas and Harrisii are doing well and in fact all bulbous stock is faring better than it has.

Ferns seem to be running short and the price has been advanced to $3.50 per thousand.

Various Notes.

There was considerable disappointment because Lincoln's birthday last Friday had been overlooked in the matter of its effect on the mails. There is only one delivery on a holiday and a good many orders which had not reached the Chicago postoffice by 8:30 a. m. were not delivered until the next morning. And it is not even possible to get the letters by going to the postoffice after them, so bear this in mind for Washington's birthday, next Monday, February 22.

The Florists' Club had the last of its outside meetings on the south side last Saturday night. Supper was had at a cafe and adjournment taken to a hall across the street, where W. F. Burns dissertated humorously and patriotically, a gentleman named Woodruff talked "business" and some colored gentlemen whom George Asmus brought along demonstrated that they were all right. There was a large attendance and everybody had a good time.

The George Wittbold Co. reports no trouble with shipments of plants even in the worst weather of this most severe winter. They shipped specimen plants worth $250 to Smith & Feters, Cleveland, the other day and they arrived all right. Their own heated wagon takes the stock to the depot and a letter is sent the day before to the express agent at destination notifying him that the shipment is coming and directing that if the weather is freezing the box be not delivered but set in a warm room and the consignee notified.

Bassett & Washburn are grafting 100,000 rose plants, probably more than were ever grafted by any rose forcers in the country. Just now the cut they are getting shows the value of grafted stock. Mr. Washburn says that their order is now for delivery to them of ninety tons of coal a day.

J. A. Budlong has decided to go ahead with four new houses 27x300, which will cover up all his real estate.

The main party to the carnation convention will leave on the Wabash at 3 p. m., March 1 and another party, including several with exhibits, will be on the 11 o'clock train. Everyone passing through Chicago is invited to join the local delegation.

The secretary of state has licensed the incorporation of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co., capital stock $10,000, objects, a general florists' business, incorporators, Louis Coatsworth, Frank F. Benthey and Philetus Smith.

It is stated in political circles that Peter Reinberg is likely to receive the democratic aldermanic nomination in the Twenty-sixth ward.

On the morning of February 12 fire did $400 damage to the greenhouse of Herman Krause, 7801 Jeffery avenue. The fire started from a defective flue in the boiler shed.

Cattleyas have become very scarce. C. W. McKellar reports a nice business on orchids.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is getting fine valley from Klehm's. G. E. Pieser, of this house, spent last week in Iowa.

Sam Pearce is sending in fine Murillo tulips and other growers are also cutting this variety good for so early.

A. Dietsch left Tuesday evening for Mobile and will go thence to southern Florida to spend two or three months.

T. J. Corbrey is starting a seed farm at Long Beach, Cal.

The prospects are for a very good delegation to the Detroit carnation meeting. Every day brings additions to the list of those who will attend. A bowling contest between teams representing the principal cities will be an additional attraction to several.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The social season closed with plenty of business for everybody. The supply of flowers was hardly equal to the demand. Roses and carnations were very scarce, despite good shipments from some of the growers. St. Valentine's day created a large demand for violets, also for pansies and myosotis. The only drag on the market was bulbous flowers. La Reine tulips were sold to replace white carnations and white roses, but colored tulips went rather slowly and daffodils dragged badly. Great quantities of smilax have been used lately. White lilac and Harrisii lilies seemed more plentiful and were in demand. The Beauty growers with one or two exceptions appear to be off crop. Brides and Maids are better than at any time this season.

Leo Niessen is receiving white poet-icus.

C. A. Dunn.

The sad death of Clarence A. Dunn, briefly noted in the REVIEW last week, came with startling suddenness to his many friends. He was absent from business but a few days and was supposed to be suffering from a mild attack of grippe. Many have been the expressions of deep sorrow among our florists at the loss of their comrade and of heartfelt sympathy for his family. The funeral last Sunday afternoon was attended by many friends. The wholesalers almost to a man sent floral tributes, as did a number of others. Mr. Dunn was 43 years of age. He had been in the florist business for over twenty-five years. It is said that he began as a grower in Norristown, coming from there to Robert Craig, at Forty-eighth and Market streets. Later he had a store in West Philadelphia and then entered the employ of La Roche & Stahl, at Thirteenth and Chestnut streets. When that firm failed he became right hand man to Leo Niessen. Later he occupied the same position at Dumont & Co.'s, where he afterward became a partner. On September 1 he started the commission house that bears his name. He leaves a widow and four children.

Logan.

This well-known place on the old York road has been famous for years for its fine stock of decorative and flowering plants. A flying trip was made there this week for the special purpose of seeing the carnations. The owner, Mr. Graham, was at his place of business in the city, but the foreman, Mr. Groshans, showed us the stock under his care. The feature of that part of the place devoted to carnations was a house of Mrs. Lawson with plants full of flowers, many of them measuring four inches across. It was a fine sight, made more striking from the fact that the rule was handled by the husband, if names go for anything, of the lady whose name the flower bears. There was a very fine house of white varieties, Gov. Lowndes, Glacier, Gov. Wolcott and Lillian Pond, all full of good flowers. There was another house with interesting seedlings, one resembling Mrs. Lawson with rather longer stems, but smaller flowers. Another was a dazzling scarlet. A house of Liberty roses was in good shape, also one of Beauties. There was a splendid lot of decorative and flowering plants that give promise of good results.

"At the Sign of the Rose."

A visit was paid to that unique shop a few days ago for the purpose of seeing some Bridesmaids, said to be the finest coming into the city at present. They were sent by A. J. Pennock, the valley specialist, to his brother S. S. Pennock and had been selected that morning as the cream of a shipment of 500. The flowers were magnificent, their beauty enhanced by the white lilac with which C. H. Fox had tastefully arranged them.

Notes.

The business of C. A. Dunn & Co. will be continued by Charles F. Edgar, who has helped develop it from the start and is thoroughly acquainted with every detail.

Edwin A. Seidewitz and William Fraser, of the Baltimore Exchange, were in this city lately.

James Verner is shipping some very fine Brides and Maids to Leo Niessen, whose stock of these roses is remarkable. In Andre, Bevis, Campbell and Verner he has a quartette of tea rose growers hard to equal.

Edward Reid is handling the fine valley from W. P. Stokes mentioned last week.

The Flower Market's Beauties, lilacs and violets have been highly praised by the critics.

Answers to Correspondents.

REVIEW readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

Question No. 6:—What are the best varieties of white dahlia for fall blooming? Without doubt Storm King and John Walker. They are both equally good. Storm King should not be planted early if for fall blooming and on the other hand John Walker requires earlier planting. Storm King responds to high cultivation with immense quantities of finest flowers. John Walker, being a late bloomer and developing to perfection during the late, cool weather, we can get the very best from it with little attention after Storm King is over.

PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market has been as steady as we anticipated during the past week and the average prices of the past ten days have been maintained. It remains for Wednesday to demonstrate the influence of Lent and the reduction in festivities among the 400. Little change of importance has marked the advent of the sackcloth in ashes period of late years and this will hardly be an exception to the new rule. We look for a fairly good market until Easter. If any decided slump occurs it will be in violets. Even last week fine boxes of specials went down the line appealing in vain for recognition at over 60 cents per 100. Many of the wholesalers who handle hundreds of thousands weekly anticipate 50 cents as high mark from now on, so enormous is the crop and so overwhelming are likely to be the shipments, judging by other years.

Roses seem to hold steady and occasionally add a little to the regular price. Beauties of the best grade even touch 60 cents. Brides and Maids remain as quoted a week ago. Liberty is abundant and a goodly supply of Sunrise and Golden Gate is seen in the retail windows. The carnation supply is sufficient for all demands and the quality superb. Some grand Prosperity and Enchantress command 10 cents. The ordinary grades are lower and abundant. Cattleyas have advanced to 50 and 60 cents again. Lily of the valley has to be of extra grade to bring $2 per 100 and in large quantities has sold as low as $10 per 1000. Good lilies still hold at 10 to 12 cents and bulbous stock increases in quantity daily.

St. Valentine's day fell on Sunday and fell flat, too, so far as helpfulness to the flower market goes, for the influence of the Saint was more than discounted by the immense shipments of violets, in anticipation of an increased demand which did not materialize.

Various Items.

Langjahr is handling some special valley and violets and is confident he has made no mistake in making New York his headquarters.

Saltford shows with pride some large shipments daily of grand Lawsons from V. H. Pilat, of Ossining, N. Y.

The Stumpp & Walter Co. is making extensive improvements in its store on Barclay street, including a new front with an abundance of mirrors, making it very attractive and up-to-date. Geo. H. Goldner, formerly with Reed & Keller, is now traveling for this firm.

J. G. Leikens and wife have returned from an anniversary trip to Montreal and other Canadian cities.

The white palace is now completed and Mr. Siebrecht has the credit of having brought into being the most beautiful flower store in the world.

Wednesday evening last the American Institute inaugurated its new departure, holding its monthly meetings in the evening. The change promises well. The attendance was far in excess of the afternoon average, over fifty being present. Splendid specimens of many of the best varieties of orchids were displayed by Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J. C. W. Schneider, of Irvington, read a paper on leaf mold for orchids, which was discussed by Messrs. Siebrecht and Lager. Secretary Barron read a very interesting essay by E. O. Orpet, of Lancaster, Mass., on cool orchids, which was followed by a stereopticon exhibition of colored slides from the collection of Mrs. Van Brunt. Many ladies were in attendance.

J. W. Ludwig, of Pittsburg, was in the city last week, as well as Harry May, of Summit, and L. Small, of Tewksbury. Mr. May reports his father still very ill and unable to leave his room.

Chas. Dards, the retail florist, has departed for an outing in the sunny south.

William J. Elliott has about decided to cut out his Bermuda trip. The auctions begin in less than a month and the bowling contests, annual dinners and rapidly increasing spring business makes absence undesirable.

Patrick Welch was so delighted with the carnation night at the club that he prolonged his stay in the city among his brother wholesalers for several days.

At the rose night of the New York Florists' Club, March 14, Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., will read a paper and all the prominent rose growers of the east have already signified their intention of exhibiting and many from the west are expected.

The club dinner on Saturday evening promises well. Mr. Sheridan announces that a good attendance is already assured and orders for tickets are coming in daily, many of them from the neighboring cities. It is expected that nearly 100 will attend. President Traendly will be toastmaster.

The Millang brothers, Charles, Frank, Joe and Gus, on Sunday celebrated the seventieth birthday of their mother, at her residence in Bayside. The old lady is hale and hearty and greatly enjoyed the family reunion and the gifts with which the boys were laden. On February 15, eighteen years ago, Frank Millang, Sr., died, the father of this harmonious quartette, himself a florist of many years' experience and the son of a Belgian florist. The Millang boys enjoy the good will of everybody in the trade and are themselves good examples of harmony and unselfishness, of whom their honored mother is justly proud.

The prize bowling contest on Monday evening was a thriller and proved a most successful departure from the beaten track. So much so that monthly prize contests have been decided upon. The second game of the evening was chosen as the test of nerve and skill and resulted as follows:

Gibbs	191	Silver cigar cutter.
Haffner	168	Box cigars.
Siebrecht	156	Homemade wienerworsts.
Guttman	125	Pair of vases.
Mansfield	120	Six silk neckties.
Shaw	116	Handsome stein.
Bennett	111	Fancy cane.
Butterfield	106	Bottle champagne.
Nugent	92	Bottle Wilson Whiskey.
Traendly	89	Bottle Nerveine.
Lenker	73	Bottle brandy.

By a strange coincidence the bowlers whose scores show the need of stimulants chose them. An excellent dinner followed the evening's sport and many visitors arrived before the games were over. The best scores for the evening follow, not including the prize contest:

Guttman	113	139
Traendly	132	108
Gibbs	116	118	152	...
Smith	147	135	146	...
Young	117	192	116	...
Mansfield	138	167	142	173
Sampson	122	122	91	130
Nugent	69	90	108	141
Haffner	134	171	114	...
Bennett	162	106	137	123
Lenker	43	67	66	97
Siebrecht	148	151	138	133
Butterfield	147	158	137	121
Shaw	147	151	138	133

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The condition of the cut flower market is not very satisfactory to the retail trade at the present time. Prices seem to go up and down every other day. The same can be said of stock; one day there is plenty and the next hardly enough to fill orders. The demand was very brisk the latter part of the week. There was an extra call for St. Valentine's day, which seems to have come to be one of the florists' busy days, as most of the retailers were busy sending out boxes of cut flowers for valentines. The greatest call was for violets and the wholesale men slipped up the price to 75 cents and $1 per 100. It is claimed that some 40,000 violets were disposed of on last Saturday and about as many more on Sunday. All of these were California, of the finest quality, as double violets have very little call in this market. Roses, which it was thought a week ago would be more plentiful, are again very scarce and a great many orders could not be filled on Saturday. Brides are selling at from $6 to $12 per 100 and Maids from $5 to $10 per 100. Liberty and Meteor run from $4 to $10 per 100. Good Beauties seem out of the question in this market, with shorts and medium grades only in limited quantity.

Carnations are quite plentiful, with a good demand for the best stock. The past week our wholesalers sent out some very fancy stock of White Cloud, Lawson, Prosperity, Enchantress, Triumph and Estelle. Prices on these ranged from $3 to $5 per 100, a few common sorts going at $2. Any white sells well. Smilax, asparagus, adiantum and bronze galax are in good demand, with no advance in price.

The wholesale houses are still well stocked up with bulb stuff. Roman hyacinths, Paper Whites and lily of the valley are in abundance. Tulips seem to sell well of late. Harrisii are still limited as to quantity. Callas are more plentiful. Freesias are a drug. Dutch hyacinths are not over-plentiful and sell well. As to prices they remain as last reported.

Club Meeting.

On last Thursday afternoon the Florists' Club held the best attended and most interesting meeting in its history, it being our annual carnation meeting. The exhibits of carnation blooms were large and fine. From the outside came a large vase from R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, of the Cardinal, a beautiful red. Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, sent a magnificent bunch of Indianapolis. Dornier & Sons Co., of La Fayette, sent the Belle and Lady Bountiful. The Chicago Carnation Company, of Joliet, staged the grand Crusader, Fiancee, Harlowarden and Dorothy Whitney. The Thompson Company also showed several varieties. All of the above made a beautiful display and all were staged in the east end of the hall. The local exhibits were staged in the west end. J. F. Ammann showed a vase of White Cloud and Queen Louise; F. W. Ude, Enchantress and Prosperity; John Steidle, Harlowarden and Enchantress; St. Louis Carnation Company, White Cloud; A. Jablonsky, Peru, and Frank Fillmore a vase of well grown mixed varieties. Visitors at the meeting were James Hartshorne and J. D. Thompson, of Joliet; George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, and Martin Reukauf, of Philadelphia.

The meeting opened at 2 o'clock and the attendance reached forty by 3 p. m. Three new members were elected, Mr. Rotenhoefer, Hugo Gross and John Steinecke. These gentlemen are requested to attend the next meeting of the club. F. W. Maas, of the St. Louis Seed Co., made application for membership. James Gurney, of Tower Grove Park, was made an honorary member of the club.

The judges appointed by the president on the local exhibits were J. D. Thompson, F. C. Weber and Theo. Miller; on out-of-town exhibits, John Steidle, Wm. Winter and A. Jablonsky. On home grown stock results were as follows: John Steidle, first; F. W. Ude, Jr., second, and A. Jablonsky, third. The report on exhibition stock was as follows: The Cardinal, very fine red, large flowers with long stiff stems; The Belle and Lady Bountiful, very fine, large flowers, very good white; Indianapolis, best pink yet seen; Chicago Carnation Co., Fiancee and Crusader attracted a great deal of attention and were voted the best of their kind; Harlowarden and Dorothy Whitney also came in for their share of praise from the judges. The Thompson exhibits came in for their share of comment, being fine blooms.

Frank Fillmore's essay on "Carnation Growing" was very interesting and the essayist was frequently applauded during the reading. E. W. Guy next led a discussion on propagating carnations. Mr. Guy showed from a plant how they used to make cuttings years ago and how they are made at the present time. This brought out a long discussion between Messrs. Hartshorne and Thompson, of Joliet, and Messrs. Dunford, Fillmore and Guy, of St. Louis. This really was one of the features of the meeting. J. F. Ammann next gave a very interesting reading of his trip through Indiana and Chicago, in which he paid a high compliment to all those they visited and told of the fun he had at the expense of his friend Jablonsky. The next meeting of the club will be held March 3, at 2 o'clock. At this meeting J. H. Hadkinson will read an essay on "Landscape Gardening at the World's Fair," and Henry Emmons will lead a discussion on propagating geraniums.

The entertainment and ball which will be given by the Florists' Club will take place Friday night, February 19. This promises to be one of the finest affairs ever given by the club. The hall will be handsomely decorated with plants and wild smilax. A fine band of music has been engaged for the occasion. The entertainment will be furnished by local talent from the club members. Ice cream, coffee and cake will be served. The committee reports that a large number of tickets have already been disposed of.

Committee Meeting.

The arrangement committee met at Weber's store last Friday night and completed the arrangements for the entertainment of the executive committee, which meets here March 5. The banquet will be held at the Missouri Athletic Club on Saturday night, March 5. On Sunday a trolley ride to the World's Fair grounds to be entertained by Messrs. Taylor and Hadkinson, of the horticultural department. Monday will be spent in the selection of the meeting and exhibition hall and a general call on the trade and perhaps a bowling game before train time.

The World's Fair flower show committee met the same night and made out its lists and the dates on which certain cut flowers and plants will be exhibited. It was also decided that the club would hold its annual flower show in November in the Horticultural building, with the usual prizes, including the Shaw premiums. The prizes will be large and will no doubt attract all of the largest growers in the country.

Various Notes.

We have been favored with a great many visitors the past week. Among them were R. W. Greenlaw, representing N. F. McCarthy, of Boston; B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia; H. P. Hagenholz, of K. J. Kuyk & Co., Holland; James Hartshorne and J. D. Thompson, of Joliet, Ill.; Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill; J. F. Ammann and Henry Blixen, of Edwardsville; Henry Emmons, E. W. Guy and Dr. Halstedt, of Belleville; J. W. Dunford and John Steidle, of Clayton; F. W. Ude, Jr., W. J. Pilcher and Wm. Winter, of Kirkwood, and A. Jablonsky, of Wellston.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Juengel celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage on Tuesday, February 16. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion and many of their friends sent beautiful presents. The members of the club are with me in congratulating the happy couple.

Henry Ostertag reports a new arrival, a girl, and all are happy and well.

Bowling.

RANDOM NOTES.

I notice in your issue of February 4, John H. Dunlop, of Toronto, speaks highly of Carnation Glacier. He has grown it ever since it was first sent out and is well qualified to pass on it. Horn & Bro., Allentown, Pa., tell me it is their best white. They grow several other whites, but none is so satisfactory with them. Gov. Bliss is their favorite scarlet. Alpine Glow is an excellent substitute for Morning Glory. These two were selected by them at C. W. Ward's, where they were seen in splendid shape. Messrs. Horn have faith in Adonis and will give it a good show next season. Lawson, here as elsewhere, is the standard pink. The extent of this place is 42,000 square feet of glass, well built houses, fine stock, supplies two stores. Enchantress will be given a trial. I saw a grand lot of this beautiful variety at H. W. Fields, Northampton, Mass. His whole plant was devoted to the newer kinds. Harry Sinclair, the able grower, is of the opinion that the absence of sunlight seemed to affect many of the older kinds, more so than the newer.

Your esteemed correspondent, George S. Osborn, of Hartford, Conn., was slowly recovering from a serious illness at the time of my visit. His busy life partner was doing her best to stimulate the plants into bloom and I question, had the boss been around, if he could do much better with weather conditions such as we have been experiencing of late. John Coombs says he never saw anything like it, but rubbed his hands with satisfaction as he looked over the sea of buds bearing promise of a tremendous crop soon.

Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass.,

says this has been a banner plant season. Frank Burfitt, his grower, is a past master in the art. A. N. Pierson ships much of his choicest cut stock to Aitken.

It was McKinley day during my visit to Wilkesbarre, where Ira G. Marvin was handing out his fine stock as fast as it could be sent in from his big plant at Plymouth.

George R. Clark, Scranton, Pa., was too busy to talk, but insisted on my wearing a bloom rubbered with one of Michell's bands. An excellent thing in its way, but I tumbled onto an invisible wire at a big plant the other day which beats all for originality and usefulness.

Jno. B. Tully, of Binghamton, N. Y., is sick. This winter of hard firing has knocked out many of our old friends who do their own firing. Mrs. Barnes has been indisposed for sometime. Her right hand man, H. Wilbur, looks after the stock most cleverly.

At Elmira I learned quite a little regarding the new plant which has created so much interest through this section. H. N. Hoffman is in close touch with it. His stock is looking in splendid shape; sun evidently been shining since my last visit. G. P. Rawson is giving his attention to the store end of his big concern since Mr. Durand has embarked in business, expecting to handle locally the cut from the new company.

A. H. Woepfel, of Corning, got his new plant running before cold weather set in and says he has had a fine season, stock doing better than in the old place. He has an industrious family who contribute to and share in his successes.

W. A. Wettlin, of Hornellsville, has been under the weather for some time. Business has been good, stock scarce and high.

Alfred Patrick, of Auburn, is delighted with the rose, Ivory, which he can grow as large as Beauty. He intends growing La Detroit.

Will Cass, of Geneva, N. Y., has been re-elected alderman for the tenth term, showing the esteem in which he is held by his fellow citizens.

Fred Goldring, of Slingerlands, N. Y., says roses grew and sold better this season than for years past. The bulk of his glass is devoted to the queen of flowers. Violets failed with him, just at the right time, when prices did not pay to raise them.

G. L. Graham, of Bradford, Pa., has a sport of Lawson variegated. It promises to be a rival to Bradt. The new greenhouse plant is in running order.

DENVER, COLO.

Bowling in the West.

The florists, like many other professional men, need a little recreation once in a while, but out here in this western country there are not many pastimes that have any attraction for the posey man. At this time of the year bowling seems to take the fancy of quite a number of the fraternity and it is indulged in to a considerable extent and is looked upon as a legitimate sport rather than a fad for the fashionable. Among the florists there are a few who are entitled to special note. First is N. A. Benson, our carnationist, who now stands near the top of the city league of bowlers. In his two last contests, of five games each, he rolled a total of 2,018 pins, which is an average of over 200 per game. This contest is for the World's Fair prize, which is a free trip and all expenses to the World's Fair at St. Louis this summer. If Ben gets there the top notchers of last year at Milwaukee will find it a hard matter to retain their honors. Phil Scott and Albert Mauff are two others who are bowling with the City League and are holding their own in fast company, especially Scott, who now has an average of 182 in thirty-six games. In the amateur class, which comprises the old timers, such as Berry, Glauber and Kurth, and a lot of young aspirants, the scores are also significant because of their diminutive character, and the chances for strengthening the convention team is not very encouraging just now, although strenuous efforts are being made by this division of the bowling fraternity. Up to the first of January of this year the following scores were made by the most frequent attendants:

Player—	Games.	Total.	Average.
Chas. Benson	31	4994	155
John Berry	31	4562	147
Geo. Brinkert	24	3311	137
Frank Davis	23	2586	112
Frank Fraser	30	3777	125
Emil Glauber	22	3254	147
Robert Kurth	28	4017	143
R. S. Mahan	27	3348	124
Chas. Mauff	32	4885	152
Geo. Zimmer	17	2559	138

J. A. Valentine has presented a valuable trophy to be contested for by the members. It is known as the Park Floral Company trophy and is made in the style of eight gold bars of smooth surface for engraving and linked together. The eight pieces represent the eight months of the contest and thereon is engraved the name of the successful individual each month. Frank Fraser is having the honor of wearing the prize during the month of February, his increase being 12 per cent over his record. R. S. Mahan is the other contestant who made any material gain, but is only one-half that of Fraser's. This premium has created an incentive to become proficient in this manly sport.

On February 6 the Colorado Springs boys paid us a visit and gave us a chance to return compliments but, as the dose was small and not bitter, they took their medicine with very good grace. Following are the scores of those who participated on both days:

GREAT DIVIDE.

FREMONT, NEB.—C. H. Green has been elected a director of the Nebraska State Horticultural Society.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

We have had no time to go salmon fishing in the Columbia river since reporting on the Christmas trade. January sales showed a most substantial increase over the same month a year ago. Portland has recently been honored with several large gatherings of noted men, the most important from the florists' standpoint being the stockmen's convention, for which some very elaborate decorations were made. Honors were evenly divided, as we were all given an opportunity to display our skill in the spacious banquet hall.

The excessive demand for funeral work is more than one ordinarily expects in midwinter and everything home grown, as well as daily shipments from California, is quickly disposed of. The California growers are shipping in consignments of ten-inch stem violets and carnations which retail at $1.50 and $2 per dozen.

We regret to say that we could not follow the custom of the eastern cities in observing McKinley day, although it was our intention to do so, but we simply could not get the necessary flowers.

A Visitor.

Gradually the traveling salesmen are reaching into the northwest. The latest arrival was John R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown-on-Hudson. This makes his third trip to the coast. It was noticeable that John was more sedate than while here a year ago, as nothing could induce him to take in a Scotch high ball or a variety show. He had to confess to a course lecture from Mrs. F. on his departure from home.

H. J. M.

EAST STROUDSBURG, PA.—Oscar Stemple, formerly a florist, died February 8 and the death notices chronicle the fact that he requested that no flowers be used at his funeral.

COBLESKILL, N. Y.—The boiler shed at the greenhouses of Alfred Goldring was discovered to be on fire February 4. It was a stubborn fight, but the fire department extinguished the blaze with but little loss.

THE MARKETS.

Chicago, Feb. 17.—Radishes, doz., 20 to 40 cents; lettuce, leaf, 25 cents case; heads, $1 to $4.25 bbl.; cucumbers, 50 cents to $1.25 doz.

New York, Feb. 16.—Cucumbers, 25 cents to $1.25 doz.; lettuce, 20 to 50 cents doz.; mushrooms, 10 to 40 cents pound; radishes, $1.50 to $3 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10 to 20 cents pound; asparagus, $3 to $6 doz. bunches; rhubarb, 30 to 60 cents doz.

CAULIFLOWER.

Successional sowings and plantings may still be made in the greenhouse or, if the space is wanted for other things, plantings may be made in cold frames from this time on. Cauliflower likes a good rich soil and no kind of manure suits it better than that from the barnyard, only this should not be used in too fresh a state. Cauliflower is a deep rooter, so the soil in the frames should be well dug up and the manure thoroughly incorporated. As I recommended for lettuce in a former article, prepare the soil a few days previous and bare the sash to the sun in the day time and cover up at night to get the soil as warm as possible before planting; also have the plants gradually hardened off, so they will not receive a check.

For crops nearing maturity indoors a little nitrate of soda given at intervals of three or four days will be of great assistance to swell the heads. In large houses it may be most expedient to mix this in quantity, allowing about one ounce to two gallons of water, but where a small quantity only is wanted it may be more convenient to mix it as it is used, simply adding about a teaspoonful to a ten-quart can of water. The nitrate being easily soluble, all that is necessary is to stir the water a little when adding it and it will be almost immediately dissolved. It is better to apply this and kindred manures when the soil is not too dry or, if the soil is dry, give a watering of clear water first and apply the fertilizer after the water has drained off. The operator should be careful not to wet the foliage with the liquid or burning may result. W. S. CROYDON.

PIPING VEGETABLE HOUSES.

We have two houses 25x85 feet, with no partition wall, and another house 21x75. They run north and south, one ten feet to ridge, and have four-foot side walls with side ventilators every four feet all around the outside. The two larger houses have solid beds, the smaller house raised benches. The boiler shed runs along the north end and a twenty-five horse-power boiler sits in a pit four feet deep. How shall we arrange the piping to get the condensed steam back to the boiler without a steam trap? The houses are used for lettuce and cucumbers and 50 degrees at night is required when it is below zero outside. A 2-inch flow and 1½-inch returns are to be used. C. W.

The condensed steam may easily be returned to the boiler from each of the 25x85 houses by arranging the piping over the benches so as to bring the lowest point in the radiating system at least twenty inches above the water line in the boiler. The height of the water line will, I judge, be about five feet above the bottom of the ash pit, or one foot above the floor of the greenhouses. By placing the radiating pipes eighteen to twenty inches above the benches the condensation will return to the boiler on the gravity system. There should be a 2-inch riser running from the main supply pipe under the ridge to the south end of each house, where it should divide and return in 1¼-inch pipes over the benches. The house, 21x95 feet, can be heated by compact coils placed on the outside walls close to the gutters. If there is not room for more than three pipes between the top of the bench and the gutter, one coil can be placed in front of the other, say a three-pipe coil against the wall and a two-pipe coil in front. These can be arranged with valves so that either coil can be used independently, or so both can be used at the same time. By such an arrangement the condensation can be returned to the boiler without traps or vacuum pump. If the boiler is not already set and it is possible to make the boiler pit eighteen inches or two feet deeper it should be done by all means. L. C. C.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.; First Vice-Pres., J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. The 22d annual meeting will be held at St. Louis, Mo., June, 1904.

NEW YORK.—C. P. Braslan and Mrs. Braslan, of San Jose, Cal., are at the Waldorf-Astoria.

T. J. CORBREY has bought a tract of five acres at Long Beach, Cal., and will engage in the business of growing flower seeds.

THE mail order houses generally are hopeful that a break in the weather will make up the January and February shortages of orders.

FIFTEEN seed firms with from one to four representatives each made the canners' convention seem like a minority meeting of the American Seed Trade Association.

THE Griffith & Turner Co., Baltimore, announce that the loss of their Light street store will not interfere with business, as their warehouse was outside the burned district.

THE Missouri Valley Seed Co., St. Joseph, Mo., entertained the Platte County Purchase and the Buchanan County Horticultural Societies at lunch at its warehouse, February 6.

THE developments of the week show an active demand for Valentine beans. The wax sorts are holding stiff at the quotations of last week and in some cases an advance of 50 cents to $1 per bushel has been obtained.

THE weather thus far has been such as to give no idea of what the real demand is to be and many of the items in the seed lists that are thought to be more or less of a drug may be in quite brisk demand before the trade realizes actual conditions.

CANNERS claim that some Evergreen corn was offered at the convention as low as $5 per bushel, but it was not admitted that the offers were for stock of dependable quality.

THE high prices for market onions and the recent sharp stiffening of the onion set market should aid in lifting the depression caused by an oversupply of onion seed, where this condition prevails.

THE question of germinating quality continues to regulate the price of sweet corn. The inquiries for an article that will test up to 85 per cent are more abundant than offerings. Low prices are no inducement where there is any doubt about good vitality.

THE following seed firms were represented at the canners' convention held the past week at Columbus, Ohio: Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Everett B. Clark Co., S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Livingston Seed Co., Vaughan's Seed Store, Goodwin, Harries Co., John H. Allan Seed Co., D. M. Ferry & Co., Harry N. Holmes Seed Co., W. H. Grennel, L. J. Coryell Seed Co., L. L. May & Co., Leonard Seed Co., M. Cushman & Co. and the M. G. Madison Seed Co.

WHEN the agricultural appropriation bill came up for discussion in Congress February 5, Mr. Sheppard, of Texas, made a determined effort to stop the free seed distribution by striking out the sections providing for the expense. Representative Lind stated that of $270,000 expended in the congressional free seed farce, about $100,000 was used for expenses. The packages of seeds cost the government 20 cents each, instead of 5 cents, as was generally supposed. Mr. Sheppard succeeded in having the appropriation stricken from the bill; but the same provisions were immediately added to the bill as amendments. Only three representatives voted against the amendments, showing how eager all are to continue the graft.

VALUE OF SEEDS.

The Treasury Department has issued the following to customs officers, under date of February 9:

Referring to the Department's letter addressed to you under date of July 13, 1901, wherein, owing to the alleged inability of importers of nursery stock, such as seeds and bulbs, to inform themselves as to the foreign market value at time of shipment, and to the perishable nature of the goods and other exceptional circumstances attending such importations, you were authorized to supply importers with data relating to the different foreign market values of such merchandise, without, however, making any suggestions as to the value to be declared on entry, I will state that the Department is in receipt of information to the effect that there seems to be no good reason why importers should not be as familiar with the foreign market value of seeds, plants, and bulbs as importers are with the values of other goods.

It appears that frequently where merchandise of the character in question is raised under contract, the contract price is accepted as the foreign market value; that in a year when there is an abundant crop the contract price may represent the true foreign market value, but that should there be a partial failure in the crop the contract price may not represent such value.

In this connection, it further appears that it has been the practice at one or more ports to average invoice values in order to arrive at the foreign market values of goods of the above description, which practice is disapproved.

In view of the foregoing, it is hereby directed that the practice aforesaid be discontinued.

The Rose Show.

The annual rose show was held last Saturday in the club rooms of the society and, considering how scarce this flower is at the present time, it was a decided success. Among the exhibitors was W. K. Partridge, who made a grand show of roses, also many vases of the newest varieties of carnations, all extra well grown. George & Allan also staged some fine stock. Their roses, especially, were extra and reflect much credit upon this firm. They also showed various kinds of bulbous stock, all nicely forced. The E. G. Hill Co. sent some fine specimens of their roses, a vase of Liberty being the finest I have ever seen of this rose. It was truly magnificent and if their new crimson rose is still better, it will be a world beater.

R. Witterstaetter staged a vase of The Cardinal, better known, perhaps, as improved Estelle. It was in fine shape, and I would advise growers to have their eyes open for it at Detroit. Baur & Smith sent a vase of their Indianapolis. It arrived in good shape and showed up finely. J. W. Rodgers made the only exhibit of violets and showed some nicely grown Princess of Wales and California. I am sorry to report that a vase of La Detroit did not arrive until Sunday morning. It was on exhibition at E. G. Gillett's wholesale house and all who saw it seemed to be very favorably impressed. Some blooms of Crusader and Harlowarden from the Chicago Carnation Co. also arrived late but they were in fine shape.

Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, was the judge, and the awards were as follows: W. K. Partridge, first on Bridesmaid, Bride, Meteor, Golden Gate, Ivory and on best general display; second on Beauty and Liberty. George & Allan, second on Maid, Bride, Meteor and Perle. The E. G. Hill Co., first on Liberty, second on Ivory and third on Bride and Bridesmaid. Mr. Rodgers got the prize for violets.

A meeting of the society was held in the evening. Chas. Murphy was taken in as a new member. James Harts-horne was made an honorary member. Fred H. Lemon was present at the meeting and made an interesting talk concerning the new roses of The E. G. Hill Co.

The Market.

Business is now very good, with stock scarce. Roses and carnations are far below the demand, and first-class prices are ruling. Even bulbous stock is getting scarce and it is impossible to fill all orders. Valentine's day made the de-
